AMERICAN DEFIED POWERS AND WON

Wendell Jackson's Flotation of the $50,000,000 Loan to China a Romance of Finance.

$2,500,000 ALREADY PAID

Foreign Ministers in Peking Protesting, but Mr. Jackson Says China Will Ignore Their Objections.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Sept. 18.—Amid the obscurities and contradictions of the reports about the $50,000,000 loan to China, there can be discerned material for a romance of finance, in which the central figure is that of an American whose name a few days ago was unknown to the world, whose identity even is a mystery, and whose previous history gave no indication that one day he would make a coup which would offset the labors of some of the greatest financial interests of Europe and America, backed up by the diplomatic influence of the six greatest powers of the world.

When, not long ago, A. Wendell Jackson arrived in London with a single gripsack for his luggage, it is no exaggeration to say that he was bearding the British lion in his den.

Mr. Jackson's object was to obtain a loan for China in the teeth of the policy whic hthe British Government had followed for many years in regard to financial dealings with the Celestial Empire. The change to a republican régime in China had caused no alteration in that policy, which was approved by other powers, like Germany, France, and the United States.

The keynote of that policy was to discourage the issue of loans to China except under conditions scrutinized and sanctioned by the diplomatic agents of the powers in question.

There was, of course, no actual veto possible on the issue of a loan to China by any financial interest that cared to take the risk, but most of the leading bankers recognized that the political support of the Consortium was an invaluable safeguard.

Mr. Jackson entered the arena at a moment when the powers mentioned, with Russia and Japan added to their number, were giving the strongest diplomatic support to a syndicate of banks which was offering to make to the new Republic of China a loan upon conditions which were not altogether acceptable at Peking. The syndicate was the most powerful that could be formed, besides having the diplomatic machinery of the six powers at its back.

To enter into competition with it would seem a scheme impossible of fruition, yet this is just what Mr. Jackson's idea was. From New York he cabled to Peking offering to obtain for the Chinese Republic whatever money it required upon such terms and with such guarantees as would be acceptable to China. The financiers of six powers who were offering the loan were not, according to his argument, the only bankers in the world. That there are others Mr. Jackson has since demonstrated.

Negotiations Very Difficult.

In the beginning the efforts of this adventurer of finance were, so far as can be learned, peculiarly difficult, even after he had obtained from Peking a cabled acceptance of his offer. His pourparlers with New York financiers led to nothing more definite than promises of support contingent on success in London. Eeven now it is uncertain whether any New York house is closely associated with the London bank which has taken up the $50,000,000 loan.

Despite all obstacles, Mr. Jackson won his way to his goal, and, in his own words, "the $50,000,000 is waiting for the Chinese Republic now, and as many more millions as it requires in the future, if it will have them."

It remains to be seen whether "diplomacy" has said its last word on the subject and whether the Chinese Government will disregard the protests made by the Ministers of the six powers in Peking.

E. Buch Crisp & Co., the London house which, it is understood, has taken up Mr. Jackson's deal, is a Stock Exchange firm which in the fourteen years of its existence has acquired a reputation for enterprise.

Glad to See Monopoly Upset.

In some financial quarters in London the success of Mr. Jackson's negotiations would be welcomed, as breaking up the monopoly in Chinese loan operations exercised by the financial houses in the six-power ring, for outside houses are dissatisfied with the existence of a monopoly.

The Peking correspondent of The Daily Mail says that the first installment of the $50,000,000 loan has been paid over.

The Times's Peking correspondent says:

"There is much comment on the news received here that £500,000, ($2,500,000,) as the first installment of the London loan, is being paid over. It appears to impose upon Great Britain the necessity either of reiterating Sir Edward Grey's assurance of the Government's exclusive support of the Hongkong Bank and its adherence to the united policy of the powers in regard to Chinese finance, or of acquiescing in a transaction which runs counter to previous British declarations of policy.

TWO HURT IN BURGLAR HUNT.

Third Woman Routs Intruder, Who Tries to Throw Her Downstairs.

Mrs. Josephine Thatcher, caretaker of Mrs. Margaret Ellis's home at 100 West 124th Street, during Mrs. Ellis's absence, was strolling past the house at 10 o'clock last evening with her friends, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Laboda of 3,245 Perry Avenue, the Bronx, when she noticed a light in the third-story front room and the figures of two men moving swiftly backward and forward at the windows. She could not believe that it was her son returned at that hour and a little worried she called to Julia Kelly, a boarder, occupying the adjoining room on that floor, to step into the next room and find who was there. Miss Kelly gazed through the crack of the door, saw two strangers there, and questioned them sharply.

She had hardly spoken when one of the men, a stocky, swarthy young fellow, leaped at her and tried to throw her downstairs. She held her own in the little tussle and suddenly he broke away, ran up the stairs to the roof and vanished.

The other man went down the stairs of the Ellis house four steps at a time. At the lowest landing below the second floor he met and struggled with the Labodas, striking Mrs. Laboda over the head three times with a blackjack and cutting an ugly gash in the brow of Mr. Laboda, who retaliated by smashing his umbrella over the stranger's head.

Then, fighting his way free, the man sprang for the doorway and soon outdistanced Mrs. Thatcher, who fell and, spraining her ankle, committed the chase to the legs of two passers-by, who took up the trust with a will and raced the fugitive all the way to West 125th Street and Eighth Avenue, where he mingled with the crowd gathered at a blaze there. Five times in the course of the run policemen halted the man, but he seemed so innocent and his run so apparently a little chase between friends that they let him go again.

It was Inspector Sweeney who directed the final policeman to send the man to the Lenox Avenue station and there he was identified by the detectives as "the Stutterer," the familiar alias for Walter Peltetreow of 502 West Twenty-ninth Street, who, according to the police, had long been wanted in these parts.

"The Stutterer's" pal, who took to the roof at the discovery, dropped through the scuttle into the parsonage of the Lenox Avenue Collegiate Reformed Church and in the hallway collided with Mrs. Edgar Tilton, the wife of the minister, who was alone in the house and speechless with fear at the sudden visitation. He swept by her in the hall and made good his escape to Lenox Avenue.

TECH, JR., SINKS IN A RACE.

Mile-a-Minute Hydroplane Turns Turtle in the Wash of Peter Pan V.

Tech Jr., reputed to be the fastest motor boat in the world, was sunk yesterday afternoon in the Hudson River near Yonkers during a race in the National motor boat carnival series for the world's championship trophy. The two members of her crew, Capt. Malcolm Billsborough and Arthur Booye, were rescued with difficulty.

A near-by tugboat failed to respond to their cries for help, and the unlucky sportsmen declared that if sufficient heed had been paid to their request for aid the hydroplane, which was valued at $7,500, could have been saved from going to the bottom in forty feet of water.

The boat turned turtle rounding the last turn of the first lap of a thirty-mile race, in which she was pitted against James Simpson's Peter Pan V. The latter craft was leading by several lengths and at a pace calculated to have been forty-five statute miles an hour. The wash thrown by the Peter Pan was so great that the Tech was enveloped with it just before she got straightened out, and thrown completely over.

Billsborough and Booye scrambled on the upturned boat, which afforded them refuge for only two minutes, when she sank. The men then floundered about until the Bull Moose, another of the racing craft, picked them up. Yesterday's race was the first in which the men had started without life preservers, and they afterward stated that it would be the last.

Tech, Jr., was recently hailed as the "mile-a-minute" boat. She had done a nautical mile over the waters in Huntington Harbor in the supplementary series to the Harmsworth Cup races at a rate of 58.7 statute miles an hour. She was owned by Col. T. Coleman Du Pont of Wilmington, Del., and designed by Adolph Apel of Ventnor, N. J.

MAY WEAR RELIGIOUS GARB.

President's Decision Not Held to Bar Attire of Church Orders in Schools.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—President Taft's decision concerning the employment of the Catholic religious garb in the Government of Indian schools is not expected to prohibit the wearing of such garb by nuns and other teachers who have been allowed to wear a distinctive religious attire in the past.

The Indian Rights Association, which has been opposing the wearing of the religious garb in the Indian schools and indorsing the position taken by Commissioner of Indian Affairs Valentine, has circularized its members with a statement in which it concedes that the President's decision will go against them to this extent. But the association hopes that the President will refuse to allow new teachers to wear the garb.

Under date of Sept. 4, 1912, the Indian Rights Association, through S. M. Brosius, its Washington agent, issued a "progress report" to its members, which makes this prediction respecting the action of the Administration on the religious garb question:

"Secretary Fisher has handed to the President his decision in the celebrated garb order of Commissioner Valentine. No intimation is given as to the nature of the decision. Just when the President will make a final decision is not known. Politics being chiefly considered, it will not be surprising if the announcement is delayed until after the Fall elections, although I look for a compromise decision. I mean to infer that it may be held that those nuns already admitted without Civil Service examinations shall remain, but that no further violations of the rule will be permitted and the peculiar garb of the orders shall be permitted in other cases."

WASHINGTON WARNS CENTRAL AMERICA

United States Has a Moral Mandate to Keep the Peace, Says Note to Nicaragua.

MAY BE MEANT FOR MEXICO

Policy Stated by Acting Secretary Wilson Is Long Step Forward Toward Dominating Republics.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The revolution in Nicaragua, now apparently almost at an end, has given the United States an opportunity to announce the most advanced position of supervision over the Central American countries that it has yet assumed.

Minister Weitzel on Sept. 12 handed to the Nicaraguan Government, communicated to the rebels, and made public a note from Acting Secretary Wilson setting forth this Government's unalterable opposition to Gen. Mena's revolution. The note made it plain that while American marines were landed to protect American lives and property, they were intended also to leave the Nicaraguan army free to hunt down Gen. Mena, who is characterized in the harshest language.

But while the note excoriates the rebels and their chief and refers especially to American interests in Nicaragua, phrases in the document seem to show that it is intended rather as a warning to Central America in general than a setting forth of the well-understood position of the United States in Nicaragua. Particular attention has been attracted to this statement:

> Under the Washington conventions, the United States has a moral mandate to exert its influence for the preservation of the general peace of Central America, which is seriously menaced by the present uprising, and to this end in the strict enforcement of the Washington conventions and loyal support of their aims and purposes all the Central American republics will find means of valuable co-operation.

America's purpose, the note declares, is to foster true constitutional government and free elections, and to this end strong moral support will be given to established Governments against revolutions based upon the selfish designs of would-be despots, and not upon any principle or popular demand. Force will be used, if necessary, in maintaining free communication with and to protect American Ministries and Legations.

In some quarters to-night the belief is expressed that the statement was put out at this time partly because of the disturbed conditions in Mexico, Cuba, and Santo Domingo.

The declaration marked a long step in the direction of Latin-American domination since Secretary Knox's note of Dec. 1, 1909, dismissing Felipo Rodriguez, Nicaraguan Chargé under the Zelaya régime, which set all Latin-America by the ears.

But Mr. Knox's note was mild in comparison to the one made public at the State Department to-day. The latter was dated Aug. 29, only three days after the President left Washington, and there is reason to believe that its details were modified by cable last Thursday, following a conference at Beverly between the President, Attorney General Wickersham, and Chandler P. Anderson, counselor for the State Department.

See a Hint to Mexico.

Those who see in it a possible reference to the protracted disturbance in Mexico call attention to the omission of all mention of Mexico in connection with our "moral mandate" under the Washington conventions to exert American influence for the maintenance of Central American peace. Mr. Knox told Señor Rodriguez that President Zelaya had violated "the engagements (of the five Central American republics) so solemnly undertaken at Washington (in 1907) under the auspices of the United States and Mexico."

In some quarters it is suggested that this omission means more than a recognition of the fact that Mexico is now unable to assist this country, and that when the note says that the United States "discountenances any revival of Zelayaism in Nicaragua and co-operates forcefully with the Goverment troops for the suppression of the rebellion," there is a hint to Mexico that it may be necessary in the same way to protect Americans in that country by force, while the Mexican Army is left free to fight the rebels.

Mr. Wilson's note states that three years ago this Government opposed not only President Zelaya personally, but the governmental system that he represented. This Government's present opposition to Gen. Mena is based on the ground that he represents a revival of the Zelaya idea.

A Broad Interpretation.

This brings out the reference to the Washington conventions of 1907. The interpretation he puts upon American obligations under those conventions is bound to be received with surprise by at least four of the signatory powers. The treaty in which the Washington conference culminated contains only one mention of the United States and Mexico, and that states that by invitation of the signatories American and Mexican representatives were present at the deliberations. The obligations were all on the five countries that signed the conventions.

The conventions were then construed as intended to end the operations of Central American States against each other. But Mr. Wilson's note evidently interprets them as aimed at all disturbances, whether foreign or domestic. His interpretation puts on the United States a "moral mandate" to use its influence for the prevention and suppression of internal disturbances, and he does not make it plain that direct danger to Americans or American property is necessary.

Article II. of the Washington conventions is apparently relied upon for this interpretation, though it was said at the time that it meant simply that one nation was not to permit attacks on the constitutional Government of another. This article reads:

> Desiring to secure in the republics of Central America the benefits which are derived from the maintenance of their institutions, and to contribute at the same time in strengthening their stability and prestige with which they ought to be surrounded, it is declared that every disposition or measure which may tend to alter the constitutional organization in any of them is to be deemed a menace to the peace of said republics.

The part the United States and Mexico were expected to play is set forth in the statement that "their Excellencies the Presidents of the Central American Republics shall invite their Excellencies the Presidents of the United States of America and the United Mexican States to appoint, if they deem proper, their respective representatives to lend their good and impartial offices in a purely friendly way toward the realization of the objects of the conference."

The conventions, as finally signed, did not name any one with authority to enforce the compact.

KAISER'S FRIEND DIES AT DINNER IN HOTEL

Dr. H. F. Wiebe, German Delegate to Chemists' Congress, Stricken in the Netherland.

WAS SOON TO SAIL FOR HOME

Body Taken to a Police Station, Where It Will Be Claimed by a Brother, Who Lives in New Rochelle.

Dr. H. F. Wiebe of Charlottenburg, a prominent German scientist and official representative of the Kaiser to the Eighth International Congress of Applied Chemistry, which closed its sessions in this city Friday, was stricken with heart trouble at 7 o'clock last night while at dinner in the grill room of the Hotel Netherland, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. He died while being carried to an ambulance that had been summoned from the Presbyterian Hospital.

Dr. Wiebe was one of the three delegates to the conogress who had remained here after the meetings were brought to an end, and he had been at the Netherland since Friday. He had planned to return to Germany on the Cincinnati, sailing from this port on Sept. 25.

The scientist was dining alone when stricken. There were a score of others in the room, among them Dr. William Tod Helmuth of Flower Hospital and Second Deputy Police Commissioner Donald I. McKay. Dr. Helmuth was one of the first to realize that Dr. Wiebe was seriously ill, and, assisted by Mr. McKay, carried him into one of the parlors. There he worked over him until the ambulance arrived. Coroner Winterbottom was notified and ordered the body removed to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station.

The other delegates to the congress at the hotel are F. Fournier of France and B. Flurscheim of England. Messengers were sent to look for them in the hope that they knew the address of Dr. Wiebe's relatives, but they could not be found. Capt. Henry of the Sixty-seventh Street Station in searching Dr. Wiebe's clothes found a letter sent by F. S. Wiebe of Fifth Avenue, City Park, New Rochelle, which began with the words, "My dear brother." F. S. Wiebe was reached through the New Rochelle police, and said that he would come to this city early to-day to take charge of the body.

The police here early this morning received a telephone communication from him advising them that an undertaker was on the way from New Rochelle to take care of the body.

Dr. Wiebe was born in Hamburg, Germany, in 1852, and was educated at the Academy and Gymnasium at Hamburg, the Technical High School at Charlottenburg, which is a suburb of Berlin, and the University of Berlin. He won royal favor through his scientific experiments. He was the author of many books and papers on scientific subjects, and was a member of a number of scientific societies. He specialized in the silicate industry and the manufacture of glass.

LINES KEPT OFF BRIDGE.

Service Board Refuses to Indorse Permit for Manhattan Span.

Commissioner Cram made an effort at yesterday's meeting of the Public Service Commission to force a vote on the application of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, the New York Railways Company, the Third Avenue Railway Company, and the Coney Island and Brooklyn Railway Company for authorization to run cars across the Manhattan Bridge on a permit from Bridge Commissioner O'Keeffe.

At the hearings before the commission on the application of the companies, Almet R. Latson, counsel for the Three-Cent Line, intimated that he would appeal such a grant to the courts on the ground that the commission had no authority to act in such a case, and that it was illegal to extend regularly granted franchises by reason of a temporary permit. The commission raised the point that once it granted its permission it could not retract it, as long as the Bridge Commissioner continued his permit, and that thereby with complacent bridge officials the traction companies would have virtually a perpetual franchise.

Chairman Willcox objected to any action on the ground that counsel had not yet passed on these legal points. To this Commissioner Cram retorted:

"When the opinion of counsel was asked as to the contracts with the Interborough and Brooklyn Rapid Transit and he declared them unconstitutional, you went right ahead and approved them. So what is the use of waiting now?"

"We took the question of the preferential payments," replied Chairman Willcox, "to the courts and got the opinion of the Court of Appeals before we took action."

As Commissioner Cram was in a hopeless minority on the Manhattan Bridge question, he did not press it to a division.

LONDON HOUSE FOR SCHWAB?

Mrs. Schwab Has Been Seeking One There, Agents Say.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—According to a cable dispatch received in this city to-night, a rumor is in circulation in London that Charles M. Schwab, the steel manufacturer, contemplates making his permanent residence in London.

It is learned from an agency that supplies London homes for Americans during the London season that Mrs. Schwab has been in London several times in the past eight months looking at places the firm has recommended, but none seems large or fine enough to suit her. The agents say that Mrs. Schwab has made no secret of the fact that she desires to purchase, and not lease, a London residence, and that she will probably return soon with the same object in view.

Embezzling Cashier Pleads Guilty.

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 17.—George S. Wilson, former teller of the Stamford Trust Company of Stamford, pleaded guilty to-day to a charge of embezzling $40,000 of the company's money. He was sentenced to not less than two and not more than seven years in the State Prison.

PRIMARIES HELD WITH A VERY LIGHT VOTE

YAWGER OVERCOMES BROOKS

Latter Ran as Independent Republican for Senator—Victory for Republican Bosses.

The first real test of the direct primaries law was had yesterday, when all through the State of New York candidates for Congress, State Senate, Assembly, and local offices were nominated by "direct" methods. If the size of the vote cast is any criterion, this first opportunity of the voters to have a say for themselves in the nomination of candidates for public office aroused little interest. The vote was lighter than in any recent primary, and the contests were few.

In a general way it was a victory for bosses on the Republican side, while the progressive forces in the Democratic Party more than held their own. The setback suffered by the new idea men in the Republican Party all through the State was due to the fact that the Bull Moose movement had made heavy inroads on the party that once elected Theodore Roosevelt President. The majority of the Bull Moosers in this as in other States are enrolled Republicans, who under direction from their leaders refrained from voting at the primaries in order not to invalidate their signatures to petitions for Bull Moose candidates who can get their names on the ballot only in that way.

There were few contests of any interest. In the most notable fight in the State, from the National point of view, Congressman Sereno E. Payne, author of the Payne-Aldrich Tariff bill, won over his Progressive opponent by a vote which at midnight was estimated at 2 to 1.

In this city interest in the primary fight was focused in the contest waged in the County of Queens between regular Democratic forces—in this instance progressive—under the leadership of Borough President Maurice E. Connolly, which were contending for supremacy in the matter of nominations with the followers of former Borough President Joseph Cassidy.

There was jubilation all through the County of Queens last night when the primary returns showed a complete victory for the Connolly ticket. The winning candidates were: For Congress, Dennis O'Leary; for State Senator, Bernard M. Patten; for Sheriff, George Emener; for County Clerk, Leonard Ruoff, and for the Assembly, Samuel Burden, Alfred C. Kennedy, Albert C. Benninger, and Howard Sutphin.

There was no contest among the Republicans in Queens. The only Republican contest of any note in the city was for the nomination of Senator in the Eighteenth Senatorial District. This district comprises the Fifteenth, Seventeenth, and Nineteenth Assembly Districts on the upper west side, which are heavily Republican. In this district John F. Yawger, who ran with the backing of Abraham Gruber, the Old Guard leader of the Seventeenth Assembly District won handily over Assemblyman Franklin Brooks, who ran as an independent Republican candidate for the nomination.

The fight in the Eighteenth Senatorial was spirited, but at that the vote was unusually light. Mr. Brooks attributed his defeat to the potent sway of Mr. Gruber, who, he declared, had made a deal with Alexander Brough, Republican leader of the Nineteenth Assembly District, who is a candidate for Congress and wanted Gruber's support. Brough is one of Gruber's political lieutenants.

"The present primary law is a sham and a farce," said Mr. Brooks last night. "The result in this district shows clearly that the people are not able to nominate the candidate of their choice except with the sanction of a boss."

In the Twenty-first Congressional District, where Alderman Percy L. Davis, recently arrested on the charge of extortion, was the designated candidate of the Republican organization for the Congressional nomination, Martin C. Ansorge, who had been substituted by the district committee after Davis's arrest, received 1,275 votes against 150 cast for Davis. Davis had withdrawn, but his name remained on the official ballot and the primary voters were compelled to write Ansorge's name in the blank column.

Tammany had no contests whatever. In Tammany's Brooklyn annex there were some fights. In the Seventh Senatorial District, the political bailiwick of the late Senator McCarren, his successor in the upper house, Thomas J. Harden, was defeated by a few votes by Daniel J. Carroll. Harden was the organization candidate. There were Democratic fights in the First and Second Assembly Districts of Kings, in which the organization took no sides. In the First John J. Kelly won over J. Leroy Gibson. In the Second William J. Gillen won over Samuel S. Woodburn.

PAYNE WINS, TWO TO ONE.

Congressman Easily Defeats ex-Mayor Aiken in Primary Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

AUBURN, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Sereno E. Payne defeated ex-Mayor E. Clarence Aiken for the Republican nomination for Congress to-day. Returns late to-night from the five counties indicate victory for Mr. Payne by a vote of 2 to 1.

The apathy of Mr. Aiken's followers, caused probably by a warning to many who have gone over to the Bull Moose ranks not to vote in the Republican contest, lest they invalidate their opportunity to sign independent nominations for the Progressive ticket, resulted in a poor showing for Mr. Payne's opponent. Payne carried Penn Yan, Interlaken, Waterloo, Geneva, Seneca Falls, and Auburn.

Several towns in Cayuga County went for Mr. Aiken, but his gains never indicated a chance for his nomination. The threats of the Tammany organization to "write-in" a Tammany delegation to the Democratic State Convention did not materialize, and the regular organization will send an anti-Murphy delegation to the State Convention, headed by Thomas Mott Osborne.

CLOSE FIGHT IN SUFFOLK.

But Anti-Tammanyites Carry Nassau by 250 for State Senatorship.

MINEOLA, L. I., Sept. 18.—Not in years has there been such a bitter fight for control of primaries as was waged in Nassau and Suffolk Counties to-day and to-night. Thomas H. O'Keefe of Oyster Bay, candidate for State Senator as anti-Tammany Democrat, says he carried the First Senatorial District by a plurality of something more than 100 votes. He carried Nassau County by about 250 votes, but lost ground in Suffolk County, where the vote was slightly in favor of State Senator Long, the Tammany man. State Senator Long, the Tammany man, but O'Keefe probably has a lead in the total vote.

Lathrop Brown has a lead for the nomination for Congress. Tammany gets the delegates to the State Convention.

State Senator Long will not yet acknowledge that he is beaten. He says the vote is very close, and he believes that his chances are as good as O'Keefe's.

GUNS TO FIGHT AIRCRAFT.

Wonderful Weapons to Be Used on New British Armored Ships.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The four British armored ships to be begun this year will be fitted not only with overhead armor for protection against aerial attack, but also with guns of high elevation for attacking aircraft.

The gun is a combination of an anti-torpedo craft and anti-aircraft weapon. When required for work against surface vessels it has a range of 13,000 yards, with 31-pound shells. It can be elevated nearly 80 degrees, at which angle its effective height range is 9,000 yards. At a distance of four and a half miles it can send a shell to a height of 13,000 feet.

For use against aircraft a new type of shrapnel shell is used.

SUES THE STATE FOR $7.

All for Two Suits Damaged and Automobile Spattered by Tree Sprayer.

ALBANY, Sept. 17.—Max H. Elbe of Niagara Falls filed a claim to-day against the State for $7, which is his charge for cleaning his automobile, and for two suits which were damaged by liquid used in spraying trees on the Niagara State Reservation in July. Alleged negligence of a State employe and carelessness in handling the spraying apparatus formed the basis of the claim.

Elbe says that the damage was done while he was driving through the reservation with two friends.

OLIVE BRANCH IN "AD."

Sister Seeks Johann Stainau to Heal Fifty-Two-Year Wound.

The personal advertisement inserted in yesterday's TIMES, in which Mrs. Gesinna Dohrman asked for information concerning her brother, Johann Stainau, who disappeared in 1860, represented the effort of a sister to heal a wound now more than half a century old. In 1860 the Stainau family dwelt in Raupendorf, near Lilianthal, in Germany, when young Stainau, then in his early twenties, got into some sort of scrape and thought it best to leave the country.

He left in the dead of the night, and on his departure he went to his sister and chum and asked her to go with him side by side to the station. But she was affronted and distressed by the trouble his escapade had caused the home and she turned from him in silence, leaving him to go his way. Save for a little letter written to his mother from America in 1862, she has never heard from or of him since. She is married now and living at 16 Rampen Strasse, Bremerhafen, and she has asked her niece, Mrs. Freda Ohland of 367 Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, to advertise for Johann that she may make her peace with him before she dies.

NO TRACE OF HENRY LUYTIES.

And Strange Taxicab Driver Who Drove Him Has Not Come Forward.

Several clues were run down yesterday by the police and relatives of Henry Luyties, the head of a cigarette company, with offices at 546 Fifth Avenue, who disappeared on Friday, Sept. 6, but nothing came of them.

Otto Luyties, the missing man's brother, was informed by Thomas F. Smith, formerly an orderly in St. Vincent's Hospital, that a man answering the description of Henry Luyties had been admitted to that institution either Sept. 5 or 6, and that he seemed to be mentally deranged or under the influence of liquor. Mr. Luyties visited the hospital, but could find no trace of such a patient. Ernest Sherry of the Kisko Chemical Company, 210 West Forty-second Street, informed Mr. Luyties that his company had received an order for some face cream from Henry Luyties in Chicago, but Mr. Luyties declared that the order must have come from Herman Luyties, a relative.

Otto Luyties said that it was not unusual for Henry to draw a check for $500, as he did on the day of his disappearance, but he thinks it strange that the driver of the yellow taxicab who is said to have driven his brother from the home of Edward Seybel, 319 West Eighty-second Street, about 4 o'clock on the afternoon of Sept. 6, should not have come forward by this time with information. Mr. Luyties is distributing thousands of cards among the taxicab drivers, offering a reward of $10 for any information that will show where his brother went after leaving the home of Mr. Seybel.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 17.—Cardinal Gibbons told 550 men at the City Club luncheon this afternoon that if a historian ever had cause to write the "Decline and Fall of the American Republic" it would not be due to an invading army, but to the criminal sloth and negligence and the political apostasy of our own citizens.

Before his address he said in an authorized interview:

"Equal suffrage, in my opinion, would tend toward increasing divorce, which is a social blot on the United States, and is the greatest evil of the day. If woman had equal political rights with men there is a probability that on the slightest provocation she would seek divorce. Given such equality they might overstep the bounds. Women under present conditions are too prone to go to the divorce courts, and political equality might make them more so. It might have the effect of turning their heads.

"Divorce is now too easy to get. If a husband leaves home for a couple of weeks and his wife wants freedom she is likely to use his absence as a pretext. Nowadays if a woman cannot get a divorce in her own State she goes off to Nevada, where it is made easy.

"One of the worst features of the divorce evil is its bad effect upon children. When parents separate it means separation of children, of brothers and sisters. Children thus bereft of proper family influences are likely to go astray.

"Divorce is increasing in the United States. The evil prevails here more generally than in any other country. We must get back to the Gospel. The laws should be made more strict, so that it would not be so easy to disrupt the marriage ties on flimsy pretexts."

For Repeal of Income Tax Law.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 17.—After a five hours' debate to-night the Democratic Convention adopted a platform which pledges the repeal of the income tax law.

SWEARS $15,000 WAS ASKED FOR CAPTAINCY

Reith Affidavit, Naming A. J. Johnson and Thomas Hassett, Goes to Aldermen.

JOHNSON'S COUNTER CHARGE

Accuses Secretary Sheehan and One Norton, and Says Police Graft Bureau Was Run at 115 Broadway.

Police Capt. John T. Reith of the Macdougal Street Station is the man who made the affidavit referred to by Police Commissioner Waldo when he told the Aldermanic Investigating Committee last Friday that he knew of one Captain who had made an affidavit to the effect that $15,000 had been demanded from him as the price of a promotion from Lieutenant to Captain. Mr. Waldo said the committee could have this affidavit and its production was expected when the committee resumed its inquiry to-day. But yesterday the affidavit leaked out and immediately there was a big row.

Capt. Reith implicated in the alleged attempt to make him pay for his promotion Alfred J. Johnson, who was for a short time the private secretary of Mayor Hugh J. Grant, later Under Sheriff when Nicholas J. Hayes was Sheriff, and at present is connected with the business of Daniel G. Reid, the financier. Thomas Hassett, former Secretary of the Board of Water Supply and now confidential adviser to State Engineer and Surveyor John A. Bensel, was also implicated. The alleged attempt to sell a promotion to Capt. Reith occurred during the police administration of Gen. Bingham. Reith was promoted under Waldo, on May 29, 1911.

Mr. Johnson, in a statement, says he (Reith) asked his help, and seemed to fear his record was against him. He was anxious to know, according to Mr. Johnson, if there was not some one who would do the job for him for $10,000 or $15,000. Mr. Johnson says he told Reith he was a fool to think money could help him, because no one had any real influence with Gen. Bingham.

Police Commissioner Waldo said he could not understand how the affidavit had leaked out. He had given it to no person. He refused to say whether it was accurate or not. The original affidavit is still on file at Police Headquarters. The Commissioner said it was not sufficient to base a prosecution on, as it was entirely uncorroborated. He has, however, a verbal statement from another police Captain, who told Mr. Waldo that when he was a Lieutenant he was summoned by the same men who were accused of trying to sell a Captaincy to Reith. The interview he had with these men, he said, was along the same line as that described by Reith, but that it ended without any of the men asking him for money.

The affidavit has to do with events alleged to have transpired four years ago. Reith charges that he went to the office of Under Sheriff Johnson at 299 Broadway, and there discussed with him the possibilities of his being promoted from Lieutenant to Captain. Reith swears that he was taken by Johnson to the office of the Secretary of the Board of Water Supply, Tom Hassett, in the same building, and that Hassett asked him a lot of questions as to how long he had been on the police force, the color of his eyes, and his general experience. A week later, Reith swears, he was sent for and called at the residence of Johnson on the west side. Reith swears that Johnson informed him that the people having the power to promote him wanted $15,000. Reith swears that shortly after this he laid all the facts of his experience before Gen. Bingham, who was greatly excited to learn of it. Reith swears that he paid no money to any one, and he was passed on the list when the appointments were made.

Mr. Johnson, at his home, 515 Park Avenue, gave out last night this statement, which he said covered everything he had to say in reply to the affidavit made by Reith:

> This man Reith is a miserable perjurer, and I shall formally charge him with perjury to the District Attorney. I never saw him but a few times in my life, and never of my own seeking. My recollection of him is that he came to see me using the name of some one I knew, asking me to help him to be promoted in the Police Department. He seemed to be afraid that his record was against him and wanted to know if there was not some one who could have him promoted for the payment of $10,000 or $15,000. I told him straight off that he was a fool to think that money could help him, because no one who had any real influence with Commissioner Bingham would take a dollar of dirty money. He came to see me several times afterward, begging me to help him, until he got to be such a nuisance that I had to order him out of my office.
>
> It may seem strange that Waldo and Sheehan should be anxiously seeking to publicly discredit a man who has been out of office and out of politics for several years, but they have a very lively interest in doing so. They have been expecting me to give some testimony that may or may not require some explanation from them. And this perjured affidavit, in all likelihood the price of Reith's promotion, is the result.
>
> The reason why Mr. Raffles Waldo and "Bunny" Sheehan have turned the ever-ready guns of the Police Department on me is this:
>
> Last December, when my office was in the building at 115 Broadway, ex-Sheriff Hayes, during the course of a call on me, asked me if I had heard that there was a branch office for the collection of police graft in the building, (115 Broadway.) On my asking him what he meant, he said in substance that he had been reliably told that petty gambling house keepers and others of like ilk were being told by those "in the know" to go down to 115 Broadway to make their arrangements for police protection with a man named Norton. As a matter of curiosity I asked William P. Sheridan, an ex-police detective and now manager of a private detective bureau, if he would not have Norton shadowed to see what his Police Department connections really were.
>
> I told several friends of mine about the matter, and was advised not to meddle with it any further. Only last week while lunching with Water Commissioner Thompson, I told him about it, and he warned me to look out for Waldo, saying that he was a most dangerous man, and that none in New York could be safe from his vengeance.
>
> I never wanted to embarrass Waldo or Sheehan, and regret the necessity I have of making this statement in explanation of their attack. As a matter of fact, when Waldo ran for Congress and was beaten I helped to pay his campaign expenses, while Sheehan even now is in debt for borrowed money.
> I have retained Sumner Gerard of 60 Broadway as my attorney to ascertain if the statement furnished to the press concerning me is actionable. If it is, Messrs. Waldo and Reith will have their day in court as defendants in a libel suit that will be carried to a finish.

The report of the detectives employed by Mr. Johnson to shadow Norton was also given to the reporters. The report is dated Dec. 28, 1911, and recites that the two detectives met at the Hotel Margaret, 129 West Forty-seventh Street, and that evening Norton went to the Stanwood Apartment House, at 321 West Fifty-fifth Street, and acted as if he were fearful of being followed. The detectives said they remained on watch for over two hours, and then they went into the apartment house and asked if any one named J. C. Sheehan lived there. They explained they were looking for an old thief.

Mr. Johnson could not explain why the detectives asked for J. C. Sheehan, when the man they had been following was Norton, and that later it appeared that W. R. Sheehan, Mr. Waldo's private secretary, was in the house. The janitor, John Hanneran, became suspicious, and the detectives said he went into a recess and they heard the click of a telephone, and a moment later Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Norton walked out of the elevator. Mr. Sheehan asked who it was that wanted to see him, and the detectives explained that they were looking for a man named Sheehan, but he was not the man. Then the detectives said Mr. Sheehan told the janitor and the colored boy to call 3100 Spring, which is Police Headquarters, and have the Twenty-sixth Precinct connected. This was done, and the precinct was ordered to send two detectives to the apartment house at once.

Two men responded, the report says, and all of the persons mentioned came out of the apartment house together and had a talk on the street, but no arrests were made.

GOLDBURG WROTE TO KOENIG.

Mayor Learns How Politics Figured in Picking Graft Inquiry Stenographer.

Mayor Gaynor received from the Commissioners of Accounts yesterday the report on the complaint of James A. Lyons, that the contract for doing the stenographic work for the Aldermanic committee investigating graft was not given to the lowest bidder. The successful bidder was William Goldburg, whose bid was 4 cents a folio, while that of Lyons was 3 cents. Investigation of the complaint has been going on for several days.

Alderman Folks, a member of the investigating committee, figures largely in the report. Mr. Lyons said that Mr. Folks had advised him to put in a high bid for the sake of the dignity of the committee, and that Chairman Curran of the committee also seemed to be greatly interested in somebody else than Mr. Lyons. Several other bidders were lower than Mr. Goldburg. The report says:

> The successful bidder, in explaining how he secured the contract, stated that he interviewed Alderman Ralph Folks, wrote to Mr. Samuel Koenig, Republican County Chairman, as well as to Alderman Curran, and all of the members of the committee on both sides. Upon being asked why he wrote to the Republican County Chairman, he stated:
>
> "Why I know from my experience that the committees of any legislative body are divided according to partisan power in the legislative body. That one of the objects of making a division of minority and majority is to control in a measure the patronage, the main patronage."
>
> He further stated that his object in speaking to Alderman Folks and not to other members of the committee was because the Alderman was from his district. Upon being asked if Alderman Folks had charge of giving out this contract, he stated:
>
> "I learned to my regret that he had not the entire charge of giving out the contract to any particular person. I can explain that if you wish me to go further."
>
> Upon being told to do so, he said:
> "He (meaning Alderman Folks) told me at the very beginning that it would be up to the committee to give out this contract, and that he thought he could say an effective word to the members of the Democratic side, and that he was quite sure there would be some trouble with some of the Republican members of the committee, inasmuch as one or two or more of them had people of their own to suggest."
>
> Samuel Goldburg, brother of William Goldburg, is a Republican district Captain in the Twenty-ninth Assembly District, which includes the Thirtieth Aldermanic District, represented by Alderman Ralph Folks.

The report closes with a summary of the testimony taken, and then it says:

> From the foregoing it has been shown that the contract for the stenographic services in connection with this investigation was not given to the lowest responsible bidder.

The report will be sent to the Controller, who may order that the bidding be reopened. The bills of Mr. Goldburg may be held up.

GAYNOR OBJECTS TO QUESTIONS

Cites One on Insurance Rates as False—Increases Reported.

Mayor Gaynor wrote to Corporation Counsel Watson yesterday directing him to object to any questions asked by the Aldermanic Committee that is investigating police conditions that seemed to be asked only for the reason of deceiving the public, and that if his objections did not prevail to withdraw from all future hearings of the committee. The question that aroused the anger and suspicion of the Mayor was asked him when he was examined. He was asked if he did not know that casualty insurance rates had increased 35 per cent. during the past year. The idea was that the Police Department had become so demoralized and incompetent that the people could no longer safely depend upon it for the protection of life and property.

The Mayor replied that he did not know it and that he did not believe that Emory R. Buckner, the committee's counsel, who asked the question, knew it either. When the question and answer appeared in the newspapers Alfred J. Talley, counsel, for the Insurance Department of the State, set about finding out if the question was based on facts. He heard from William F. Moore, President of the New Amsterdam Casualty Company and formerly President of the Burglary Insurance Underwriters' Association. Mr. Moore said he was astonished at the question, and declared that there has been no material change in burglary or theft insurance. He said that there had always been a reduction allowed in the rates for bank insurance policies and mercantile safe policies by reason of the large population and excellence of equipment.

"Of open stock insurance," said Mr. Moore, "there has been no material change in the rate, only a rearrangement of groups. These groups carry the same rates all over the country, except in Chicago and in California, where the rates are 33 1-3 higher."

The letter from the Mayor to Mr. Watson reads:

> City of New York.
> Office of the Mayor,
> Sept. 17, 1912.
>
> Sir: When I was testifying before the Committee of the Aldermen inquiring into police conditions, I was asked whether I did not know that the insurance rate for burglary had been increased 35 per cent. within the past year. I believe I responded that I did not know it, and that I believed the questioner did not know it. Since then I have been fully informed by the insurance authorities, including the President of the New Amsterdam Casualty Company, that there has been no such increase, and, indeed, no increase at all, and that the lowest rate in the whole country obtains in the City of New York. I inclose to you a copy of President Moore's letter.
>
> I was asked several similar questions, and Mr. Waldo was also. That is to say, questions are asked whether the witnes does not know a certain thing, the question itself being false, and the object being to have the question taken as true by the newspapers and the public. Please object to such questions. You are the legal adviser to the Common Council and to the committee of the Aldermen, and you should see that such methods are not resorted to. If your advice be not taken, then it may be necessary for you to withdraw from the hearings. The attempt to falsify and break down the discipline of the Police Department has now pretty well spent itself, and it should not go on further with our acquiescence. Very truly yours,
>
> W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.
> Archibald R. Watson, Esq., Corporation Counsel, New York City.

Chairman Henry H. Curran of the Aldermanic committee asked A. U. Quint, general manager of the insurance department of the National Surety Company, to make a statement on insurance rates. Mr. Quint's statement shows that there has been a decided increase in the rates.

WHITMAN MAKES HEADWAY.

Gets Evidence to Head Off Work of Becker's Side in Hot Springs.

Special to The New York Times.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Sept. 17.—Pending the arrival of John F. McIntyre, chief counsel for Lieut. Charles Becker, the proceedings to be held before Commissioner Huff, who will take the testimony of the Hot Springs witnesses in the Rosenthal case, there was a lull to-day so far as the Hot Springs end of the case is concerned. District Attorney Whitman continued his infomal examination of witnesses, and the further he goes into the case the more convinced he is that means not altogether above criticism were resorted to by agents of Becker in the effort to obtain evidence of benefit to the accused policeman.

In addition to the four witnesses named by Mr. McIntyre in the proceedings before Supreme Court Justice Bischoff, several others have been found here who are familiar with certain angles of the case, and whose testimony is to be taken before Commissioner Huff. One of the witnesses, a man holding a high place in the public service of Hot Springs, has had a long talk with Mr. Whitman, and has told a story that will make interesting reading for the State end of the Rosenthal case.

Another witness, it is said, will be ready to swear that a certain man who said he represented Becker, came here with a list of prepared questions that he wanted this witness to look over, and if possible find some resemblance between them and what Schepps may or may not have said to various persons following his arrest here several weeks ago. The witness, after looking the questions over, said that he did not remember Schepps ever having made remarks to the effect indicated. Mr. Whitman said to-night that his trip to Hot Springs had resulted in his obtaining evidence that would play a most important part at Becker's trial.

The Becker side of the case is working just as hard as is the District Attorney. "Bat" Masterson, the former Western Sheriff, who personally knows nearly everybody in Hot Springs, arrived here this morning, and frankly admitted that his visit had to do with the procuring of evidence favorable to Becker. Masterson is at the same hotel as Whitman, and to-night he and the District Attorney had a talk, in the course of which Masterson told Mr. Whitman that whatever he did here in the interest of Becker would be entirely above question and in the open.

"It is in order to ascertain the truth of statements attributed to Schepps at the time of his arrest and while he was being detained here in Hot Springs that brings me here at this time. Personally, I have every reason to believe that the statements printed as having been made by Schepps were substantially correct. If this can be verified, it will undoubtedly discredit Schepps as a witness against Lieut. Becker. I do not believe that newspaper men of Hot Springs with whom Schepps talked, or who talked with others with whom Schepps conversed, will represent things at this time, but will state the facts as they wrote them then. I regard the testimony to be taken here in Hot Springs to be of vital importance so far as Lieut. Becker is concerned and where the credibility of Schepps as a witness is involved."

Mr. Whitman received several messages from Assistant District Attorney Moss to-day, and also one from Mr. McIntyre. Mr. McIntyre said that he would arrive Thursday morning, prepared to proceed immediately with the examination of witnesses before Commissioner Huff.

SUES MAYOR FOR $100,000.

Curran Begins Action for Libel for Gaynor's Public Letter.

The summons in a libel suit begun by Alderman Henry H. Curran against Mayor Gaynor for $100,000 was served on the Mayor yesterday. The suit is the outcome of the letter written by the Mayor to Alderman Curran on Sept. 9 in reply to one from Mr. Curran asking the Mayor to appear before the Aldermanic Investigating Committee as a witness. The Mayor said in his letter to the Alderman that he was obliged to speak plainly to him, and that he refused to ally himself with Mr. Curran in any effort to discover wrongdoing in the Police Department. Then the Mayor referred to the "miserable grafting carried on by members of the Board of Aldermen in respect to the licensing of newsstands and the like throughout the city."

The Mayor told about this kind of "grafting," and recited some of the efforts he had made to put a stop to it, and then the letter said:

> Sums of $500 and $250 are commonly paid, and there are about 7,000 of such licensed stands.
> The method by which this is done is that the Alderman in place of dealing with the licensee personally and handing the certificate over to him personally, as the law and official duty require, refers such licensee to a go-between, who is generally what is called a ward heeler, and then hands the certificate over to such go-between, who holds it and refuses to deliver it to the licensee until he is paid for it.
> I have no doubt that the Aldermen who do this share in the extortion money. Evidence has accumulated here that you pursue this system. I do not see how I can expect the police to be honest when they see on every hand that even the Aldermen of the city are taking graft personally or enabling corrupt go-betweens to do so.

The complaint says that the statements made by the Mayor in his letter meant that Mr. Curran did not intend to do his duty as a member of the Board of Aldermen, and that Mr. Curran was "a grafter and caused money to be illegally obtained and extorted from the applicants for newsstands as a consideration for his indorsing his consent to the grant of such license, and that he shared in such extortion money; that the plaintiff published false statements regarding his interview with the defendant, and that the plaintiff and other members of the said committee of the Board of Aldermen were not performing and did not intend to perform their duty as such committee and make an honest and non-partisan investigation into the Police Department, and said statement was so understood by all the persons who read it."

Mr. Curran's lawyer is Samuel J. Rosensohn, who is associated with Wallace Macfarlane and Robert Grier Monroe.

KEEPS RESORT LIST SECRET.

Waldo Sends Names of All Owners to the Aldermanic Committee.

The list of disorderly resorts in New York City and the names of their owners, compiled by Police Commissioner Waldo, was completed by Sept. 1, and is now in the hands of the District Attorney and the Curran Aldermanic Committee. Mr. Waldo, whose first intention was to make this list public as he did the gambling house list, said yesterday that he had decided to leave that matter in the hands of the District Attorney or the Aldermanic Committee. The list will not be given out at Police Headquarters.

MORRISON GOES TO BELLEVUE

Mayor Gaynor Writes of His Case to Agent for Inebriety Farm Land.

The Rev. William Morrison, Secretary of the Inebriety Board and Police Chaplain, who has been acting queerly about the City Hall for several days, was taken from Mayor Gaynor's office to Bellevue Hospital yesterday and is now under the care of Dr. Gregory in the psychopathic ward there. Dr. Morrison called upon the Mayor yesterday afternoon at the City Hall and had a long talk with him. He talked incoherently and it was suggested that he go to Bellevue Hospital for treatment. He replied that he would go anywhere to get rid of the evil spirits that were following him. Shortly after he had gone the Mayor made public this letter, which he had sent to Howard Goldsmith of Nyack, who was the agent through whom the farm for the Inebriety Board was purchased:

> CITY OF NEW YORK.
> OFFICE OF THE MAYOR.
> Sept. 17, 1912.
> Dear Mr. Goldsmith: Your letter of Sept. 16 to the Rev. Dr. Morrison is at hand. You very justly say that some statement attributed to Dr. Morrison in the sensational newspapers concerning the purchase of the farm for the Inebriate Board may do you great injustice, as you were the agent through whom the purchase was made. Dr. Morrison is not in a condition to answer your letter, and I therefore do so. A very great misfortune has overtaken him, due, I suppose, to his having been overcome by heat this Summer. In place of shielding him the sensational press have interviewed him and followed at his heels, and exposed his infirmity to the world, and done all they could to aggravate it. We all trust, however, that he will come right in a short time. Sincerely yours,
>
> W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.
> Howard Goldsmith, Esq., Nyack, N. Y.

It could not be learned at the hospital last night just what caused Dr. Morrison's breakdown, but it was said that he had been acting queerly ever since he suffered from sunstroke this Summer.

MOSS EXPLAINS THE INQUIRY

In a Statement, He Denies That He Charged Letters Were Concealed—Conflicting Tales of Capture.

Justice Goff, sitting as a Magistrate in charge of a John Doe inquiry, and Acting District Attorney Frank Moss continued their efforts yesterday to discover whether or not important evidence connected with the arrest of "Gyp the Blood" Horowitz and "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg had been suppressed by the police. At the end of the day they were not much nearer a conclusion than they had been on the day before.

The inquiry, it was learned, will be continued indefinitely and will be made to cover not only the question of suppressed evidence but also all the circumstances relating to the arrest of the gunmen. Several conflicting stories, each of them at variance with the account of Deputy Commissioner Dougherty, reached Mr. Moss yesterday, and he immediately began an investigation of each story.

To-day Mr. Moss will begin also an investigation to discover the identity of whatever persons may have had a share in concealing "Gyp" and "Lefty" in the Brooklyn flats which they occupied after their return to this city from Parksville in the Catskills.

Mr. Moss is uncertain whether one or two men, besides Samuel Kramer, who is under arrest, were directly connected with the purchase of furniture and the hiring of the flats for the fugitives. As told in THE TIMES yesterday, the furniture for the flat at 765 Woodward Avenue, in which "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie" were caught, and the furniture for the apartments at 253 South Fourth Street, Brooklyn, and 263 South Third Street, Brooklyn, was bought by Morris Goldstein, proprietor of the Majestic Poolroom at 235 East Broadway, and by Samuel Lieberman, an employe or partner of Goldstein. District Attorney Moss said yesterday afternoon that he believed Samuel Kramer, alias Max Cahn, who was caught in the apartment with "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie," was in reality Morris Goldstein.

Detectives from the District Attorney's office yesterday morning appeared at the Thomas F. Meagher Company, 207 Park Row, and at Cowperthwait & Sons, 203 Park Row, with subpoeaes for all connected with the sale of furniture to those who fitted up the hiding place for the gunmen. The detectives also took the three sets of mortgages and contracts relating to the purchase of furniture for the three different flats. To two sets of these papers is attached the signature of "Morris Goldstein," and to the third set the signature of "Samuel Lieberman." The District Attorney took these specimens of the handwriting of the men in order to compare them with the signatures on the gas bill found in the Woodward Avenue apartment. The purpose is to discover whether the handwriting of Kramer, or Cahn, is identical with that of Goldstein or Lieberman.

Kramer will be taken to the District Attorney's office this morning when the furniture men will be asked if they can identify him as the customer in either of the three purchases of furniture of which the bills were found after the capture of the two gunmen in the Woodward Avenue apartment. W. R. Fiedler, manager; Francis J. Finn, a saleman, and Louis Newman, a collector, connected with the Thomas F. Meagher Company, and W. E. Bird, manager, and Frank Miller, a salesman, of Cowperthwait & Sons, are those served with subpoenas to appear to-day.

Deputy Commissioner Dougherty, who is working with several detectives to round up those who were active in hiding "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie," refused to say yesterday whether the trail led higher up than those who hired and fitted up the three flats in Brooklyn, but he promised sensational developments within the next day or two. Dougherty refused to say whether he had been able to find out whether Kramer was identical with Goldstein or Lieberman, or whether two of the accessories were still at large.

The managers of the two furniture stores hold conflicting opinions on the subject. From newspaper pictures of Kramer, Manager Bird of Cowperthwait & Sons says he is Lieberman, and Manager Fiedler of the Thomas F. Meagher Company says he is Goldstein. Mrs. Rebecca Goldstein of 253 South Fourth Street, the mother of Morris Goldstein, says that Morris slept at her home Saturday night, and that, therefore, he is not Kramer, who was under arrest at the time. The Majestic, at 235 East Broadway, is now in charge of Samuel Goldstein, a brother of Morris. He said yesterday that he did not know where Morris was.

The conflicting reports concerning the capture of the gunmen which Mr. Moss immediately began to investigate emanated from ex-Magistrate Charles G. F. Wahle, their counsel, and from Bernard Schwartz, who has a flat above that occupied by the gunmen.

Mr. Wahle said yesterday that he had learned from his clients that when the police came to their flat on Saturday night one detective knocked on the door. It was opened by Samuel Kramer, and the detective stuck a revolver against his stomach, exclaiming:

"Well, Gyp, I've got you now."

"Gyp," who was sitting in the rear room, heard the exclamation and shouted out that he was "Gyp," that he was unarmed, and for the detectives to come in and get him.

The other story told by Schwartz was that the detectives entered the house on Saturday evening and shouted up through the halls:

"Goldstein. Oh, Goldstein. Does anyone by the name of Goldstein live here?"

Then they tramped up the stairs, pushed open the door of the gunmen's flat, and walked in without trouble.

Mr. Moss also heard that the police saw Mrs. Rosenberg on Friday night and thus located the flat, a detective whose home is in Glendale happening to catch sight of the girl as she went from the flat to a store and back again. Then on Saturday they located the particular apartment by climbing up the rear fire escape and peering in the windows.

All of these stories vary from Mr. Dougherty's account of having gone to the flat and smashed the door down. The Deputy Commissioner has been greatly angered by the apparent attempts to throw discredit on his capture, and yesterday Mr. Moss hastened to disclaim that he had made any such attempts. He issued this statement:

> Inaccurate and conflicting reports have been printed on the relation of the Police Department to the recent arrest of "Lefty Louis" and "Gyp the Blood." A short statement from the District Attorney's office is in order.
>
> I have not stated that the gunmen have important letters which the police have suppressed, nor that the Police Department acted in bad faith. I have not made any statement of testimony given before Justice Goff. I did not give any statement as to identification of these gunmen by any witness. No statements have been given as to what any witness would testify, though some pretended statements have been published. That is not the way to prepare for a trial. It is unpleasant to see editorial comment on too much talk, when, in fact, reporters are objecting because they are not given enough news.
> The exact facts in the present situation are: that because of the publication of specific charges that policemen suppressed letters that were in the apartment on Woodward Avenue, I moved promptly before Justice Goff for a judicial inquiry. That inquiry is proceeding privately and thoroughly. No statements have been made as to the testimony in that proceeding, and none will be published unless the Justice makes the hearing public, or unless somebody is held for trial on a criminal charge. If an offense has been committed it will be discovered and punished, but it is important that nobody shall suffer through hasty or incorrect conclusions or from the mere fact that he is called as a witness.

Detective Michael Meyers was also put out at the varying stories of the capture. He declared that the capture of the gunmen was primarily due to him.

"The arrest of 'Gyp' and 'Lefty' was brought about by me," said he. "For three weeks at my own expense I kept two stool pigeons in a café in Grand Street, about a block from where 'Lefty's' family lives. I knew he and his wife had frequented this place. I knew their companions and associates were there frequently also, and that these persons were the friends also of 'Gyp' and his wife. I have known 'Gyp' and 'Lefty' since they were children. Why, I introduced 'Gyp' to the girl he married.

"The two stool pigeons and a Harlem woman whom I induced to accompany them overheard many things concerning the whereabouts of the men and many conversations of which the fugitives were the chief topic. They reported nightly to me, and I turned the evidence over to Commissioner Dougherty.

"The arrests were brought about by piecing this information together and from additional information which I had received regarding the location of the flat near a moving picture show and a laundry. Detective Cassassa was sent out to hunt for such a laundry, and when he located it Commissioner Dougherty sent me to make the arrests, and I did so. There were no letters in the flat, and there is no reason for making all this commotion. I was detailed on the murder since the time of the shooting, because Mr. Dougherty knew that I was acquainted with the people concerned and with all their hangouts."

In addition to these men, Lieut. Dominick Riley was in court, and he, together with the wives of the gunmen, Samuel Kramer, or Max Kahn as he is also known, and two newspaper reporters were called before Justice Goff. As on Monday, the substance of their testimony was kept secret, but it is known now that there never were any such forty letters as were said to have been found in the gunmen's flat and apparently the John Doe inquiry was shifted from the track of its original purpose yesterday and set to an attempt to discover just the circumstances of the arrest of the gunmen.

Mr. Moss questioned the wives of "Gyp" and "Lefty," and also Kramer, yesterday, but he got no more out of them than he had on the day before, and devoted the rest of his day to preparing cross interrogatories to the interrogatories formulated by John F. McIntyre, chief counsel for Lieut Charles Becker in his trial for the murder of Herman Rosenthal. Mr. McIntyre served a copy of his interrogatories on the Acting District Attorney at an early hour yesterday morning, and as soon as they have been approved by Justice Bischoff, which probably will be this morning, they will be sent to Hot Springs. It was announced yesterday that John W. Hart, associate counsel for Becker, probably would make the trip to Hot Springs and that Mr. McIntyre would remain here in the expectation that he might be needed by some new turn of the case before he could go to Hot Springs and return.

The interrogatories consist of fifty questions prepared with a view of bringing out the fact that Sam Schepps boasted of being "the keynote" to the Becker case; that he declared he was the third man whom District Attorney Whitman sought to corroborate the confessions of "Billiard Ball" Jack Rose and "Bridgey" Webber, and that he stated that he had "something to sell and Mr. Whitman wants to buy."

The first dozen questions related to the acquaintance of the persons questioned with Schepps, and then comes the question: "On any of these occasions did he discuss the murder of Herman Rosenthal?" Did Schepps mention Rose was another question; did the witnesses see the letters (already printed) which Schepps wrote to Rose and Rose to Schepps while Schepps was in Hot Springs; did Schepps mention white slave traffic, and accuse Rosenthal of having engaged in it; did he say that if Rosenthal hadn't been "so dirty about these things" he "wouldn't have got himself in bad"? These are some of the questions in the interrogatories, and the last two questions are:

"Do you know of anything concerning the matters in question that may tend to the benefit and advantage of Charles Becker?"

The final question is a demand for a full statement of any such knowledge.

er group to-day drew up a memorandum, for informal communication to the Minister of Finance, containing the points which they will insist upon as essential when the Chinese Government submits revised conditions as a basis for the forthcoming negotiations."

Mr. Jackson yesterday emphatically declared that even this last obstacle had already been overcome and that the Chinese Minister in London had been instructed by his Government at Peking to notify the British Foreign Office that the contract had been signed and that a payment of half a million pounds had been made on account.

Even should complete success fail to crown his efforts, Mr. Jackson's record in this matter is surprising. A leading London banker the other day described him as having undertaken a forlorn hope, and, though the financier at that time did not expect it to be successful, he added: "But one cannot say for certain. Forlorn hopes sometimes are."

Who Is Wendell Jackson?

"But who is Mr. Jackson?" then asked the banker, "and who is backing him?"

To this question Mr. Jackson has refused to answer with much detail. He lived in New York, he told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, but he would not give the address. He has a wife and children there. He has no office there now, but at one time he was in business in Wall Street.

"In what kind of business?" was asked. He replied: "In engineering and finance."

Mr. Jackson said he was educated in universities in America and Germany, and later studied engineering in the United States. He has knocked about the world a good deal, his travels having carried him to Persia, China, and Russia. He was in Russia at the time of the Russo-Japanese war, and there came into contact with a syndicate of Russian financiers who had got a big concession in China. The syndicate was "scared" by the war and sold its concession to Mr. Jackson for a song. Mr. Jackson went to China to inspect his new acquisition, and passed some years in northern and central China, paying occasional visits to London, Paris, Berlin, and New York. It was while he was in Peking that he conceived the idea of negotiating a loan for China, and he gave the best part of two years to the work of preparing the ground. "I have an office in Peking," he said, "but nobody knows where it is."

Mr. Jackson is a man 55 to 60 years old, clean-shaven, white-haired, of medium build. He wears eyeglasses. In London he is living at the Royal Automobile Club.

Behind him, he says, is a syndicate of British, American, French, and German financiers, but of not one would he tell the name. "They have more money than the six-power syndicate," added Mr. Jackson impressively, which statement is somewhat surprising in view of the fact that the six-power group included J. P. Morgan & Co., the Deutsche Bank, and the Crédit Mobilier.

PEKING, Sept. 17.—The National Assembly to-day passed a resolution pledging itself to support the Government in the conclusion of any reasonable loan scheme.

The Minister of Finance explained to the members of the Legislature that it was impossible to obtain the requisite loan outside of the six-power group of bankers. The Minister said he hoped that the foreign bankers would waive or modify their demands for foreign supervision of the salt tax, and declared that, should the loan materialize, the Government was confident that remarkable progress and prosperity throughout the country would follow.

At secret meetings of the Assembly the Acting Premier, Chao Ping-Chun, explained the Government's policy in Tibet. He said he thought it best to allow the Dalai Lama to resume his former functions. The Government, he added, had already ordered the return of an expedition, headed by a Chinese Commissioner, which a short time ago to explain to the Tibetans republican principles, and also to emphasize the fact that the Chinese Government had no intention of altering Tibet's administrative system.

Efforts to learn something about A. Wendell Jackson in this city have been productive of little besides the fact that he is not known in the banking circles which would have to be consulted if any considerable loan were to be placed in this country. He is said to be an American civil engineer, who became familiar with Chinese affairs through an investigation of mining properties in Manchuria in 1907. He is said to be held in high esteem in China.

Mr. Jackson is credited with having seen an opportunity to act as broker in floating a big loan when it first became known that apparently insurmountable difficulties had arisen in the way of negotiations between China and the representatives of the six-power group. He cabled to the Chinese Government on July 1 an offer to arrange a loan on behalf of a powerful banking syndicate in this country, and subsequently left here for London to deal with the Chinese Minister there. Having obtained a provisional contract for a loan of $50,000,000 free from the restrictions imposed by the international bankers, Mr. Jackson set about to find capital to make his promises good. He asserted that Lloyd's Bank had agreed to advance the $2,500,000 which was to constitute the first payment.

The New York members of the international syndicate have hitherto refused to take Mr. Jackson's negotiations very seriously, saying that China would enter into negotiations with any one offering a loan. They say that Mr. Jackson has no financial backing of consequence in this country, and that he will not be able to place Chinese bonds here or abroad unless he can get the assurances which proved a stumbling block in the projected $300,000,000 loan.

SALES $100,000,000, PROFITS $150,000

PERKINS IN VOTING TRUST

Officials Admit That Some Concerns Were Advertised as "Independent" After Being Absorbed.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Although it sold $100,000,000 worth of farm implements, the International Harvester Company of America last year made only $150,000 in profits, or fifteen-hundredths of 1 per cent., according to R. C. Haskins, the President, who testified to-day before a special examiner in the Government's suit to dissolve the corporation under the Sherman anti-trust law.

Questions were asked by the Government attorneys to show that the International Harvester Company of America was merely the selling agent of the International Harvester Company of New Jersey, and that the latter company was to make all the money.

"Is it not your object to buy from the New Jersey corporation at such a price as will enable you to sell so that you will have neither a loss nor a profit?" asked Edwin P. Grosvenor, Special Assistant Attorney General.

"Our object is to buy as cheaply as we can and to make as much as possible. We try to buy from the New Jersey Company at prices we would get from any other company," replied Mr. Haskins.

"But you never have paid a dividend?"

"No, we never have."

Most of to-day's session was devoted to describing technical features of farm implements. Mr. Haskins said the company sold to agents with a 5 per cent. discount for cash, and the agent by adding his profit determined the price the farmer was to pay. One reason, Mr. Haskins explained, why the sales company made only $150,000, while it sold $100,000,000 worth of implements, was that it was constantly expanding its business and expending large sums for advertising.

Clarence S. Funk, General Manager of the International Harvester Company, testified that there hardly was a farm implement in the manufacture and sale of which competition did not exist.

"We have from forty to fifty competitors selling corn shellers," he said; "twenty-five producing motor vehicles, seventy-five producing cultivators, fifteen corn huskers, and three reapers. The field is pretty well covered by competitors."

Admissions were made by both Messrs. Haskins and Funk that some concerns were rated and advertised as independent even after they were absorbed. Mr. Haskins said that, although D. N. Osborne & Co. were absorbed in 1903, they were rated as independent in 1904 and 1905. Mr. Funk testified similarly regarding the Minnie Harvester Company of St. Paul.

The Government attorneys presented what purported to be an original agreement by which George W. Perkins, Cyrus H. McCormick, and Charles Deering formed a "voting trust," which placed them in control of the $140,000,000 corporation. The agreement, dated Aug. 12, 1902, was for ten years, and expired only a few weeks ago. It was introduced to show that to these three men all the stock had been turned over so they had sole voting power.

Another exhibit purported to show that Mr. Perkins was Chairman of the corporation's Finance Committee, and that of the six members of that committee four were Directors in the Steel Corporation and members of the Steel Corporation's Finance Committee, namely, E. H. Gary, Norman B. Ream, George F. Baker, and Mr. Perkins.

Another exhibit tended to show that Mr. Perkins, Cyrus H. McCormick, and Charles Deering held all the stock of the International Harvester Company of America, the selling company of the International Harvester Company of New Jersey.

BETWEEN "nosegay" and "gay nose" the difference is but one of words, but of the way they're put together. A Stein-Bloch Suit may be mimicked in cloth, color and cut, but, like every work of art and of heart, "back of the canvas that throbs, the painter is hinted and hidden—into the statue that breathes, the soul of the sculptor is bidden."

237 Fifth Ave., Bet. 27th and 28th Sts.

In one sense, all of our optical stores are alike. The same articles are carried; the same attention to detail in meeting the requirements of our patrons is observed; the same careful methods prevail; and the prices (always "right") are uniform, whether in Fifth Avenue, 23rd St., 42nd St., or Madison Avenue.

In the sense that one store may be larger and somewhat better adapted to certain things than another, the Fifth Avenue Store is different. It has been built by us for our own purposes, and is the finest store we have. In other respects, absolutely the same as the others—prices included.

For thirty-seven years our headquarters have been at 23rd St. and Fourth Avenue. We shall retain a store at that address for the convenience of those in that section, but our "base," from now on, will be in the new building.

It will please us (and we hope the pleasure will be mutual) to see our present 23rd St. customers—there are 172,326 of them—make use of the new store's facilities. All prescription records are available there; but the store used is purely a matter of convenience to the individual.

Eyeglass wearers may be sure of the best service in any of our branches.

SAYS REPUBLICANS LAID OUT HIGHWAYS

And First Route Was "Expedited" Under Hughes, Declares Attorney General Carmody.

PRECEDENT FOR DEMOCRATS

No Question of Constitution, He Asserts—Gov. Dix Will Answer Attacks on Administration Later.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 17.—Excitement on Capitol Hill over the attacks on the administrative methods employed by Gov. Dix's Highway Commission has not quieted down. The records in the Controller's office and Highway Department are being gone over thoroughly in the effort to disprove the charges. When Gov. Dix, who returned to the city to-day, was asked about the accusations of extravagance, favoritism, &c., he simply replied that he would have a statement later.

Attorney General Carmody gave out a statement this afternoon in reply to the published statement that the Attorney General permitted "the diversion of $13,995,000 by legislative bills, creating expedited routes through favored sections of the State, in direct violation of constitutional provisions."

Mr. Carmody declares that "this statement is such a gross perversion of the facts that it is difficult to believe that it could find its way into public print."

Then he goes on:

"The fact is that the $13,995,000 referred to as diverted by the Legislature for expedited routes was appropriated by the Legislature of 1911 out of the $50,000,000 highway fund to build roads laid out by a Republican Legislature in accordance with the recommendations of a Republican Highway Commission.

"Under Gov. Hughes the policy was adopted of expediting these routes laid out by the Legislature, and $100,000 was appropriated for that purpose. The succeeding Democratic administration followed precisely this plan in appropriating this sum for roads laid out by a Republican Legislature.

"It was the constitutionality of the act making these appropriations that was attacked in the proceeding referred to. This, of course, challenged the constitutionality of the act of Gov. Hughes's administration, which made a lesser appropriation for the same purpose. It occurred to me that I might safely follow on constitutional questions the opinion of Gov. Hughes, whose knowledge of constitutional law and whose integrity on public questions will not be assailed, even by the author of the article in question.

"The County of Albany undertook to stop the building of these highways, expedited by the present administration. The Attorney General appeared, as it was his duty, as counsel for the Highway Commission, the Republican body against which this proceeding was directed. The Court of Appeals sustained the contention of the Attorney General and dismissed the proceeding on the ground that the County of Albany was not a proper party to test the law."

Mr. Carmody says that of the $27,000,000 spent prior to the establishment of the present commission "over 60 per cent. went into a very few counties where powerful political leaders lived, leaving unprovided for other counties not fortunate enough to have such political influence."

The present Democratic Highway Commission during its existence of fourteen months has made contracts for 1,847.5 miles of highways, according to a statement given out to-day by the commission.

The former Republican commission, it is said, put under contract in twenty-nine months 1,049.7 miles.

"The average cost per mile of the 1,049.7 miles, let by the old commission, was $11,452," says the commission, "and the average cost per mile of the 1,847.5 miles let by the present commission is $12,236. This additional average cost of $785 per mile is due primarily to the increased cost of labor and materials and to a considerable degree to the so-called Allen bill, providing for the construction of State and county highways in second class cities, which involves expensive types to meet the heavy traffic conditions."

HOUNDED TO DEATH, HE SAYS

Baltimore Banker Holds Yellow Journal Responsible for Suicide.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 17.—Declaring in his last letter that he had been hounded to death by "a yellow newspaper," George C. Morrison, President of the Title Trust and Guarantee Company, Vice President of the Baltimore Trust Company, Chairman of the Democratic Auxiliary Committee, and counselor and a Director of the Maryland Jockey Club, committed suicide last night at the Baltimore Athletic Club.

Supt. A. E. Glocker of the club found Mr. Morrison's body in bed, covered with blankets. In the dead banker's mouth was the end of a tube, connecting with a chandelier in the centre of the room, and his hand still clutched the rubber, evidently in determination to keep it in place. Strapped under his chin by an ingenious harness of adhesive plaster was a loaded revolver, with the muzzle of the weapon resting just below the point of the chin.

Whether Mr. Morrison had intended to use the weapon, but had been overcome by the gas before he could pull the trigger, never will be known. Worry over the constant mention of his name as one who has backed the Havre de Grace race track, it is believed, drove him to the deed.

In letters which he left he said that he was dying because he could not stand the strain of the criticism. At the end of a letter addressed to the public, he says:

"I am answerable only to my God. He knows whether it is just for the self-denying work of years to be set at naught by the onslaughts of a yellow newspaper against which there is no defense."

Mr. Morrison's financial and political friends speak of him in the highest terms. He always stood for clean sports, and also for clean politics.

In the fight between Senator Rayner and the then Gov. Smith, he stood for the former, and, as a member of the Legislature, helped elect him. He had declined to be a candidate either for Mayor of Baltimore or Governor of the State. Only recently Mr. Morrison had been selected Chairman of the Democratic Presidential Campaign Committee in Maryland. He was 42 years old.

A Philadelphia newspaper and a Baltimore newspaper, probably actuated solely by a desire to create a sensation, began the present war on the Havre de Grace track, and the men connected with it, most of whom are prominent in Democratic political circles.

MADE OIL PRESIDENT WITH NOTHING TO DO

Samuel G. Bayne Got a Salary, but Declares He Gave No Attention to Security Co. Affairs.

DEFIES THE COMMISSIONER

Seaboard Bank President Refuses to Answer Untermyer's Questions in Waters-Pierce Suit.

Samuel G. Bayne, President of the Seaboard National Bank, who was President of the Security Oil Company from its organization in 1903 to 1911, declared yesterday that he knew practically nothing of its affairs when he was called as a witness in the litigation over the control of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company. Most of the things he was asked about he said he never knew, as they didn't interest him, many others he couldn't remember, and the few facts he was able to give were derived chiefly from a memorandum he had obtained during the luncheon hour from Frederick W. Weller, who was Vice President of Security Oil, and is now President of the Standard Oil Company of Louisiana.

Other questions Mr. Bayne refused to answer. When Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the Pierce interests, asked him why, he refused to give any reason or told him it was "none of his business." When A. L. Jacobs, the Commissioner representing the Missouri court, directed him to answer, he said he would take no instructions from him. He even refused to permit the Weller memorandum to be marked for identification. His refusals will be certified to the court for contumacy, as will those of S. D. Bushnell, President of four of the former subsidiaries of the Standard Oil Company, who was again a witness yesterday. Mr. Bushnell's refusals were based on the ground that the subjects inquired into were personal, but he did not adopt the defiant attitude of Mr. Bayne.

All Goes Back to Standard Oil.

The Pierce interests contend that the Security Oil Company was owned by the London Commercial Investment and Trading Company, which was owned by the Anglo-American Oil Company, which was owned by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. Last year the Security, as well as the Corsicana Oil Company, was adjudged to be violating the laws of Texas and the property of both companies was sold under a decree of the Texas court.

It was bought by John C. Seeley and transferred to a new corporation, the Magnolia Petroleum Company. This last company has just been indicted for violation of the Texas law. The purpose of going into the affairs of the Security Oil Company is to show that there has been no real dissolution of the Oil Trust and that all the companies are still controlled by the same group of men who dominated the old monopoly.

Mr. Bayne gave an inkling of what kind of a witness he was going to be right at the outset. Mr. Untermyer asked him how long he had been President of the Seaboard National Bank. He said he couldn't remember, but after some urging, said it was about 25 years. Then Mr. Untermyer undertook to show that the bank was a Standard Oil institution.

"Your bank has long had close relations with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, hasn't it?" he asked.

"I don't think the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has any account with us," replied Mr. Bayne.

"With which Standard Oil Company has it had close relations?"

"It has held some accounts of purchasing agents, that is all."

Mr. Bayne denied that the bank and the oil company had any Directors in common, but admitted that there were stockholders in the Standard Oil Company who had stock in the bank. He said H. H. Rogers had never been a depositor, but admitted that a large account had stood in the name of Miss Harrison, Mr. Rogers's secretary. He didn't know whether William Rockefeller had had any dealings with the bank or not. It had had no dealings with John D. Archbold personally, but he was interested in some small matters in which the bank had had some unimportant dealings. James A. Moffett, he thought, was a depositor, and Joseph Seep, whom he described as the largest purchaser of crude oil in the country, had an account there. Then the trouble started with the apparently innocuous question whether other Standard Oil purchasing agents had accounts.

Flatly Refuses to Answer.

"I refuse to answer," said Mr. Bayne.

"On what ground?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"It's none of your business," replied Mr. Bayne, leaning forward and looking Mr. Untermyer in the eye. Commissioner Jacobs interposed, and Mr. Bayne said he didn't know whether other purchasing agents had accounts or not. Mr. Untermyer took up the Security Oil Company, asking Mr. Bayne if he was one of the organizers.

"I believe I was," was the reply. Mr. Untermyer asked what was the capital stock, and Mr. Bayne referred to the memorandum and answered that it was $1,500,000. Mr. Untermyer wanted to know what the memorandum was, and Mr. Bayne said he had gone to Mr. Weller's office during the recess to get the figures, as he had forgotton them and thought it might appear strange that he didn't know these fundamental facts about a company of which he had long been President. He said it contained other facts of the same kind, and Mr. Untermyer asked him to read it.

"I won't read it," he said. "I refuse."

Mr. Untermyer appealed to the Commissioner, and H. Aaron, Mr. Bayne's personal counsel, called out:

"You don't need to read it if you don't want to."

The Commissioner ordered it read, but Mr. Bayne persisted in his refusal. Then he refused Mr. Untermyer's request that it be marked for identification, although Commissioner Jacobs directed him to hand it to the stenographer for that purpose.

"Do you remember," asked Mr. Untermyer, "that the property of the Security Oil Company was transferred to you by Burt and by you transferred to the company?"

"I do not," said Mr. Bayne.

"If you knew so little about the transaction as you say, why did you sign the papers?"

"Because I was to be President of the company and receive a salary. Burt said we were going to refine oil at Beaumont, Texas."

"What did you do as President?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"I won't say that I looked dignified—" began Mr. Bayne.

"We will have to have less levity," declared Mr. Untermyer, and Commissioner Jacobs again cautioned the witness.

"I didn't do anything," declared Mr. Bayne. He refused to say what salary he received.

"Was it large?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"I have refused to answer," said Mr. Bayne, "and you won't find out from me what it was."

"It doesn't rest with you to say whether you will answer questions or not," said Mr. Untermyer. "That depends on the court."

"It will depend on the court afterward," retorted Mr. Bayne. "You've nothing to say about it now."

Mr. Bayne said he thought he bought a share of stock when he became President, but didn't remember who he bought it from, how much he paid for it, whom he sold it to, or when.

"You were merely a figurehead, were you?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"No; I was not," declared Mr. Bayne. "You are trying to betlittle me, and it is not gentlemanly."

"You say you didn't do anything as President. If that isn't a figurehead, what is one?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"I am not obliged to tell you my definition of a figurehead," said Mr. Bayne, "nor shall I do it."

"Did you ever attend a Directors' meeting?"

"I was never within a thousand miles of one."

He said he had never attended a stockholders' meeting either, and Mr. Untermyer persisted that he was a figurehead.

"I think you're as much of a figurehead here as I am," said Mr. Bayne.

Refuses to be Instructed.

"We'll stop right here and take this man to court and compel him to answer questions," said Mr. Untermyer. Everybody began to talk at once, and Commissioner Jacobs said:

"You will take your instructions from me."

"I will not take any instructions from you," retorted the witness.

"If this witness is going to be fractious," said the Commissioner, "we might as well certify him to the court for contumacy now."

Things gradually quieted down, however, and the examination proceeded. Mr. Bayne said he had never seen a statement of the company's affairs. He found from his memorandum that there was a bond issue of $2,500,000, but said he knew nothing of the details of the issue, who was the trustee for the mortgage, or for what the bonds were issued.

"Did anybody ever consult with you concerning the company's affairs?"

"Never," declared Mr. Bayne, emphatically. He said he believed the company had an office in New York, but didn't know where. He took the bonds to London and delivered them to a man named Jecks, who was solicitor for the London Commercial Investment and Trading Company. He had no recollection of delivering the stock at the same time, and couldn't remember who told him to deliver the bonds. No explanation had been given to him as to why he was to deliver them. The London company, he said, he understood to be backing the project. He didn't know that it was owned by the Anglo-American Oil Company or that the latter was owned by the Standard Oil Company.

"Have you told us all you can recall of the affairs of the Security Oil Company?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"All that is on the surface of my mind. I might think of other details."

"Will you think it over overnight?"

"No, I won't," said Mr. Bayne. "Why should I? It doesn't interest me."

When Mr. Untermyer expressed surprise that as President he did not keep informed, he said:

"I opened the ball by saying I had no duties and assumed none as President. I was responsible to myself for what I did and not to you. I don't want any lectures."

"Did Senator Bailey of Texas prepare the incorporation papers?"

"I don't know. I think he was employed in connection with the title of the company."

"Was he employed by you to draw the charter?"

Mr. Bayne refused to answer this question, and refused to give his reasons for doing so. He remembered meeting Senator Bailey at his bank in connection with the business. He declared that Bailey did not come from the Standard Oil Company office, which is next door to the bank, and knew nothing about his having been employed by the Standard Oil Company. All he could remember that Bailey did was to talk with him about selecting a title or name for the company.

"Didn't you pay him $5,000 for this service?"

"I don't remember"

"Was he paid by your direction?"

"No."

"How much was he paid?"

"I don't know."

Mr. Bayne will continue his testimony to-day. He was preceded on the stand yesterday by Mr. Bushnell, who was questioned further about the four pipe line companies of which he became President after the dissolution decree. He saw nothing strange about his election in all four companies.

"Don't you know," asked Mr. Untermyer, "that it was due to the common ownership of the companies and the fact that their properties constituted one continuous line?"

Mr. Bushnell replied in the negative. Mr. Untermyer brought out that each of the pipe line companies had paid dividends of from 5 to 30 per cent. since the dissolution last December, and asked if the dividends were declared by the new Directors, each owning one share of stock and in the aggregate from five to nine shares in the respective companies, without consulting anybody. Mr. Bushnell said they had. He said it had never occurred to him to consult the stockholders owning the rest of the $24,000,000 of stock. He refused to say what his present salary was and Commissioner Jacobs stated that his refusal would be certified to the court. This seemed to amuse Col. Stewart greatly, and Commissioner Jacobs took exception to his demonstration of mirth.

"This proceeding is not funny," said he, "and decorum must be preserved."

"I know exactly what I'm doing," declared Col. Stewart, hotly. "If a matter strikes me as funny, I shall smile as often as I like. I take your remarks in bad part."

"I think we shall have to exclude Mr. Stewart from the room," interposed Mr. Untermyer.

"You talk ex cathedra," continued Col. Stewart, addressing the Commissioner, "but I've got something to say. Nobody can tell me what I shall do."

D. N. Kirby, counsel for the Standard Oil contingent, smoothed matters over and Col. Stewart subsided.

It developed that Mr. Bushnell received a salary from each of the four companies, but that it was paid in one check by George Chesebrough, who is Secretary of all of them. Mr. Bushnell didn't know of any resolution of the boards authorizing an increase in his salary. He said he had consulted Mr. Moffett about this increase before he was made President. Mr. Moffett told him what his salary would be, and he arranged it with Mr. Chesebrough about a month after he became President. He didn't consult the board at that time, but acted on what Mr. Moffett had said.

"What control did you understand Mr. Moffett to have over the funds of the four companies at the time your salary was increased?"

"I don't know that I understood he had any."

"But you hadn't any authority for the increase except that of Mr. Moffett?"

"I was told that the position would pay a certain salary," was the only explanation Mr. Bushnell had to make.

Mr. Untermyer asked him why the pipe line companies, "now that they are free lances," hadn't extended their service to reach refineries other than those of former Standard Oil subsidiaries or to other oil fields. He said he didn't think the condition of production would warrant the expense.

MRS. BOYNTON GETS DIVORCE

Wife of Real Estate Man Granted Decree in Reno—Mrs. Baker Waiting.

Special to The New York Times.

RENO, Nev., Sept. 17.—Gertrude L. Boynton appeared to-day before Judge Orr and won an absolute decree of divorce from Carl B. Boynton, a real estate dealer of New York City. Her husband's neglect to provide for her was the cause.

The court ignored Mrs. Boynton's allegation of desertion. Her husband filed an answer, but made no opposition.

Mrs. Boynton testified that she was married at Bayside, L. I., June, 1903, and separation occurred there May, 1910. She alleged that her husband had a good income and was abundantly able to support her, but he told her he wanted to be free, and they had better live apart. She said he was not a home-loving, affectionate man, and her past year with him was unhappy. They had no children, and she sought no alimony.

Julia B. Baker, a woman of middle age, after living in retirement with her maid in a cottage here, has just filed divorce complaint against her husband, John B. Baker, said to be a stock operator in New York City. She alleges non-support since January, 1911. The property differences of the couple have been adjusted out of court. The trial is set for next Saturday.

The plaintiff possesses extensive landed interests throughout Pennsylvania.

PURE FOOD ISSUE RAISED BY WILSON

Stands by Dr. Wiley and Blames Roosevelt and Taft for Hampering His Work.

IOWANS WON BY GOVERNOR

Pledges, as Schoolmaster, to Tell Facts to People—Meets Many Bull Moosers at Sioux City.

Special to The New York Times.

ON BOARD THE WILSON TRAIN, Sioux Falls, S. D., Sept. 17.—Gov. Wilson's promise that he would take up what he called the "abandoned issues" on his trip to the Middle West, was carried out in part to-day when he pushed the pure food issue to the front. eH took a position squarely in line with that of Dr. Wiley, and assailed both Roosevelt and Taft for hampering his efforts to compel food manufacturers to abandon evil practices. He dealt particularly with Col. Roosevelt's attitude in the controversy over benzoate of soda, declaring that the Remsen board of experts was used to confuse the real fight of Dr. Wiley against the sale of impure food.

He also used this example of the employment of an expert board to defeat the general good, as a warning against entrusting other things of importance to the people, such as the tariff and the control of the trusts, to other Government boards.

It was at the Inter-State Fair at Sioux City, Iowa, that he first brought up the food question.

"Everybody now suspects," he said, "and the suspicion is based upon a great many facts that can be established by proof, that these pure food laws are not lived up to, that the inspection is not always what it ought to be, and that a great many things are permitted to be done which nullify the pure food laws.

"I suppose that most of you know that a great controversy arose because Dr. Wiley, who was in charge of the pure food administration, objected to the use of benzoate of soda in certain things that were sold to you, particularly in cans for food. Now a very nice thing occurred. The gentlemen who wanted to use benzoate of soda persuaded the President, Mr. Roosevelt, that this was a scientific question, and, therefore, he ought to have a board of chemists to determine it. And Mr. Roosevelt picked out some of the most eminent and honest chemists in this country, headed by a personal friend of mine, the President of Johns Hopkins University, and submitted to them this question: 'Is benzoate of soda hurtful to the human stomach or to the human digestion when taken internally?'

"Observe that that was the only question submitted to them, and that was exactly what the people who wanted to use benzoate of soda for wrongful purposes wanted to limit the inquiry to. These gentlemen had to say that benzoate of soda in itself was not harmful to the human system, as I believe it is not. But they were not asked this question: 'Can benzoate of soda be used to conceal putrifaction, can it be used to things that have gone bad, to conceal the fact that they have gone bad, and to induce people to put them in their stomachs after they had gone bad?' They were not asked that question because if they had been they would have said, 'Yes, it can be used in that way,' and Dr. Wiley knew that it was so used in that way.

"I want to warn the people of this country to beware of commissions of experts. I have lived with experts all my life and I know that experts don't see anything except what is under their microscopes, under their eye. They don't even perceives what is under their noses, and an expert feels in honor bound to confine himself to the particular question which you have asked him.

"Suppose you wanted to settle the liquor question by asking a body of experts whether alcohol was poison or not. I believe they would have to tell you that it isn't poison. But does that settle the liquor question? There are a great many things that you can take into your stomach that are not poison that will make you crazy."

Turning to trusts, the speaker distinguished between "big business" and trusts. He referred to the success of Andrew Carnegie in the steel business and declared that when Mr. Carnegie's competitors found they could not undersell him because he had more brains in running the business, they bought him out at four or five times the value of his property and then in what they charged afterward for the product they made the consumers pay interest on the four or five times the amount of the value of the property which they had paid him.

"There is a difference between a big business and a trust," he went on. "A trust is a big business that has an arrangement to get rid of competition and a big business survives competition by conquering in the field of intelligence and economy. I am for big business and I am against the trusts."

The Governor's campaigning day began at Onawa, Iowa, in the midst of the corn belt, where some hundreds of people stepped out from the seemingly limitless fields of corn. From there into Sioux City he saw many crowds. He had missed some in the night, but will not again, as he gave orders to be awakened whenever any were gathered at stations.

The journey from Sioux City to Sioux Falls across the South Dakota State line was a continual series of ovations from groups of people gathered in the dark at village railroad stations.

One aged Democrat pressed close to Gov. Wilson while he was speaking from the rear end of his car. As he reached to shake his hans the man passed to him two silver dollars.

"Campaign contribution from an old Democrat," he called out. "What's your name?" Gov. Wilson asked. "We need your name for our records so yqou can get a certificate."

The old man shook his head and dropped back into the darkness.

"Rats" He Says of Moose Plan.

The train on which Gov. Wilson same to Sioux Falls was a special hired by the people so that they might hear their candidate and permit him ti pick up his regular schedule to-morrow at Minneapolis. Edwin S. Johnson, the Demicratic candidate for Governor of South Dakota, had Gov. Wilson in charge, and Gov. Wilson pleaded for votes for Johnson on the ground that Johnson was an old and much-admired friend.

In the audience of 3,500 people who packed the largest hall in Sioux Falls to hear Gov. Wilson there was hardly a voter with a starched collar on. The men were mostly farmers right off their farms. They were intently interested in the campaign issues. They cheered Gov. Wilson's arraignment of the Roosevelt policies, and when the Governor said that the only word he knew of to characterize the Roosevelt proposal to take the trusts into Governmental partnership was "Rats," the crowd went wild. "Roosevelt should tell it to the marines," he insisted, and the people cheered themselves hoarse. Aftr his first speech the Governor had to make a second to an overflow audience.

Faced by Many Bull Moosers.

In campaigning through Iowa to-day Gov. Wilson and his Democratic associates found themselves in the heart of a Bull Moose stamping ground. The committees which came aboard Gov. Wilson's private car to welcome him into Sioux City were non-partisan, several of the members wearing Bull Moose badges. From the crowds which greeted him as he stepped from his train there arose frequent bellowings, presumed to be imitations of the Bull Moose call. At the fair grounds, where he made his principal address, the little copper Bull Moose emblems were worn on many coat lapels.

For all the evident Bull Moose sentiment, however, the people showed an open-hearted willingness to hear what the Democratic candidate had to say. They joined heartily, wherever they had a chance, in declaring that Taft had no show. They cheered Gov. Wilson only slightly when he arrived, but a great deal when he went away. He looked squarely into the faces of the big, smiling Northwestern farmers. They looked carefully over him, and each seemed to like the other.

Except for his evening speech, which was scheduled for Sioux Falls, Gov. Wilson throughout the day was in the hands of non-political organizations. The Tribe of the Sioux, a Sioux City organization of "boosters," initiated him in the morning, and he took a pledge that he would "always be a good Indian whether or not successful in the hunt for Bull Moose and other large game." When the Governor had taken the oath upon a sacred tomahawk the Sioux Chief presented him with a jeweled arrowhead as the emblem of his fellowship in the order.

"The Doctor told us Sanatogen is just what you need for your nerves"

UNCONSCIOUSLY, perhaps, thousands of men and women, in their desire to forge ahead and accomplish, find themselves suddenly approaching the brink of nervous breakdown.

And how many men and women—under just such circumstances—look back with gratitude to the friendly interest that told them of the remarkable revitalizing and upbuilding powers of Sanatogen, the food-tonic.

If your nerves are to be kept keyed up and brimming with the health that permits you to keep in the van these strenuous days—they must be fed. When nerves lose their vitality—due to overwork, worry or illness—other normal bodily functions also become impaired. Restless sleep, disturbed digestion, physical lassitude, insomnia, are all directly traceable to nerve tire. Sanatogen is intended especially to combat the debilitating ravages of nerve exhaustion. Its scientific combination of purest protein and organic phosphorus—in readily assimilable form—imposes no tax upon digestion—no artificial, harmful stimulation. Sanatogen is just pure concentrated energy and food—replenishing the strength and reserve of the overtaxed nervous system, helping other food to digest and nourish.

Over 16,000 physicians have placed the seal of their written endorsement upon Sanatogen as the real, the scientific food and tonic. YOU may find the answer to your nerve troubles in its use.

Ladylike Remarks for Men

¶ It may be said of a woman that she seldom fails to make the most of herself. She is a past master in the art of wearing clothes.

¶ Though a woman be so small of stature that one might put her in his coat pocket she is never insignificant.

¶ And more often than not, a woman's ability in hats and frocks is in inverse ratio to her looks.

¶ Which explains why the most charming women in the world are not always the prettiest.

¶ Now, you may say that a woman's passion for dress is the sheerest vanity, but what is man's negligence in dress but conceit?

¶ For if it be true that a beautiful woman who spends a fortune on clothes is but gilding the lily, how shall you excuse a man's indifference to his personal appearance who is only a sunflower to begin with?

¶ No man can afford to to be negligent of his personal appearance, no matter what his station in life may be; he owes it to himself, to his family, to his business and to society to dress to advantage, whether at the office or at the opera.

¶ And no man can afford to overlook Saks' clothes who wants that exclusiveness of style in his garments which shall entitle him to the distinction of being a well dressed man.

¶ Our Fall styles will easily convince you of that.

FIERCE BATTLE IN HUNGARIAN CHAMBER

LEGISLATORS LIKE MADMEN

Six Policemen in Some Cases Needed to Remove One Deputy—Count Karolyi Faints After Freeing Himself.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 17.—The Hungarian Parliament, which began its session to-day, was the scene this afternoon of a free fight between police and Deputies. The violence was unprecedented, and the din of trumpets, motor horns, and cowbells continued all day long.

Count Stephen Tisza, President of the lower house, who was jeered from the moment he entered the Chambr, surrendered the chair at 3 o'clock to Vice President Beothy, but the uproar did not abate. At 4 o'clock a strong force of police entered the building. Count Tisza, who was in the lobby, declared that he would summon the police into the Chamber itself if necessary. This was eventually done.

A Commandant of Police called upon individual Opposition Deputies to leave the House. About 100 of them gathered in the middle of the Chamber, while their leaders, Count Apponyi and Count Zichy, stood at the gangways, and were joined there by Count Andrassy and Count Semsey, who are not affiliated with any particular party. All attempts to induce the Deputies to depart peaceably failed. The police advanced to expell them, and a terrific struggle ensued, in which fists were used freely.

In some cases it required as many as six policemen to remove a single struggling legislator. One had an arm nearly pulled from its socket. Count Karolyi, who has had several experiences of the kind, struck out like a madman and succeeded in freeing himself from the police at the door. He rushed back, and fell fainting on a bench.

After a prolonged struggle, only Count Apponyi and fourteen Deputies were left. The Count told the Police Commandant that they would depart voluntarily if the police went first. This was done. The seats, which had been piled up as barricades, were restored to their places, and the Government Deputies returned to the Chamber.

Count Tisza then addressed the Deputies, declaring that business could not be carried on, nor could it be checked, by means of children's trumpets, and the discussion of finances was resumed.

The Socialist Party has decided to hold a street demonstration to-morrow evening in favor of universal suffrage.

Stormy scenes were witnessed in the Hungarian Parliament at its closing sittings in June, which culminated in an attempt being made to assassinate Count Tisza. The President of the Chamber was shot at three times by an Opposition Deputy, Julius Kovacs, who then fired two bullets into his body, wounding himself seriously. The Count escaped unharmed.

Count Tisza was elected Speaker on May 2[illegible]. He is an opponent of universal suffrage, and on this issue his election was contested with a bitterness that resulted in violence in the Chamber and in bloodshed in the streets.

FOR SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE.

More German Ships Ordered—Steamship Company to Increase Capital.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—Further evidence of Germany's constantly growing interest in South American trade is seen in the announcement to-day that the Hamburg-South American Steamship Company is about to increase its capital from $2,500,000 to $6,250,000.

The company simultaneously announces that it has ordered three large new freight vessels for the South American trade from the Blohm & Voss dockyard at Hamburg.

Including the four vessels now building for the Norddeutscher Lloyd Company, this makes seven great ships contracted for in the past six or seven months for the German-South American carrying trade.

ENGLISH TRAIN DISASTER.

Sixteen Killed by Derailing of Express from Chester to Liverpool.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 17.—Thirteen persons were instantly killed and fifty injured by the derailing this evening of the express from Chester to Liverpool, at Ditton Junction, about eight miles from Liverpool. Three of the injured died tonight.

The train had passed over the long bridge spanning the Mersey, and was running down the incline leading to the junction when, at the cross-over point, the engine jumped the rails and crashed into the buttress of a bridge spanning the line.

The coupling of the car next the engine parted, and the train of nine cars sped on to the station. The leading cars crashed into the platform with terrific force and were wrecked. One car was overturned and caught fire. In spite of the efforts of a fire brigade it was soon consumed. Several bodies in this car were cremated, but some of the injured were rescued from the windows.

The engine driver was crushed to death between the engine and tender, and the fireman had both legs broken. He was pinned under the locomotive for two hours.

Hundreds of laborers and railway employes took part in the work of rescue, while the waiting rooms were turned into an emergency hospital.

The work of extricating the dead and injured by the light of bonfires was continued until a late hour. All the passengers in the first two cars were killed. The fourth car became a roaring furnace, and the cries of the injured and appeals for help, together with the difficulty in taking the passengers from the wreckage, caused dreadful scenes.

Several of the bodies are still unidentified but apparently all on the train were local residents.

AMERICAN FIRM'S TRIUMPH.

German Heartburning Over Contract Won by Bethlehem Company.

HAMBURG, Sept. 17.—A party of engineers from the Bethlehem Steel Company arrived here to-day to arrange for the installation of fourteen-inch guns, armor, and projectiles on the new Greek armored cruiser, the hull of which is to be built at the Vulkan Shipbuilding Yards at Stettin.

The contract to supply the armor and guns for the warship, which is to have a displacement of 14,500 tons, was given to the Bethlehem Company, while the Vulkan yard, which competed with the American concern, obtained only the contract for the hull and the engines.

The fact that the Americans obtained the most important contract has caused heartburning among the German steel firms, which had steadily asserted that German naval guns were so markedly superior that the eleven-inch and twelve-inch guns made here were equivalent to the twelve-inch and fourteen-inch guns of foreign makers.

Third Dreadnought for Argentina.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 17.—In spite of the opposition of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Argentine Senate to-day adopted a resolution ordering the construction of a third dreadnought.

A NEW ALTITUDE RECORD.

Legagneux Ascends 18,766 Feet—Takes Only 10 Minutes to Descend.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—The well-known airman Georges Legagneux to-day beat the height record, ascending in a monoplane 18,766 feet in 45 minutes. He came down at dizzy speed, taking ten minutes to do it, and landed at Villacoublay, near Versailles. M. Legagneux afterward said:

"I was surprised to find how easy my upward progress was. I made no special preparations, beyond putting on a couple of heavy sweaters and taking a supply of oxygen.

"I mounted very fast for the first 10,000 feet, which I reached in thirteen minutes. After that, owing to the rarity of the atmosphere, I went much slower, but I had absolutely no difficulty with the engine. When about 16,000 feet high I tried my oxygen, but I do not think it was necessary.

"When I had reached well over 18,000 feet I cut the engine off and came down in a spiral volplane. I do not think I will attempt to break my record, but I feel confident that I could fly 4½ miles high on another attempt."

Roland Garros last Sept. 6 attained a height of 16,240 feet at Trouville. The rarified atmosphere at that height caused his engine to stop, and he had to volplane to the ground.

M. Legagneux has been prominent in French aviation circles for the past four years. On Dec. 9, 1910, he established an altitude record by ascending 10,499 feet.

TO STUDY OUR TELEPHONES.

German Officials Coming in Order to Learn American Methods.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—Three engineering officials of the German Post Office Department are about to sail for the United States in order to investigate American telephone systems. They will be gone five weeks, and will visit New York, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, Chicago, and Columbus.

The trip is undertaken with a view to introducing radical and much-needed reforms in the antiquated German telephone system. Telephones are cheap in Germany, but have few other virtues. The average office and house telephone in the biggest cities costs $50 a year, and long-distance messages, regardless of mileage, cost 25 cents apiece between any points for three minutes.

In other respects the service is abominable. Telephoning after 10 o'clock at night in cities costs 5 cents extra per conversation, and connections are possible only after a delay of three to five minutes, owing to the reduction of the daytime staff by about 75 per cent.

American telephones are regarded in Germany as the best in the world, and the hopes and prayers of business men and householders accompany the Post Office Department's Commissioners to America.

BIG SOCIALIST FUND.

Party Raised Over $600,000 for the Last Reichstag Elections.

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—That Socialism is not above tapping a big campaign barrel was vividly brought out by the balance sheet of the German Social Democrats, presented at the party's annual congress at Chemnitz.

The Treasurer reported to the congress that the Reichstag elections last January, which resulted in Socialism's greatest triumph, cost over $600,000. Two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars was supplied from the funds of the National Committee and the rest was derived from contributions from members of thousands of local organizations.

No other party in Germany commands or spends as much for elections as the Social Democracy. The so-called "political organization," from which election funds come, numbers now over a million members.

MAYOR FORBIDS PROCESSION

But Manifestants Gather at The Hague and Make Attempt to March to Houses of Parliament.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 17.—The opening of Parliament by Queen Wilhelmina to-day was marked by a demonstration organized by the Socialist Party in favor of unlimited general suffrage.

The Socialists held a procession last year, when Parliament reassembled and presented a petition with 320,000 signatures to the Government urging general suffrage.

The Mayor, on learning to-day that another demonstration was planned, refused permission for such a manifestation on a day which was regarded as a national festival. The Socialists declared this to be a check upon their rights, organized meetings on Sunday in favor of general suffrage and an eight-hour working day, and called upon the people to assemble to-day outside the Parliament Buildings to hold a "silent manifestation for unlimited enfranchisement."

From 20,000 to 25,000 answered the call this afternoon, including many women from all parts of the country. There were numerous banners, and every person wore a ribbon with the inscription "We want the general vote for men and women."

From sixteen platforms leaders addressed the crowd. The chief of the Socialist Party, M. Troelstra, said that, despite the prohibition of the Mayor, they would go to Parliament and make the walls shake with their cries for enfranchisement. The demonstrators then divided into ten parties, and singing, but with lowered banners, went in different directions toward the Parliament Houses, where both Chambers were assembled. The police, however, had taken extensive precautions, and barred all the approaches.

The manifestants, thus foiled, paraded the neighboring streets for hours. They twice attempted to break the police cordon, and the police repulsed them with bare swords. Several persons were slightly wounded, but there was no serious collision, and quiet was restored at 6 o'clock.

The Queen left Parliament without unusual incident and was greeted with cheers from a loyal crowd.

The Queen's speech announced that a revision of the Constitution was to be proposed, but made no allusion to the question of general suffrage.

The whole nation is anxiously looking forward to the introduction of a bill dealing with the revision of the Constitution. A State Commission was appointed last year to report on the subject. The three most important questions involved are a reform of the electoral system, alterations in the system of public instruction, and the position of the State toward the churches.

BADEN-POWELL TO WED.

Engagement of the Hero of Mafeking Is Announced.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—It is announced that Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell is engaged to marry Olive Symes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Symes of Parkstone, Dorset. The wedding will be celebrated before the end of the year.

MRS. LANGTRY WORRIED.

Fears She Must Leave Her Dog in England—A Dig at Mrs. "Pat."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—After Mrs. "Pat" Campbell's Pankypoo, Mrs. Langtry's Clinker.

Mrs. Langtry, who will sail for New York this week, has been moving heaven and earth to obtain from the Board of Agriculture a relaxation of the rules in regard to the quarantining of dogs entering England in favor of her terrier Clinker, which, she says, was presented to her by a royal personage.

"I cannot bear the thought of leaving him behind," said Lady De Bathe, "but the quarantine regulations prevent me from taking him. I am told that the only way to get a dog in or out is to smuggle it, and that I will not stoop to."

This may or may not have been intended as a dig at Mrs. "Pat."

FOR A MONUMENT TO WRIGHT

The French Aero Club Calls for Subscriptions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—A committee of the Aero Club of France makes a public appeal to-day for funds for the erection of a monument to Wilbur Wright at the Camp of Auvours, where the American aviation pioneer carried out his first remarkable flights in France. The committee has decided that the monument shall be a block of granite, inscribed simply with the name of Wright and the dates on which he made his important flights at Auvours. The granite block will be placed close to the spot where stood the rough wooden hut in which Wright lived.

The committee has also decided to present to the Paris Conservatoire of Arms and Crafts the aeroplane in which Wright made his flight of an hour and a half on Sept. 21, 1908. The committee, the American members of which are Hart O. Berg and Frank S. Lahn, consists of friends and admirers of the dead airman, who supported him from the moment he arrived in France.

It is announced that the smallest contribution to the memorial fund will be gratefully received at the Aero Club offices in Paris.

AMERICAN PRINCESS-ACTRESS

Princess Ibrahim Hassan Was Miss Humphrey of San Francisco.

Princess Ibrahim Hassan, who was mentioned in a telegram from Paris printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday, as about to open a theatre in Paris, has separated from her husband, who is a cousin of the Khédive of Egypt, and is at present attempting to make some arrangement with his family for her suitable maintenance.

This was learned from the Princess's lawyer, Vahan Cardashian, who also gave the information that the Princess is an American. Her name was Pearl Ola Jane Humphrey, and she is the daughter of Thomas Marshall Humphrey, a furniture manufacturer of San Francisco. At the time of her marriage to the Prince she was the divorced wife of Edwin Mordant and an actress on the English stage.

"Mrs. Mordant married the Prince on April 15, 1911, in a Registrar's office in London," said Mr. Cardashian yesterday. "A short time afterward he deserted her. I have written leters to his brother, Gen. Agiz Pasha of the Turkish Army, and she herself has been in communication with the Khédive. The latter saw her in London, and later in Paris, and promised to intercede on her behalf. He kept his word, but the Prince refused to have anything to do with her.

"According to the Mohammedan law, the Prince may divorce his wife in Cairo by simply expressing the desire to do so, but, on the other hand, he is supposed to support her suitably, and the fact that she is an American counts for a good deal. In fact, I shall try to interest the United States Government in the case."

A PLAN TO FIGHT OUR AUTOMOBILES

British Manufacturers Meet and Discuss Formation of Company to Build Cheap Light Cars.

A LARGE PREFERENCE FUND

$2,500,000 to be Used in an Attempt to Save the Colonial Markets for English Trade.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—At a meeting of British motor-car manufacturers held to-day to consider the importation of cheap American cars, a scheme was suggested for the formation of a company with a capital of $2,500,000 to produce cheap light cars to compete with the American product.

Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, who expressed approval of the scheme, said that after a visit to the United States he had come to the conclusion that, taken as a whole, neither individual motorists nor manufacturers in this country had any idea of the magnitude of the American motor-car trade. One firm in Detroit hoped to turn out 25,000 cars next year. It was therefore obvious that they were up against a proposition the like of which had not been seen before.

On the other hand, said Lord Montagu, he did not think they should be unduly alarmed. The point was, how were they, without doing anything unfair against foreign competition, to meet it and preserve their own trade? While some of them desired a change of Government, he did not think they could expect any aid from tariff reform for two or probably three years. By that time the invasion would either have taken place and have proved extremely formidable, or it would have been met and defeated.

Therefore, said Lord Montagu, he thought they must get together and form a company to build cheap, good cars.

No resolution was put to the meeting, but the hope was expressed that the British Motor Manufacturers' Association would take up the suggested scheme.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—Twenty leading British motor car manufacturers were present to-day at the luncheon given by Ralph D. Blumenfeld, editor of The Daily Express, which is promoting a movement against American automobiles.

While a majority of the manufacturers expressed confidence that the British firms had a firm grip on the business in high-class cars, they admitted that they could not, under the present conditions, compete with the United States in marketing cars selling at $1,000 and $1,250.

A letter sent by the Duke of Westminster, read at the luncheon, disclosed the fact that the Imperial Preference League is raising a fund of $2,500,000 to be used in preparing a propaganda in favor of an imperial tariff and an imperial preference scheme which would give some of the colonial market to British manufacturers.

There was much talk of gaining the colonial market. A difference of opinion prevailed regarding the quality of American low-priced cars. S. F. Edge, the well-known automobilist, contended that the British stopped an invasion of American bicycles and boots by producing better articles, but that American cars were in a different class.

LIBERTY STATUE FOR MANILA.

Swiss Sculptor's Work Completed and Awaits Inspection.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

GENEVA, Sept. 17.—The Statue of Liberty which the American Government will erect in Manila has been completed by the well-known Swiss sculptor, Kissling, whose design was chosen in an international competion. The statue, which will cost $58,000 when delivered in Manila, is a grandiose work in bronze, consisting of a series of life-size figures dominated by the Philippine national hero, José Rizal. The monument is now at the station at Wassen, awaiting inspection by a commission of American experts, and will be shipped to Manila on Friday.

POPE HONORS JOSEPH FREY.

Confers Knighthood of St. Gregory on New Yorker.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 17.—Joseph Frey of New York, President of the German Roman Catholic Central Verein, was informed to-day through the Most Rev. John Bonzano, Papal Delegate to the United States, who is attending the convention of the Verein in this city, that Pope Pius has cabled him to confer the Order of Knight of St. Gregory upon him for his interest in the welfare of the Roman Catholic Church. The formal presentation of the Knighthood upon Mr. Frey will take place later at the Papal Legation at Washington.

Mr. Frey, whose home is at 59 Washington Square South, is prominent in German and Catholic circles here. He is 57 years old. Mr. Frey is a manufacturer of artificial flowers, a Director of the German Exchange Bank, a member of the Liederkranz, Beethoven, and Catholic Clubs, President of the Central Catholic Society, and former President of the New York German Federation of Catholic Societies. Mr. Frey was born in Germany and came to this country fifty years ago. He has three sons and two daughters.

ROOSEVELT PLEDGES QUICK EXTRA SESSION

Would Summon Congress to Enact His Social Reform Programme for Federal District.

THUS SET PACE FOR STATES

Washington Would Be the Example City—Rough Riders Greet Their Old Chief in Arizona.

Special to The New York Times.

ON BOARD THE ROOSEVELT TRAIN, PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 17.—If Theodore Roosevelt is elected President, and can count enough votes in Congress—not necessarily those of his own party alone—he will immediately after his inauguration call an extra session of Congress to enact into the law the social and industrial welfare plans of the Progressive platform. He made this promise or threat before an audience of 2,500 people at Tucson to-day.

The plans he had in mind were those put into the Chicago platform after his conferences with Jane Addams, Paul Kellogg, Raymond Robbins, and others. They relate to an eight-hour day, minimum wage for women, abolition of child labor, &c. The Colonel is well aware that these reforms can only be carried out in full by the States, but he declared that an object lesson given by the Federal Government in the District of Columbia would have a powerful effect in forcing the adoption of the reforms in the several States.

Pledge of Immediate Action.

"If I am elected President," he said, "and I have in Congress anything like a party that will support me—if we even come pretty near carrying a Progressive Congress so that I can get enough recruits from the other parties to make it possible—I shall immediately call a special session to be devoted exclusively to putting into the Federal law every provision made in the plank dealing with industrial and social welfare, the plank dealing with Alaska and every other plank necessary to round out those two.

"In the first place, the Government itself should be made a model employer, we should have a workmen's compensation act, an act providing for the minimum wage, in short all those things applied to the Government service, applied in the Post Office Department, in the Navy Department, at Panama, everywhere.

"In the next place, so far as we have power over inter-State commerce the laws should be applied there, too, that is, to the workmen engaged in inter-State commerce.

"In the third place, the City of Washington should be made an example city. We should put a stop to what has been done so far in Washington, that is, to merely develop the boulevards for the benefit of the wealthy people in the suburbs and especially for the benefit of real estate speculators, and should turn our attention to taking care of those people in Washington who make up the immense mass of the population by providing small parks, by doing away with the alley tenement houses, by enacting into law for the District of Columbia every proposition that the Progressive platform holds, as regards social and industrial justice, so that instead of going as we do now to Germany or Denmark for examples of the successful working of these measures we shall be able to turn to the Federal District of Columbia and shall treat that as an experimental laboratory in social and industrial science, through which we intend to better and build up this Nation as a whole."

Aid to Irrigation Helps Him.

The Colonel finished his tour of Arizona at Phoenix to-night, where he talked chiefly about reclamation. He got a great reception, for Arizona, Democratic State though she is, is very fond of the Colonel. He will undoubtedly get many Democratic votes, partly because of discontent among some of the Champ Clark followers, but chiefly because of his own popularity. One Democrat, who intends to vote for him, was asked why he and other Democrats in Arizona were heading that way. "Because," said he, "we know that the Colonel is a short grass man."

It was putting in another form what the Colonel himself says when he reminds the Westerners "that it's a good thing to have a President who knows an irrigation ditch from a dry farm."

There is no doubt that this sentiment is a considerable factor in the West. "Arizona remembers that it was Roosevelt who made the Government dam a certainty," said one of them to-day. "Wilson still has the lead chiefly because Arizona is as much a Democratic State as North Carolina."

Frank B. Heard, one of the Roosevelt candidates for Elector, said: "I thought at the beginning we would have a chance to make a fight which would do the party some good in other States. Thirty days ago I thought we had a fighting chance to carry our own State. To-day I believe we will carry it."

Gov. Hunt, who is a Democrat, sent two companies of the National Guard to act as an escort for Col. Roosevelt in Phoenix, headed by his own aid, Col. L. W. Coggins. The Governor also met the Colonel at the station and invited him to Phoenix.

Greets His Rough Riders Again.

This is the country of the Rough Riders, and they were plentifully in evidence not only at Tucson and Phoenix but at little jumping-off places where the train stopped to cut off a car or for some such purpose. Jack Greenway and other leading spirits of that regiment came aboard the train. Greenway, the former football star, is one of the candidates for Elector on the Bull Moose ticket. The Progressives are keeping the soft pedal on the Rough Rider issue; they are afraid that to talk too much about the Rough Riders will make other folks discontented. The Colonel, however, paid no attention to this policy. He talked to the Rough Riders in his audiences and recalled incidents of the campaign.

"It was only a little war," he admitted at Tucson, "but it was all the war there was."

At Maricopa, where the train had to wait for a few minutes, he got off the train and foregathered with a dozen Rough Riders. They lined up alongside a barn and told each other incidents of the good old days of 1898. The Colonel had such a good time that he came near forgetting to get aboard the train.

Picturesque Meeting in Tucson.

The auto drive in Tucson in the morning was through streets consisting largely of one-story adobe houses, and these were lined with "grinnos and greasers" of both sexes and all ages. Olive-stained Mexican boys and girls with big black eyes stood in the doorways or at street corners, cheek by jowl with tan-faced American children. The hall at Tucson was filled to overflowing with Western chivalry. The Tucsonites had obeyed the rule of "women and children first," and the whole front part of the hall was given over to them.

The expression on their faces was different from that of any other crowd the Colonel had addressed. It was one of joy, satisfaction, and heartfelt pride in the Colonel. When he came in and the applause had subsided, they sat there beaming on him, and every time he turned to speak to anybody or even shifted in his chair they would laugh with sheer joy. When he smiled back they would go wild.

As the Colonel began speaking children strayed down into the front part of the hall and there looked up at him. Half a dozen little boys squatted on the floor directly below him and little girls in white stood hand in hand. It was a most informal sort of mass meeting, judged by Eastern standards. There were no policemen in evidence and no sign of police arrangements, but everybody was well behaved and stayed just where he ought to stay. Nobody pushed or shoved or intruded on his neighbor's comfort. In the front row sat many little boys, barelegged and unashamed. Collarless men in blue shirts, boys in overalls, men in shirt sleeves were everywhere in the audience.

The Colonel talked about how in every primary where the Progressives won they had put a boss out of business, and how the democrats had not done the same.

Flinn the People's Champion.

"How about Flinn," called a Democrat.

"Flinn?" repeated the Colonel. "Flinn is as stout a champion of popular liberty as exists."

"But he's a boss," interrupted the Democrat.

"Let me finish my answer. I want to answer your question fully," said the Colonel. "Flinn came to me last March, and I had never known him. He told me that he was going to support me because he believed that this country would not be a good place for his children to live in unless such social and economic justice was done as to make it a good place for other people's children to live in."

A storm of delighted yells came from the audience.

"Wait a minute," cried the Colonel, stilling the aplause. "He told me that a long experience had taught him—and he said he had needed to learn it but that he had learned it—that the safety of our Government lay in making the people the real, and not the nominal, rulers of their own governmental agencies. He fought squarely on that issue and carried Pennsylvania, and under his lead Pennsylvania adopted as progressive a platform as Arizona itself, a platform declaring in the most unequivocal terms for direct primaries, the initiative and referendum for every progressive measure. A boss whose programme is to put the people of the State in supreme control over him and every other boss isn't much of a boss."

When the Colonel made his usual attack on Archbold and Penrose he said:

"Their kind know that there is nothing to be done with Mr. Taft, that he is a dead cock in the pit, and so that kind of people are turning to Mr. Wilson."

DENIES CREDIT TO COLONEL.

Gov. Stone's Clerk Says Roosevelt Did Not Settle Anthracite Strike.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Sept. 17.—Col. Roosevelt's claim to credit for the settlement of the Anthracite Mine strike in 1902 is now disputed by S. A. Bacharach, who was a clerk under Gov. William A. Stone of Pennsylvania in that year. In a signed statement he declares that others arranged to end the bitter six months' struggle by referring the dispute to arbitrators, and that Col. Roosevelt thrust himself into the limelight without justification.

Mr. Bacharach says that two months before the strike ended he was sent by Gov. Stone to President John Mitchell of the Mine Workers' Union to learn if the Governor could not assist in a possible settlement of the strike. After several interchanges it was finally arranged to have representatives of the coal interests, the Mine Workers' Union, and the Governor meet in New York City. This meeting took place, and from it came the settlement.

"It was suggested," says Mr. Bacharach, "that President Roosevelt be advised of the outcome, so as to receive his sanction. As a representative of the coal companies remarked, he was erratic and they wished to prevent any Federal interference. After negotiations were concluded, through the services of a special messenger, a meeting was arranged and the committee visited Washington, and before they had returned the President gave the press the story of the settlement of the coal strike and how he had done it. Ever since that day speeches have been made and all credit given Mr. Roosevelt, which he has accepted without the manhood of telling facts."

MURPHY IS FOR DIX.

Since Wilson Declared Himself at Syracuse the Boss Has Been Silent.

Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy took issue openly yesterday with Gov. Woodrow Wilson, Presidential nominee of his own party. Gov. Wilson has made it as clear as he possibly can without actually saying it in so many words that he is unalterably opposed to the renomination of Gov. Dix. He served plain notice to that effect on Mr. Murphy and the other leaders in his speech at Syracuse last Thursday, and all the friends of Gov. Wilson in this State, from United States Senator James A. O'Gorman down, have been working hard to prevent Gov. Dix from becoming the Democratic nominee for Governor. In the face of all that, Mr. Murphy declared blandly yesterday that he could see no reason why Gov. Dix should not be honored with a second term.

Mr. Murphy was at Tammany Hall yesterday afternoon when asked if it had been finally decided to shelve Gov. Dix.

"I do not see any reason why Gov. Dix should not be renominated," he replied.

"Then you are absolutely for Gov. Dix?"

"I have said again and again that I believe the record of Gov. Dix entitles him to a second term," said the Tammany leader.

After Mr. Murphy had unburdened himself to this extent some inquisitive persons who thought his remarks foreshadowed an open break between Tammany Hall, and the supporters of Gov. Wilson hurried to Democratic National headquarters and hunted up United States Senator James A. O'Gorman, leader of the Wilson forces in this State.

Senator O'Gorman was asked if he had broken with Murphy and if he would fight the renomination of Gov. Dix.

"I cannot discuss any such thing as that," said the Senator curtly. "I have not made up my mind what to do and cannot determine what steps to take until I have consulted with others. I do not think there will be any decision regarding candidates until the delegates get together at Syracuse. My personal preference will depend largely on what the Republicans do at Saratoga."

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 17.—"I have no intention of withdrawing my candidacy," said the Governor to-day. "I have not even received a suggestion that I withdraw."

MURPHY MEN WIN UP STATE.

Ten Eyck Followers Badly Beaten in Albany County.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 17.—The Democratic organization carried every ward in this city at to-day's primaries. Some of the country towns and wards in Cohoes and Watervliet cities were carried by Jacob L. Ten Eyck, whose nominees for delegates represented the anti-Murphy faction. The First Assembly District voted 5 to 1 for Murphy delegates, the Second District more than 10 to 1, and the Third about 4 to 1.

Col. Ten Eyck said to-night that he had made a mistake in not placing the names of candidates for county offices on his ballot. Mr. McCabe placed on his list of delegates his former formidable opponent in local Democratic politics, Robert E. Whalen; State Committeeman Daniel J. Dugan, and himself. Col. Ten Eyck headed his delegates with his own name.

In speaking of the result to-night Patrick E. McCabe said that the opposition did not poll as many votes as it had on its petitions for designation of names for delegates.

INDORSES G. B. SHAW'S VIEW.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman Calls His Attitude on Suffragettes Right.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—"Militant suffrage? It is a dreadful movement. Bernard Shaw's views on the hunger striking suffragettes—'If they won't eat, let them starve'—are exactly correct. I concur in them."

So declared to-day Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, who came here from New York to organize a woman's movement to aid in the election of Woodrow Wilson.

While here she will confer with Joseph E. Davies, manager of the local Wilson headquarters, with a view to enlisting women of the Middle West in the Wilson campaign.

"I regard this campaign, as far as the efforts of myself and my friends are concerned, as purely and simply a campaign of women for women," said Mrs. Harriman in explaining her aims. "We have taken the ground that woman will accomplish more through co-operation with men than by antagonizing them.

"We shall make no issue so far as suffrage for women is concerned. We wish to see the condition of women and children bettered, and we believe, after a careful study of the position of the candidates, that Gov. Wilson has fathered so much remedial legislation that he is the logical candidate of the women.

"While I am an admirer of Mr. Roosevelt, I think he is less stable and dependable than the Democratic candidate. I think a third party is unnecessary, too, because there is enough of the progressive spirit in the Wilson movement."

Mrs. Harriman expects to organize an auxiliary for the Wilson campaign in Chicago, similar to the one in New York. Whether she will return East or make a Far Western trip will be determined while she is in this city.

Mrs. Harriman was met on her arrival by Mrs. Sara S. Bornemann and a delegation identified with various women's clubs. At noon a luncheon was given in her honor at the Iroquois Club. Among other guests were Mrs. Adlai Stevenson of Bloomington and her daughters, Miss Letitia Stevenson and Mrs. Martin Hardin; Mrs. Jessie Palmer Webb of Springfield, Mrs. Sara S. Bornemann, and Mrs. Henry G. Solomon.

We have long since discovered that here at Greeley Square men demand THE BEST THERE IS. And we must have it.

Orientals

The Largest Specialty Rug House in America.

Rugs of Today

Beautiful carpets from Persia and Turkey—but modern and moderately valued.

Unromanced in description or price—but as TRUE ORIENTALS as the famous fragments of old Persian hunting rugs.

Every rug picked from many offerings—as in the case of our highest-priced rugs—for substantial character and decorative possibilities.

There are 1,585 selected Orientals on our floors, ranging from 6 by 9 to 26 by 40 feet, from which these are mentioned merely as examples:

Modern Wild's Oriental, $225.

Selected by us for a lady's boudoir in blue or gray; 9 by 12 feet; a light blue ground with small figures of golden brown and darker blue; rich, heavy pile.

Library Rug, $225.

Chosen particularly to harmonize with substantial furnishings—a soft, jade green ground, with antique Oriental designs in rose red and blue. Size, 9.6 by 12 feet.

Living-Room Rug, $195.

In a mellow, rose-red Serabend pattern, outlined in blue palm figures, with camel tan border. Size, 11.11 by 8.10 feet. Equally good for library.

Drawing-Room Rug, $275.

Solid center ground of soft rose pink, with gray blue and ecru border and corners; 9.3 by 14.10 feet; for delicate furnishings.

Turkish Red Rugs, $125.

A type of rug more used than any other in English country houses—very heavy pile, with rich red ground and blue figures. One of the most durable rugs made in the Orient. Size, 9.1 by 12.2 feet. Especially desirable for dining-room, den, living-room or hall.

Any desired size can be furnished from stock at prices in proportion to size.

They are backed by the reputation and full guarantee of Wild's Orientals—as to durability, color and artistic value.

We can furnish at these reasonable prices Oriental rugs which are adapted to the decorative scheme of any room—to satisfy any taste.

They are in every sense worthy of their place in the great collection of Wild's Orientals.

TO EXPEL ROOSEVELT MEN FROM COMMITTEE

Hilles and Barnes Will Keep on National Board Only Active Taft Workers.

WASSON ALONE SEEMS SAFE

Situation in Pennsylvania Protects Him—Resignations No Bar to Action Slated for To-day.

The Republican National Committee will meet at noon to-day at the Hotel Manhattan for the purpose of expelling from the committee those members who have announced their allegiance to the Bull Moose party. Chairman Charles D. Hilles of the committee and his chief adviser, William Barnes, Jr., were busy yesterday going over the names of the members and making up the list of those who are to be deposed. They agreed, it is said, to drop half a dozen members who are either working for Col. Roosevelt or not working very hard for President Taft.

It is likely that a lively fight will develop, as several members who are slated to be dropped will resent the action of the committee. Neither Mr. Hilles nor Mr. Barnes would talk about what they intended to do. Mr. Hilles had another conference with Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania yesterday, but both refused to say what the discussion was about. The Senator said he had no statement whatever to make.

Among those who will be dropped is William S. Edwards, National Committeeman from West Virginia, who is an avowed Progressive. Edwards maintains that he is still a Republican and is representing the will of a majority of the Republicans in his State as expressed in the primaries there. He will make a fight to retain his position.

Henry G. Wasson, the committee member from Pennsylvania, is to be left on the committee, the Electoral situation in that State having been amicably adjusted. G. C. Priestly of Oklahoma and Walter S. Brown of Ohio assert that they have resigned from the committee and that they cannot, therefore, be expelled. Both will resent any action reflecting on them by the Taft leaders.

Chairman Hilles received word yesterday that the Electoral complication in West Virginia had been settled by the resignation of three candidates who were Roosevelt men. The State Committee there will fill the vacancies with Taft supporters. H. C. Ogden of Wheeling told Chairman Hilles that Dr. Hatfield, the Republican candidate for Governor of West Virginia, was making good headway in the campaign, and that the State would be carried by the Republicans.

Chairman Hilles had conferences yesterday with a number of Taft leaders from all over the country. Among them were Major Armand Romaine of Louisiana, Mayor Magee of Pittsburgh, who supported Col. Roosevelt before the convention, but is now actively working for Taft in Pennsylvania; Senator Murray Crane of Massachusetts, Col. Harold Sewall of Maine, J. E. Godwin of the Baltimore City Republican Committee, J. G. Schmidlapp of Cincinnati, Gen. Coleman du Pont, member of the Republican National Committee from Delaware; Edmund Mitchell, Chairman of the Republican State Committee of Delaware; Commissioner of Internal Revenue Cabell of Virginia, and S. Wood McClave, Republican candidate for Congress in the Sixth New Jersey District. All these callers gave Mr. Hilles encouraging reports of political conditions in their localities.

"If any further proof of President Taft's sincere regard for the welfare and advancement of the country's laboring class were necessary," said Mr. Hilles, "it seems to me it has been amply supplied by the announcement at Beverly to the effect that Mr. Taft will put into operation in Panama an employers' liability and workmen's compensation law similar to that which he urged at the last session of Congress, but which was effectually pigeonholed at the direction of the Democratic leaders in the House of Representatives.

"The President's action is an instance of sincerity and good will toward the laboring classes that is refreshing in these days, when the third-term candidate is promising all sorts of reforms which he failed to inaugurate during two terms in the Presidency, and when the Democratic candidate is so busy apologizing for his former views on labor that he cannot formulate any definite new ones."

PERKINS ASSAILS MARSHALL.

Denies Statements Attributed to Wilson's Running Mate.

George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Executive Committee of Col. Roosevelt's National Progressive Party, was a very angry man when he reached his Manhattan Hotel headquarters yesterday. The source of his vexation was the newspaper reports of a speech made by Gov. Marshall of Indiana, Democratic nominee for Vice President, in which he declared that Mr. Perkins presided over the destinies of the Harvester Trust and as head of that corporation permitted women and little girls to work sixteen hours a day at a wage of $1 a day.

"I do not claim the power to place any one in the Ananias Club," said Mr. Perkins. "But to use plain every-day English, Gov. Marshall, if he has been correctly reported, lied."

Mr. Perkins said that there was a possibility, of course, that Gov. Marshall might have been misinformed, but that in his opinion the Governor was well aware that he (Perkins) was not President of the Harvester Trust. Mr. Perkins said that while he had nothing to do with the management of the Harvester Company's factories he had been deeply interested in building up a policy that would improve the conditions under which the employes worked as well as the relations between the workers and the corporation.

"For Gov. Marshall to say that the Harvester Company has been backward in that respect is to deal in misrepresentation," said Mr. Perkins. "The company has done more and more every year to improve the conditions under which its employes work, and all Gov. Marshall would have had to do to convince himself of the fact was to look over the company's own reports. I may have something to say in a day or two, which will silence forever the critics of the Harvester Company."

TAFT GETS GOOD REPORTS.

Arises with the Birds and Takes Up Tasks That Have Accumulated.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., Sept. 17.—After three weeks of a more or less interrupted vacation, President Taft buckled down to work to-day. He was up with the birds this morning and had breakfast at 6 o'clock. Half an hour later Assistant Secretary W. W. Mischler was at Parramatta, and for two hours Mr. Taft was busy looking over letters, dictating correspondence and signing commissions. A batch of matter taken back to the executive offices kept the typewriters rumming all the afternoon.

James T. Williams, a former Washington newspaper man, and now an Arizona editor, called on the President and told him that things looked pretty good down his way.

A nine-year-old Bethlehem (Penn.) boy sent a birthday note to the President which touched him more than any of the congratulations he had received. The note read:

> My papa is dead. My mother said that I could write you a birthday card. I will be 9 years old on the 4th of October, and when I get big enough and old enough I will vote for you. My papa was a Republican and I shall stay one.

The President sent back an autograph letter thanking the lad and expressing the hope that he would grow up to be a useful citizen and learn to appreciate a mother's care.

CHASE OROZCO'S MEN ALONG THE BORDER

Federal Cavalry in Hot Pursuit, While Americans Try to Prevent Crossing.

MANY WILL BE CORNERED

Case of Col. Orozco Puzzles, but Murder Is Charged to Him in the Extradition Proceedings.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Reports from the Mexican frontier to-day indicate that the rebels in Northern Mexico are badly demoralized. They have fled out of San Francisco, a suburb of Ojinaga, and Gen. Aubert, a Federal leader, is pursuing them with cavalry from the south, while Gen. Steever on the American side is making every effort to parallel their flight and prevent them from seeking refuge in the United States. If Gen. Steever's efforts succeed, a large number of rebels will be cornered.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Sept. 17.—Reports that Gen. Salazar's rebels are traveling toward Hachiti, N. M., to convert into cash the bullion stolen at El Tigre caused a strengthening of the border patrol to-day. Gen. Sanjines of the Mexican Federal Army ordered Col. Munoz, whose command relieved El Tigre, to pursue Gen. Salazar, and word came to-day that he had nearly overtaken the rebel rear guard.

"If the Mexican Government should permit United States troops to cross the international line to protect Americans in Mexico, a revolution much more serious than the present one would be the result," said Gen. Sanjines, who spent several hours in Douglas to-day. "There would be no safety in Mexico for those permitting so extreme a move or for Americans," the General said.

"We have the Sonora situation well in hand," he declared, "and hope within a very short time to be able to guarantee safety to all Americans desiring to return."

Every American ranch and mine in Southern Sonora has been looted by rebels, according to C. E. Bookey, an American rancher, who arrived here to-day.

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 17.—Charges of murder are contained in the extradition proceedings filed here against Col. Pascual Orozco, Sr., held by United States troops at Presidio, Texas. It is understood a similar charge will be entered against his son, Gen. Pascual Orozco, Jr., leader of the Mexican revolution, if he is captured on American soil.

United States and Mexican officials here continue to deny persistent rumors that the younger Orozco is among the prisoners at Presidio.

In the extradition proceedings against the elder Orozco, began by the Mexican Consul at El Paso, he is charged with murder committed in Juarez last June, when it was reported that the rebels, who then held Juarez, had executed several Federal spies.

Col. Orozco has telegraphed friends here that he is illegally held at Presidio since he crossed to the American side unarmed.

NO TRUSTS IN GERMANY.

Only Syndicates, Which Are Different, Says Potash Director.

All is peace in the potash world, according to Hermann Schüddekopf, director of the German Potash Syndicate, who is at the Plaza, with his wife and daughter. The trouble over contracts made last year by the American Agricultural Chemican Company of Boston, which caused some correspondence between Washington and Berlin, when delivery of potash was refused after it had been contracted for at a much smaller price than had been the rule, was all settled last May at Hamburg, when the American concern gave up its contracts and signed new ones with the German Syndicate, which, according to Herr Schüddekopf, were satisfactory to both parties.

Herr Schüddekopf is over here on business, he said. The syndicate has a branch over here, and the director of the syndicate thinks American farmers ought to be educated up to using more potash.

"The industrial situation in Germany is excellent," said Herr Schüddekopf yesterday. "Mining is good in iron, steel, and coal. In fact we have had none of the depression you have had over here. The prospects are good, which is remarkable in view of the expected bad crops. August was almost a rainless month, which would naturally argue for bad business, but the contrary is true.

"We are increasing our sales to the United States, though the American farmer has not gone in for using potash to the extent the Germans employ it. Our business is increasing about $6,000,000 a year. Over here we sell about $15,000,000 worth. Of course potash is a monopoly in Germany. It is not mined anywhere else. Our sales ran this year to about $50,000,000. Farmers here generally don't spend so much on the improvement of their land as they do in Germany. That shows in results."

"Monopolies seem to be more popular in Germany than here," was suggested.

"Ah, there is a difference," was the quick reply. "Over here you have trusts. We have them not. We have only syndicates, and there is a difference. The United States Steel Corporation owns all the mills whose output it controls. Our syndicates do not own the plants whose output they handle. They have to do only with sales. A manufacturer who belongs to a syndicate simply sells through the syndicate."

JAMES CHAPIN SAFE IN WILDS OF AFRICA

Word of Success Comes from Young Explorer After Fourteen Months' Silence.

CAPTURES RARE ANIMALS

He and Herbert Lang Also Have 4,000 Birds for Natural History Museum.

With the receipt of a letter yesterday by Mrs. G. Chapin from her son, James Chapin, all fears that this young explorer and Columbia University man had been lost in the heart of Africa were dispelled. It is true that neither the American Museum of Natural History, which, in conjunction with the Belgian Government, had sent him to the Congo district, nor his mother had heard a word from him in fourteen months, and his friends could not help feeling uneasy about him and his companion, Herbert Lang. His letter, however, showed him alive and in good shape, with a splendid collection of mammals and other animals for the Museum, including the extremely rare okapi, the square-mouthed rhinoceros, and the giant eland.

The expedition left New York in May, 1909, in charge of Lang and Chapin. It sailed from Brussels on the steamship Leopoldville, and reached Boma June 23, 1909, and proceeded from Matadi by rail to Leopoldville, up the Congo by river boat to Stanleyville, and from there through the "dense forest" on foot to Avakubi. It spent nearly six months in the vicinity of Medji, where it obtained specimens and material for an okapi group. This was the giraffe, antelope like animal discovered by Sir Harry Johnston in November, 1900. From Medji the expedition crossed through the forest to Niangara in the Northern Congo, and for more than a year it has been collecting in the northeastern part of the Congo. In addition to extensive zoological collections, Lang and Chapin have obtained valuable ethnological material from the Pygmy and other native tribes in the Congo.

This extract from Mr. Chapin's letter to his mother was given out at the Museum last night:

> A report has lately been prepared which we hope will be very satisfactory to President Osborn and everybody at the Museum, for besides our large general collections we shall bring home material for three magnificent groups of large mammals, the okapi, square-mouthed rhinoceros, and giant eland.
>
> What will doubtless interest you more is that we are in good health. Of course, one doesn't always feel here "like a strong man about to run a race," but the truth is that Mr. Lang and myself have a widespread reputation in these parts, and among the officials and merchants, for general ruggedness. We walk with ease where others ride donkeys or are carried in chairs, or even further, and are considered tireless workers, simply because we are interested in our job. We have now been more than three years in the Congo, but shall do our best to shorten our term as much as possible. Government agents formerly came out for three years, but now need to stay but two.
>
> Our whole time is practically spent in the open air, for even the houses in the posts have no sashes in the windows, only rough wooden blinds, with plenty of room for thorough ventilation, and the doors close in much the same way. The sunlight we get between showers is sufficiently strong to suit anybody, and we are pretty well fed, though a black boy can hardly make dishes "like mother used to—".
> Our green tent, in spite of its long service, is still in use, but the fly has been bleached nearly white. Our whole equipment has served well, and our provisions, which were supplied by a grocery house in Brussels, all packed in tins, keep wonderfully well. All in all, we are pretty well off and only lack society. For this I should certainly like to be at home, but I expect to enjoy it all the more for a little delay. * * * We rejoice that Peary is to have his bust in our Museum—in fact, the friendly relations between him and the Museum give us a certain pride. * * * Mr. Lang's beard is now the admiration of the whole region, and natives of Africa, you know, hold whiskers in very high esteem. Mine are very scraggy, so I clip them often, and my mustache is almost nil—and light colored at that. Yet I am supposed to have grown up some in the Congo. Mr. Lang claims I am taller, but I don't believe it. * * * We are doing our best to get away now and hope that once we get on the road our momentum will haste us along toward New York.

Another letter received from Mr. Chapin by W. de W. Miller of the Museum staff, says that the collection of birds to date numbers 4,000 specimens and contains nearly 500 species. The birds in the collection include weavers, vultures, hawks, and starlings, and other insectivorous birds and birds of prey.

CONCORD, N. H., Sept. 17.—Four candidats for Presidential Electors were chosen by the New Hampshire Republcans at their State Convention here to-day. A platform, dealing principally with State issues, and indorsing the Administration of President Taft was adopted and a reorganiation of the State Committee, made necessary by the resignations of members who have joined the Progressives, was effected.

The nominees for Electors are Orton B. Brown of Berlin, George P. Crafts of Manchester, Roland H. Spaulding of Rochester, and Edwin H. Wason of Nashua.

H. E. NOLAN DISCHARGED.

Charge Against Legation Secretary of Abducting Girl Dismissed.

Harry E. Nolan, the newly appointed Secretary to the United States Legation at Panama, who was charged with abducting Marian McVicker Foster of Newport News, Va., was discharged by Magistrate Murphy in the Tombs Court yesterday at the request of Assistant District Attorney Reynolds, who said that it was impossible to show that the complainant was under 18 years old.

At the time of Nolan's arrest in the Hotel Astor Mrs. Foster's age was given as 16 years. Yesterday she said that she had fallen in love with him on a steamer coming from Virginia. She said she was 18 years old and produced her brother, William McVicker, to swear to this. McVicker said he was not quite sure as to his sister's age, but thought she was at least 18 years. It was also shown that at the time she was married she gave her age as 18 years.

Mrs. Foster is the daughter of an innkeeper at 893 Govan Road, Glasgow, and since Nolan's arrest she has been locked up on a technical charge of vagrancy and appeared in court accompanied by Mrs. Alice Smith, the probation officer of the Women's Night Court. She was very nervous and said she desired to go back to her father in Scotland as soon as she is discharged. She will be discharged from custody to-day and will sail on Saturday. She said:

"I will never go back to my husband. I do not love him, and the one month I spent after my marriage was enough. I want to go to my father if he will take me in after all this trouble."

After Nolan was discharged his father, who had come from Chicago to assist his son, slapped him on the shoulder heartily and together they hurried to the City Chamberlain's office to get back the $1,000 bail which Nolan furnished.

Shortly after Nolan's release Detective John Thompson of Oyster Bay arrived at the Criminal Court Building with a warrant for H. C. Nolan, wanted in Oyster Bay for a forgery. He hurried to the City Chamberlain's office, but did not arrive in time to see Nolan.

PHILLIPS TO QUIT EMBASSY.

London Secretary Will Abandon Diplomacy for a Business Career.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The report in a cable dispatch from London that William Phillips, Secretary of the American Embassy, would resign from the diplomatic service was confirmed at the State Department to-day. It had been known to the Department officials for some time that Mr. Phillips intended to quit diplomacy for business.

Mr. Phillips has been continuously in the diplomatic service since 1903. Part of the time he was Third Assistant Secretary of State. In his three years of service in the London Embassy he has given great satisfaction to Ambassador Reid and the State Department and to the many Americans who have gone to the Embassy to transact business. Mrs. Phillips was Miss Caroline Astor Drayton of New York.

TO MAKE MONEY SMALLER.

Secretary MacVeagh Will Soon Order Change in Our Notes.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The order reducing the size of United States currency and National banknotes by one-third and completely revolutionizing their designs will be issued by Secretary MacVeagn within a few weeks.

The design of each denomination of every bill—United States notes, gold and silver certificates, and National banknotes—will be of the same general nature. The new currency will measure 6 by 2½ inches, as compared with the 7.28 by 3.04 of the present notes. It will require eighteen months to make the change complete.

SEEK DOG TO SAVE BOY.

Invalid's Heart Worse Since Jerry Vanished—Mourns Pet Continually.

Dr. and Mrs. John T. Usher of 44 Hanson Place, Brooklyn, are advertising a reward for the recovery of a lost dog, the pet of their invalid son, who has grieved so over his disappearance that it is feared he will die unless the dog is found.

The boy is Fred Usher, 14 years old. He has suffered from heart disease for two years, and during the past five months has been confined to his home. The dog is Jerry, a brown bull terrier. The boy has spent the last two Winters at Aiken, S. C., and it was there that he formed the acquaintance of Jerry. Both times when the boy came North he became so sad after parting from the dog that his health was seriously affected. Last Spring, after leaving Aiken, his life was despaired of. As the sick boy continually talked of the dog, his parents telegraphed to the owner and purchased him.

When Jerry arrived he leaped upon the bed where his old playfellow was lying. The boy's face lighted up, and it seemed to his parents that the invalid suddenly became bright and improved. From that minute his health gained steadily till the physicians attending him decided recently that the danger mark was passed.

Last Saturday night, however, the dog was missing, and the boy cried for him all night. When he was not found the following day the blow sent the invalid back to the serious condition in which he was before the dog arrived from Aiken, and since then he has grown rapidly worse. Unless the dog is found there is little chance for his recovery, it is said.

BRAIN OF DR. M'GEE WEIGHS 1,410 GRAMS

Dr. Spitzka, to Whom Scientist Willed It, Lists It with Brains of 100 Noted Men.

TURGENIEFF'S FAR IN LEAD

Ben Butler, Olney, the Mathematician, and Thackeray Ranked High, Webster and Schubert Below.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Col. Henry C. Riser, Chief Clerk of the Geological Survey, and executor under the will of Dr. W J McGee, the Government anthropologist and son-in-law of Simon Newcomb, the astronomer, has been officially notified by Dr. Anthony Spitzka, the Philadelphia brain anatomist, that Dr. McGee's brain weighed 1,410 grams.

Dr. McGee, who died here recently, left a will directing that his brain be given to Dr. Spitzka and his body to Jefferson Medical School for scientific and morphological examination. Dr. McGee also willed to Dr. Spitzka the brain of Maj. J. W. Powell, former Chief of the Geological Survey, which was examined by Dr. Spitzka in 1903 but had since been in the custody of Dr. McGee. Dr. Spitzka also took a death mask of Dr. McGee for scientific study and preservation.

The weight of Dr. McGee's brain—a fraction over 3 pounds—is greater than that of the average man, and ranks well up among the brains of most of the men of action, art or science concerning which there are accurate data. In a list of 100 eminent men, prepared by Dr. Spitzka, the average weight of brains was 1,469.65 grams, or 59.65 grams above the weight of Dr. McGee's brain.

Turgenieff Heads the List.

Cranial Capacity a Different Thing.

Like the late Benjamin F. Butler, Dr. McGee had a very large head, and the weight of his brain, while ranking high among the brain-weights of this list of famous men, is not as heavy as the size of his head indicated. Daniel Webster, according to the studies made by Dr. Spitzka, had a large head and a heavy brain, but his brain did not begin to fill the cranial cavity. The cranial capacity of Webster was 1,955 cubic centimeters. It is estimated by Dr. Spitzka that in his prime Webster had a brain that weighed 1,735 grams, whereas after death it weighed 200-odd grams less.

Dr. Spitzka has ascertained by analysis of the brain weights given in this table of 100 that the average weight of the twelve men in the list concerned with exact sciences, such as astronomers and mathematicians, was 1,532 grams. All had brains heavier than 1,400 grams. Next came fourteen men of action, statesmen, political leaders, and military men, with an average brain weight of 1,490 grams. The average brain weight of 26 men employed in the creative arts, as given by Dr. Spitzka, is 1,485 grams, while forty-eight men, working in natural sciences, average 1,440 grams.

DIAMONDS LOST ON STEAMER.

Gems Valued at $5,000 Taken from J. C. Hirsch on Kaiser Wilhelm II.

When the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. arrived yesterday from Bremen J. C. Hirsch, a first cabin passenger of 226 East Fourth Avenue, Cincinnati, reported that he had been robbed of a pocketbook containing two bar pins set with eight diamonds and a lavalliere, consisting of a platinum chain studded with sixteen diamonds, to which was attached a pendant containing two large diamond drops with a very fine diamond in the centre, which were family heirlooms.

Mr. Hirsch said that when his wife took them off on retiring on Friday night, he placed the jewels, with $296 in bills, in a leather purse, which he put in the pocket of a coat hanging in the cabin. The door of the stateroom was not locked, and when he went to take the purse out on Sunday night it had disappeared. The gems were valued at $5,000.

When the loss was reported to Capt. Cuppers on Sunday, he did everything possible to recover them, and detectives were at the pier to look over the baggage in the customs shed. The Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm of the same line, which arrived from Bremen on Monday, reported a similar robbery on board of jewelry valued at $2,500.

FOREIGN DOCTORS INVADE PLAZA HOTEL

English and French Savants Will Arrive Later in the Week—They Will Investigate Our Institutions.

Within an hour or so after the Cincinnati docked in Hoboken yesterday morning the lobby of the Plaza began to fill with men who looked very foreign and very learned. Most of them brought whiskers with them. The cool air that blew in from Central Park was much tempered by the time it reached the telephone booth, because many had got into the wrong hotel, or couldn't get their rooms at once. The arrivals were 200 doctors, mostly German, and fifty wives or daughters. They had come over partly to attend the fifteenth International Congress of Hygiene and Demology, which begins in Washington on Sept. 23, and partly to make a tour of the country.

Some of the visitors spoke English, but the vocabulary of O'Loughlin and Mulligan, the room clerks, was severely taxed in trying to minister to the others and explaining that all the visitors were not to stay in the Plaza, and that the Fall season was on and there were so many people in the house that it was difficult to get rooms emptied in time to take care of those who were to stay there. It seemed hard even for a German to be phlegmatic when he didn't know where he was going to sleep, but the most excited member of the party was a tall, thin woman, who insisted on making O'Loughlin understand her. Calm was restored only when it was announced that luncheon was ready, and this seemed to put everybody in good humor. The meal was served in a special dining room. About 125 of the visitors were taken care of at the Plaza, the remainder going to the Netherland and the Savoy.

A large number of the visiting physicians decided to see the town yesterday afternoon, and taking their wives and children with them they summoned forty taxicabs to the Plaza and the Savoy, and thence departed. The string of cars was moving along the steep descent from Fort Washington Avenue, along 181st Street to Riverside Drive, when the first car, in making a sharp curve turned turtle and rudely shook the four women inside. The chauffeur was only slightly injured and the passengers escaped unhurt.

The next car, in order to avoid a collision with the one ahead, suffered a disabling in its steering gear, but those were the only casualties. In the excitement, however, some one telephoned Police Headquarters that several persons had been killed in a collision of twenty taxicabs. Reserves and ambulances swarmed to the spot, but by that time only the one chauffeur was left, nursing his wrist and glaring at his machine.

While the majority of the visitors are Germans, there are Austrians, Dutchmen, Swiss, Russians, Italians, and Portuguese among them. Geheimrath Dr. W. His, professor in the University of Berlin, headed the party that arrived on the Cincinnati. They were met at the dock by Dr. Ludwig Kast, Dr. Richard Kovacs, Dr. Wolff Freudenthal, and other representatives of the official Reception Committee, of which Dr. Abraham Jacobi, President of the American Medical Association, is Chairman. In the afternoon the visitors were taken on a sight-seeing tour about New York.

Dr. His is President of the German Central Committee for Travel Study. The other official delegates in the party are Dr. Albert Oliven, a nerve specialist of Berlin; Dr. Rudolph Lennhof, Dr. Fornet, Dr. Schneider, who represents the Prussian Ministry of the Interior, as also do Dr. Kirstein of Stettin; Dr. Hamann of Berlin, and Dr. Weber, who are sent by the imperial health office; Dr. Hoffman and another Dr. Weber, representing the Royal Prussian Marine; Dr. Dieudonné, official delegate from Bavaria, who made an important investigation into the Indian plague, and Dr. Zahn, who also represents Bavaria.

Others are Dr. Schaltenfroh, imperial Austrian delegate, who is Professor of Hygiene in the University of Vienna; Sr. de Gama Pinto of Lisbon, who represents Portugal; Dr. K. H. Haaumann and Dr. Halbersma, who represent Holland; Dr. Loeffler of Greifswald, who discovered the diphtheria bacillus; Dr. Hoffman of Düsseldorf, a famous heart specialist; Prof. Strauss, chief physician of the Jewish hospital in Berlin; Dr. Partsch, director of the dental institute in Breslau; Dr. Bretschneider, director of the German hospital at Rome, and Dr. Berkovits, city physician of Nagyvarad, Hungary.

Dr. His said the party would make a tour embracing Philadelphia, Atlantic City, and Baltimore before going to Washington. Afterward they will visit Chicago, Niagara, Toronto, Montreal, Boston, and Albany before returning to New York. A small party will go to Rochester, Minn., to see the Mayo brothers, the famous surgeons, perform operations. The whole party will inspect hospitals, charitable and social institutions, and the water works of various cities.

They will begin the professional part of their tour to-day, when they will be taken on the steamboat Brennan of the Department of Charities to Ellis Island, afterward visiting Bellevue Hospital. They will also take in the Rockefeller Institute and Blackwell's Isand. To-night there will be a reception to the visitors at the Liederkranz, addresses being made by Mayor Gaynor, Dr. Jacobi, Dr. W. M. Polk, President of the American Academy of Medicine, and others.

The party to-morrow will go to Washington Square, and thence to the New York Post-Graduate School and Hospital, where an informal reception will be held. Afterward the members will visit the Lying-in Hospital, the Metropolitan Tower, the Public Library, the Academy of Medicine, and, in the afternoon, Columbia University and the University of the City of New York.

Dr. Rudolph Lennhoff said that among the most interesting subjects that would come up before this congress would be that of how to guard against tuberculosis and typhoid under varying conditions, and that much benefit would be derived from a discussion as to how various centres of population had solved difficult problems of hygiene and sanitation.

The English scientists who will attend the congress are due on Thursday on the Oceanic. They are headed by Dr. Bashford, an authority on cancer. More English physicians will come by the Baltic on Friday. The French delegates are due on the Savoie on Saturday. They include Dr. Jacques Bertillon, brother of Alphonse Bertillon, the author of the Bertillion system of measuring criminals, and Dr. Chantemesse, the nerve specialist of the University of Paris.

INDIA'S PROGRESS AS A PARSEE SEES IT

Country Still 90 Per Cent. Illiterate, and Hindus and Caste System Hold It Back.

BUT CHANGE IS TAKING PLACE

Parsees Are Adopting Western Ideas and Education Is Advancing—Great Cotton Crops Possible.

Phinoze C. Sethna drew a pleasing picture of conditions in India on his arrival at the Belmont yesterday from Montreal on his way home. Mr. Sethna is a Parsee merchant of Bombay. He is also general agent of one of the Canadian life insurance companies in India.

"The prosperity of India depends largely upon the monsoons," said Mr. Sethna. "If we don't have sufficient wet weather the crops fail, and as India is an agricultural country business is bad. So far this year the rains have been heavy, and that means good crops and a resultant heavy demand for piece goods, and, altogether, prosperity. I regret to say there is not much demand there as yet for American goods. The people are extremely conservative, and do not take up fast with Western improvements. You would think they would be disposed to buy American agricultural implements, but they are not. You speak of an Englishman doing what his father did before him. Well, an Indian does what his grandfather of the tenth generation before him did.

"The Government is doing its best to import American and Egyptian cottonseed and distribute it among the farmers, but with very little success. Cotton is the staple crop in the west of India, and a crop of 5,000,000 bales is now made. This output could be tremendously improved and increased if the people would only meet the Government's advances.

"Native prejudices and the caste system account for the lack of progress in India at the present time. The people are nearly 90 per cent. illiterate. Still, the British administration is helping the cause of education so effectively that within the next generation it is likely the percentage of literacy among the people will come up to 50 or more.

"The Parsees take more kindly to Western ideas than any other Indian community, and the Parsee is more adventurous. The Hindu's investments are mostly confined to land, gold, or jewels, but the Parsee believes in 'no venture, no have.' The result is that if any industry of importance is promoted by Indians themselves it is mostly in western India, where Parsees congregate.

"I might mention that lately Parsees have taken up two very important lines of industrial work. The firm of Tata, Sona & Co., which has an office in Wall Street, is responsible for the inauguration of a big iron and steel manufactory, which is run by American engineers, and for the Bombay hydro-electric scheme, a great electric power undertaking. Both of these undertakings represent the investment of many millions of rupees. These plants are the first of their kind in India, and could have been started there only by Parsees.

"The best cotton spinning mills in India are practically in the hands of the Parsee community. Perhaps the volume of business done per year is larger in Calcutta than in Bombay, but, although the Bengalis, who are Hindus by religion, are very wealthy, they will not take kindly to business, and all the trade of Bengal is in the hands of Englishmen.

"As for life insurance, it has only touched the fringe of the country; but with the spread of education it is bound to increase tremendously. The business is largely being done by two companies on this Continent, one American, the other Canadian.

"It is only within the last twenty-five years that the Indians may be said to have taken a keen interest in the politics of their country. A National Congress, which met first in 1883, and which has been holding sessions every Christmas, with the avowed object of bringing together the Hindus and Mahommedans and making joint representations to the Government with the idea of gaining more concessions, in spite of dissensions in itself in former years, has succeeded in its original attempt, and many concessions which the Indian public has received in the last two decades may be attributed to its efforts.

"Within the last twenty years a body of men have sprung up who call themselves extremists. Their one idea is to get rid of the British, bag, and baggage. It is a foolish idea, and if realized would throw India back perhaps a hundred years, because the Indians have not yet reached a stage where they might be said to be capable of governing themselves. It is a fact, as one of your American writers has said—I think it was Price Collier—that the situation that would ensue would be like a circus menagerie that had been let loose. I might mention, however, in passing, that while Mr. Collier is correct in this, his other statements and conclusions in regard to India are not absolutely correct.

"The seditious attempts made a few years ago, of which you have heard, were perhaps magnified as to their importance by the time they reached here. They were fortunately nipped in the bud by the conciliatory policy adopted by the Government of Lord Minto, aided by that wise statesman Lord Morley, who at the time was Secretary of State for India. The visit of their Imperial Majesties altogether changed the aspect of the situation, and peace and plenty appear to smile on the land at present.

"This is my third visit to New York," said Mr. Sethna, in answer to a question. "I have never seen it mentioned, but the physical configuration of Bombay is very similar to that of New York. Both cities are on islands. Yours is surrounded by rivers; ours by the sea. Both taper down to a point, New York to the Battery, and Bombay to Culaba. In both of them the great business quarter lies toward the tapering point."

Lawyers Club's New Rooms Open.

The new clubrooms of the Lawyers Club on the top floors of the United States Realty Building, 115 Broadway, were opened informally yesterday, and about fifty members came to luncheon and many more strolled through during the afternoon to look at the new rooms which have been decorated according to the ideas of Henry J. Davison. The hidden lighting system was especially admired. The rooms were almost, if not quite, ready. Three panels were missing from the Gothic window, and a few of the curtains were not up. These will all be in place by to-day. The formal opening of the club will occur on the last of this month or the first of October.

Ten Remarkable Drawings

OF THE

Panama Canal

By JOSEPH PENNELL, N.A.

Will Be Given FREE With

Next Sunday's Times

The publication of such a supplement, made up of reproductions of original lithographs made expressly for The New York Times by an artist of world-wide fame, marks a notable event in newspaper making. A few years ago it would have been thought impossible because of the expense involved.

These vigorous pictures form an eight-page section in black and white on super paper—which is in addition to the usual Pictorial Section of The Sunday Times.

CULEBRA, Aug. 7, 1912.
I cannot express in words the pleasure that these pictures give me, as they illustrate so clearly, forcibly, and vividly the work and portray actual conditions with a force which I did not think could be developed in a picture.
GEO. W. GOETHALS.

The celebrated artist, Henry McCarter, thus describes Mr. Pennell's wonderful pictures:

The building of the Panama Canal is marvelously described in Joseph Pennell's inimitable lithographs. He has been admirably the servant of his motive. I may venture to say that his attitude was that of the great Japanese artists who went before their Fujiyama and asked: "Give me what you will. I do not come to make of you something that you are not. Only give, and give freely, and I will interpret your gift with my art." Joseph Pennell has drawn his Panama Canal in this spirit. There is no sentimental demand. He has dragged in nothing to add to the artistic result. He has not used one false line. The wonderful thing he found there was enough to satisfy him, and he used his art with admirable restraint and skill.

I cannot speak of any one of these lithographs as being the best. I find them altogether a unit. In fact, Joseph Pennell has drawn the Panama Canal with the same directness with which it was built. He made but few concessions to the usual idea of the beautiful when occasionally he pictured the moiling but ordered movement of many men, temporary railroads and bridges, machines and men digging, hauling and lifting; straight lines of steam from shrieking whistles, the blur and dust of blasting—then clouds, hilltops, and clear sky. His pictures make one long to be of this vast building-up, or to turn back in submission to the brain stuff that makes fiction.

Joseph Pennell's record of the building of the Panama Canal is, in its last analysis, a masterly interpretation of the greatest man-created thing in the world.

Mr. Pennell is one of the world's leading artists. He is a member of the National Academy, President of the famous Senefelder Lithographic Club, London; Honorary Member of the International Society of Sculptors, Painters and Gravers, London, and Fellow of Lithographic Societies in England, France and America and Fellow of the Institute of Arts and Letters.

The Chicago Cubs had a very saucy going-away party with the Giants on the Coogan Flats yesterday afternoon, knocking Rube Marquard out of the box in the third inning by way of a little farewell for the year. The Cubs obtained the decision in the season's series with the Giants, having won thirteen out of twenty-two games played. It is the only series that has slipped away from the Giants this season.

The Rube's last few unsuccessful attempts at pitching are causing much distress among the many citizens of his town who are more or less interested in the game. With the World's Series only a few weeks in the offing and Rube getting as wild as a cannibal and forcing in runs, it's about time Marquard began to sand the tracks. Rube was as restless as a débutante yesterday, because it was reported out at his home in Cleveland that he had surprised himself and had run away and got married. Rube said it was news to him, but if he found it to be true, he wished to be reminded of the fact later.

The Cubs pounded him hard in the second inning for a couple of runs, and then came the third, when the haughty Richard loaded the bases and forced in a run before he was supplanted by Otis Crandall, who pitched so well that he almost looked like a husky pitching proposition for the coming Red Sox entertainment. In addition to being unable to spin the ball over where the Cubs couldn't hit it in the third inning, Rube got in his own way and made a bad toss to first base. You couldn't see Rube yesterday with a Lick telescope. Crandall pitched air-tight ball all the time he was on the mound, and gave the Cubs only three hits.

Among the tête-a-têtes which were noticed was one between Mr. Evers and Mr. Owens. After some chat Evers was seen going to the clubhouse. Mr. McGraw and Mr. Brennan, Mr. Tinker and Mr. Brennan, Mr. Archer and Mr. Brennan, and Mr. Owens and Mr. McGraw also exchanged some remarks on "How to umpire." Chicago didn't want to go away without letting everybody understand that they firmly believed that they were getting the worst of it.

Umpire Brennan did call Crandall out in the seventh inning, the third strike being called on a ball that went over half a dozen inches from the plate. It was so low it clipepd Crandall's shoestrings, but Brennan called a strike, and Manager McGraw told him that it was several degrees beyond being the limit.

Evers was banished in the sixth inning after he had singled to left and was put out trying to stretch it into a double. First Evers said he was safe two feet, then three feet, next six feet, and finally he tried to persuade Brick Owens that he was safe by a margin about as wide as the well-known Hudson River. Brick didn't believe Evers, and told him his work for the day was finished.

Heinie Zimmerman opened the second inning with a jolt to left field, and went to third on Saier's double, which Snodgras just missed. While Doyle was tossing Evers out at second Zimmy scored. After Williams fanned, Archer sent Saier home with another run.

In the third inning Sheckard singled to right and Miller bunted, Marquard making a wild toss to first, while Sheckard went around to third. Tinker rapped a single to centre, scoring Sheckard.

Zimmerman sacrificed, Marquard to Merkle, and Saier walked, filling the bases. Then Foxy Johnny Evers outwaited Marquard and drew a pass, the ticket forcing Miller in from third base. Meyers made a quick toss to first to try to catch Evers napping, but the ball struck Johnny on the anatomy and Tinker scored. That was all of Marquard, and Williams, the first batsman to face Crandall, was a victim of called strikes. Saier and Evers tried to work a double steal, but Saier was nipped at the plate.

Cheney pitched a pretty fair article of ball up to the fifth inning, when the Giants got a little batting rally out of their systems which netted them three runs. Chief Meyers, the first man up in the inning, still walks very lame, and got into the game because he said if Archer can limp and play he can, too. Meyers shot a fly right into Sheckard's hands, and Jimmy made a first-grade muff. Fletcher singled to right and Crandall was called out on strikes, the happening over which Manager McGraw made the loud howl to Umpire Brennan. Give you three guesses who won the argument. Devore rolled a hit to left field, filling the bases. Then Larry Doyle pummeled the ball to centre for two bases, scoring Meyers and Fletcher.

Chicago began to get worried, and Richie, Ruelbach, and Lavender were rushed to the bullpen to get warmed up and be ready to relieve the weakening Cheney at a minute's notice. Snodgrass and Murray were easy outs at first. New York was unable to reach Cheney very effectively, and had to take defeat as gracefully as they could.

A crowd of about 15,000 sat in and viewed the Cubs' farewell appearance. The Giants are none too pleased with the outcome of the season's series, for New York has won nine, while the Cubs have taken thirteen. Well, they are gone, and, not bumping anybody behind their backs, the Giants are real glad they don't play at the Polo Grounds any more this season.

Manager Chance Undergoes Operation

Manager Frank L. Chance of the Cubs underwent an operation yesterday which will keep him away from the Cubs' bench for a few days. The operation was performed by Dr. W. T. Fralick and Dr. F. B. Pierson, and was successful. Chance expects that he will be able to join the team before it returns home.

PIRATES' SPURT CHECKED.

Brooklyn Bats Put to Rout Three Pittsburgh Pitchers.

Pittsburgh's winning spurt, which numbered twelve victories, was halted on the threshold of the thirteenth at Washington Park yesterday when the Superbas and the Pirates clashed in their final battle of the year. Fourteen hits for twenty-three bases by the Superbas turned the trick. Manager Clarke tried four pitchers in an effort to stop the heavy cannonading, but only one of the quartet was able to hold Brooklyn hitless for a full inning. That was Lefty Smith, a recruit from the Central League who pitched the last inning against the Superbas. the score was 7 to 3.

The victory was not half as sweet to the 2,000 Brooklyn fans as the work of Stengel, a new outfielder who was purchased from the Montgomery Club of the Southern League. Stengel reported yesterday morning and was promptly put to work, both the line-up and the batting order being subjected to shifts for the newcomer. His debut proved a grand success. He went to the plate five times and on each of his first four trips he landed on Hendrix or Ferry for a clean hit. On his last visit he faced Smith and drew a pass, getting a perfect average for his afternoon's work. His hits drove in two runs and helped in the scoring of another. Stengel also starred on the paths with a pair of stolen bases, the second being the result of a clever slide under Hans Wagner when the big Teuton had the ball waiting for him. Stengel had only one chance in the field.

Pittsburgh scored a run in the first inning on Bryne's double, Donlin's sacrifice and a wild pitch. In the third Carey hit to deep left field for a home run. In the fourth Jack Miller walked, advanced on Wilson's sacrifice and scored on Butler's single. That ended Pittsburgh's scoring.

A pass to Moran and singles by Stengel, Cutshaw and Wheat netted a Brooklyn run in the first inning. In the second a single by Rucker, a pass to Moran and Stengel's single added another run. In the third Daubert tripled and scored on Wheat's double. In the fourth Otto Miller singled, advanced on Rucker's sacrifice and counted on Stengel's third hit. Daubert and Wheat hit over the right field fence for home runs in the fifth inning. The last run came in the seventh on singles by Wheat and Kirkpatrick, Fisher's sacrifice and Miller's sacrifice fly. The score:

The visitors were unable to solve Seaton's delivery, it being his fifth victory over Cincinnati this season. RAIN STOPS YANKEES WITH FIVE RUNS IN Half an Inning Had Been Played at Detroit When Downpour Ends Game.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 17.—Rain deprived the Yankees of almost certain victory to-day, coming after they had scored five runs in the first inning off young Mr. Jensen, recently of the New Haven Club. The onslaught was made after two batsmen were out. Wolverton shook up the batting order, making Midkiff lead the batting list, with Chase second. Midkiff hoisted to Veach and Chase singled to left and stole, but was snuffed out at third base on Daniels's grounder to that corner. Lelivelt singled and Simmons walked, filling the bases. This rattled young Mr. Jensen, who gave Hartzell a clout in the ribs, forcing Daniels home. McMillan singled to right, scoring Lelivelt and Simmons, and Sweeney duplicated, scoring Hartzell and McMillan. Bush threw out McConnell.

At this juncture Umpire Connolly ran for shelter, the rain having started at the same time the game did, and steadily increased its force and volume. Two games will be played to-morrow. The new batting order having been so successful, Manager Wolverton probably will adhere to it.

Boston Loses Twice to Naps.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 17.—Cleveland took two games from Boston to-day, thereby preventing the leaders from clinching the 1912 pennant. Both games were close, Cleveland winning each time in the final turn at bat. The first game, a pitchers' battle between Collins and Gregg, went eleven innings, finally being lost by Boston on successive hits by Turner, Jackson, and Lajoie. Carisch featured this game by making three singles, a double, and a triple in five times at bat.

In the second game, after Boston had taken the lead in the fourth inning, Cleveland came right back and won the game on a pass to Turner, outs by Jackson and Lajoie, and hits by Hendryx and Graney. The scores:

St. Nicholas A. C. Bouts To-night.

Young Jack O'Brien of Philadelphia, one of the cleverest boxers that the lightweight division has turned out in several years, will make his third appearance in a New York ring to-night, when he faces Young Brown of the east side in the star bout at the St. Nicholas A. C. This bout is a return affair for Brown, who was outpointed by the clever Quaker several weeks ago at the Garden A. C. Since that time Brown has made a strong showing, especially in his bout with Tommy Murphy, and he is confident that he can turn the tables.

The ten-round semi-final is attracting equally as much interest as the headliner, with such clever boxers engaged as Frankie Burns of Jersey City and Patsy Brannigan of Pittsburgh. The first of the ten-round bouts will bring together Johnny Lore of the west side and Young Ketchel, the Bridgeport boy, who became so popular here a year ago when he boxed several times.

Dix Would Not Attend a Fight.

ALBANY, Sept. 17.—"I never witnessed a boxing exhibition in my life and don't intend to," said Gov. Dix to-day, when asked if he would accept an invitation from the St. Nicholas Athletic Club of New York City to witness the bouts there to-morrow night. The invitation, which has not yet been received here, was extended for the purpose of satisfying the Governor that the Frawley law legalizing boxing is not being violated.

"The State Athletic Commission," said the Governor, "was created for the purpose of supervising sparring exhibitions, and if it does not do that there is not much use of having the commission."

O. H. Harriman a Golf Winner.

Special to The New York Times.

MAPLEWOOD, N. H., Sept. 17.—O. H. Harriman was the only New Yorker to reach the semi-final round in the Autumn open golf handicap at Maplewood to-day, three others succumbing to as many Bostonians on the home green, after excellent matches. The scores:

First Round.—C. E. Marling, St. Andrew's, beat W. H. MacDermott, New York, 5 and 4; O. H. Harriman, New York, beat T. J. Moore, Washington, 6 and 4; C. F. Cleveland, New York, beat O. D. Seavey, Magnolia Springs, 2 and 1; H. A. Jackson, Chestnut Hill, beat L. H. Cilley, Maplewood, 8 and 7; W. W. Owens, Brooklyn, beat J. R. Hilton, New York, 6 and 5; F. H. Bailey, Brae Burn, beat M. C. Kiggins, Deal, 2 and 1; V. D. Burgesser, East Orange, beat S. S. MacDermott, New York, 1 up; W. D. Eaton, Winchester, beat W. A. Foxen, Buffalo, 8 and 2.

Second Round.—Harriman beat Marling, 5 and 4; Jackson beat Cleveland, 1 up; Bailey beat Owens, 1 up; Eaton beat Burgesser, 1 up.

Slater and Mackie Golf Victors.

In the return half of a two-green four-ball match on the links of the Scarsdale Golf and Country Club yesterday, J. Harold Slater and Isaac Mackie, the Fox Hills professional, maintained their advantage of 1 up over H. C. Keyser and Jack Dowling, the Scarsdale "pro." When the quartette played at Fox Hills recently, only 18 holes were played, but yesterday they fought it out over the double round. The best individual effort was 68 in the afternoon by Mackie, who made each half of the journey in 34. Dowling made a 70 in the early hours.

'Don't Train, Girls,' Says May Sutton

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 17.—"Girls should never train for athletic events."

Declaring that she follows this rule herself, and that the only time she violated it she lost the international tennis championship, May Sutton ridiculed to-day reports that she has lost forty-seven pounds by systematic starving.

"I never went into training save once, and that once I lost the international title in England," she said.

World Series Scheduled on Sept. 25.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17.—Chairman August Hermann of the National Baseball Commission announced to-night that a meeting of the commission would be held on Sept. 25 to decide upon the schedule and rules that will govern the world's championship baseball series. The place for the meeting has not been decided upon as yet, other than it will be either in New York or Cincinnati.

TO TEST MOTOR CYCLES.

Riders in 24-Hour Race Begin Tuning Up Their Machines To-day.

Short races will precede the starting of the twenty-four hour speed contest at the Stadium-Motordrome at Brighton Beach Friday night. This series of events will open at 8:30 o'clock P. M. and will close at 9:45 o'clock when the men will have fifteen minutes to prepare for the start of the twenty-four- hour grind at 10 o'clock.

To-day the first real work-out of the men will start. Wray and Ayrault, who have lined up against the field, will try their equipment for oil and gasoline, making an effort to ride one hour without a stop. This will be the average schedule that the men will ride in the race.

This afternoon Chapple and Spencer will take several runs of an hour each to get into condition for the fray and also to eliminate any weak spots that they may find in their make-up from a mechanical standpoint.

Jimmy McNeil, the sensational Scotland star, who dashed into the limelight by defeating Chapple a week ago, will make a strong opponent with his partner, Johnny Cox of the Bronx. Cox has been winning consistently in his class at the Stadium-Motordrome and everything points to their being in the running all of the way.

Mechanical trouble will be eliminated by the presence of mechanics from the factory and a new motor can be replaced in the frame of a wrecked machine in fifteen minutes. With this dispatch, a new record is expected to be established by the twenty-second hour.

West Side T. C. Selects No New Site.

No decision was arrived at as to the new location of the West Side Tennis Club at the meeting held last night at the Hotel Manhattan. The two propositions before the members—that at Kew Gardens, Long Island, and at Morris Park, Westchester County—were ably represented by favorable arguments. The question of the change from the present site at 238th Street and Broadway became so involved, however, that it was finally voted to appoint a special committee to deal with the project and to report at the annual meeting of the club next December. The committee included Julian S. Myrick, Edward C. Conlin, Ovideo M. Bostwick, M. Ely, and Percy Hildreth.

MRS. BLACKTON'S VITA LEADS SPEED BOATS

Wins in Class A Series, Over Thirty Nautical Miles, on Hudson River Course.

Some real motor boat racing was seen yesterday on the Hudson River, and from long before noon until Old Sol had almost sunk in the west the course from Hastings to Ludlow, just below Yonkers, was almost alive with speed craft of all descriptions, with the result that with the decisions in each of the eight classes contested the pace became faster as the session drew to a close.

Mrs. J. Stuart Blackton's Vita, a 19.11 hydroplane, which won the Southern championship last year, was the all-star performer in yesterday's series, and with Ernest Lindberg as helmsman and Alfred Lindberg the mechanician found little apparent difficulty in capturing the honors in the initial series for the Inter-State Championship Trophy by covering the thirty nautical miles course in 1 hour 23 minutes and 23 seconds, which with her allowance of 36 minutes 8 seconds made her corrected time 47 minutes 15 seconds.

Muirmaid, with Pierre A. Proal of the Red Bank Motor Boat Club at the helm, put up a gallant fight for the trophy and finished second, while W. J. Brainard loomed up in third place with Gunfire, Jr.

Peter Pan V. had a hollow victory in Class C, in which her only opponent was the ill-fated Tech, Jr., which sunk just before finishing the first lap of the thirty-mile race. Big Balaam, Frank Bailey's stanch-looking "speeder," had a walkover in the B class, covering the distance in 1:18:22.

F. Meller's Almel turned the tables on Valiant II. in the open boat division, and Elise duplicated her first day's victory by again defeating Greyhound. F. C. Haven's Avis scored over Caroline in the Class D for cruisers, but her margin of victory was seven seconds, showing how closely the boats are rated and how well they are managed.

Peter Pan, Sr., almost lost the Class E cruisers and journeyed over the 22½-mile course in 1:27:57, while Alfred S. repeated her victory of Monday by again giving her wash to Empire, Idle Hour, and Canadice.

Perfect conditions welcomed the advent of the racing craft, and there was something doing every minute of the session. The sport was well handled, as the various classes were sent away on scheduled time. The river was dotted with a variety of boats, and the shore contained its quota of enthusiasts gathered to witness the sport.

A vast amount of driftwood, which showed itself at various points along the course, caused much concern, and the committee was compelled to send out boats to pick up the fragments, which could put some of the frailest of the racing boats out of commission upon contact. Humpty Dumpty, the entry of Ernest Lee Jahnke of the Southern Yacht Club of New Orleans, a contestant in the speed boat division for Class A, was put out of business by a collision with a log which ripped out a couple of her planks and caused the owner to call for help, as he was fearful of her sinking. She was eventually pulled up on the davits of the Paula, Commodore Blackton's yacht.

After Peter Pan, Sr., had won in Class E, Mr. Simpson, her owner, trailed his Peter Pan V. around the course during the progress of the race with Tech, Jr. He asserted that he was taking no chances in having his boat go to the bottom without at least being in the neighborhood to help his men. Mr. Simpson made a match with F. G. Haven's Nalka for a $500 cup, to be raced for to-morrow to Peekskill and return, about forty-five nautical miles and in conjunction with the long-distance race of that day.

In the principal race yesterday, which was the last, for the Class A speed boats, ten contestants accepted, and one of the most picturesque events of the season was the outcome. Vita was almost away with the gun, as Ernest Lindberg had set his watch with the officials' chronometer and took no chances getting the worst of the start. Gunfire, Jr., got off in Vita's wake, both being closely followed by Muirmaid, The Limit, The Bug, Bull Moose, Flinders, and Humpty Dumpty. Mike's Dream had a little engine trouble and lay "dead" alongside the Paula for a couple of minutes before her helmsman could get a spark.

The ten boats furnished a pretty picture speeding away from the start, and when they loomed up again Muirmaid was slightly in the van. Passing the finish line for the first time of the four laps, Muirmaid still led with Albert E. Smith's The Bug second, and Vita third. The next circuit showed no change in the leader, but The Bug had dropped back to sixth position, with Vita and Gunfire, Jr., running second and third. As far as the three ultimate winners were concerned, this remained the order to the end, with Muirmaid making the best elapsed time, beating in actual performance Vita by a minute and seventeen seconds. The summary:

STRAIGHT SET VICTORIES.

Eight Women Advance Near Semi-Final in Montclair Tennis Singles.

Straight set victories was the order in which eight of the fair wielders of the racquet won their places in the round before the semi-final in the Women's Cup singles yesterday, on the clay courts of the Montclair Athletic Club, at Montclair, N. J. Miss Marie Wagner, the National indoor champion, was the only one who found it necessary to engage in two matches, so that the round might be brought level. In her first match, Miss Wagner disposed of Miss Anna Doyle at 6–2, 6–1. Then she took on Miss Jane Rowson, and won 6–4, 6–3.

Three of the pairs arrived in the doubles semi-final round, and the best of the matches by which this was achieved was that in which Mrs. Neff and Florence Sheldon, the latter the referee of the tournament, defeated Miss Adele C. Cragin and Miss Rowson at 7–5, 6–2. The summary:

Women's Cup, Singles.—Second Round—Miss Marie Wagner defeated Miss Anna Doyle, 6–2, 6–1.

Third Round—Miss Wagner defeated Miss Jane Rowson, 6–4, 6–3; Miss Edith Condict defeated Mrs. Robert A. Pope, 6–4, 6–1; Miss Edith Gwynne defeated Miss Adele C. Cragin, 6–2, 6–4; Mrs. Charles N. Beard defeated Miss Muriel Parker, 6–2, 6–0; Miss Edith Sheldon defeated Miss Helen Van Vleck, 6–2, 6–2; Miss Margaret Seymoure defeated Miss Hazel Sawyer, 6–4, 6–4; Miss Clare Cassell defeated Miss Miriam Steever, 6–3, 6–2; Mrs. R. B. Neff defeated Miss Ora Carter, 6–0, 6–1.

Women's Doubles.—First Round—Miss Edith M. Handy and Miss Marie A. Irving defeated Miss Margaret Seymoure and Miss Molly Johnston, 10–12, 7–5, 7–5; Mrs. David Mills and Miss Barr defeated Miss Marguerite Uhler and Miss Evelyn Uhler, 6–0, 6–1.

Second Round—Miss Alice Marshall and Miss Virgian Moffat defeated Mrs. J. O. Blanchard and Mrs. George B. de Gersdorff by default; Mrs. Charles N. Beard and Miss Miriam Steever defeated Miss Anna Doyle and Mrs. Lindley Z. Murray, 6–2, 6–1; Miss Byrell Sawyer and Miss Hazel Sawyer defeated Miss Clare Cassell and Mrs. Henry Blum by default; Miss Adele C. Cragin and Miss Jane Rowson defeated Mrs. J. A. H. Hopkins and partner by default; Mrs. David Mills and Miss Barr defeated Miss Marguerite Whittenburg and Miss Caroline Vogel, 6–4, 6–2; Mrs. R. B. Neff and Miss Florence Sheldon defeated Miss Alida Hamilton and Miss Anne Hamilton, 6–0, 6–1.

Third Round—Mrs. Charles N. Beard and Miss Miriam Steever defeated Miss Byrell Sawyer and Miss Hazel Sawyer, 6–2, 6–2; Mrs. R. B. Neff and Miss Florence Sheldon defeated Miss Adele C. Cragin and Miss Jane Rowson, 7–5, 6–2; Miss Leslie Hill and Miss Edith Gwynne defeated Mrs. David Mills and Miss Barr, 6–2, 6–2.

Mixed Doubles.—First Round—Miss Marie Wagner and Otto H. Hinck defeated Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Beard, 6–4, 6–3.

New Jersey Doubles Decided.

After two sessions upon the lawn tennis courts C. Frederick Watson, Jr., and Charles R. Leonard, the pair of the Orange Lawn Tennis Club, won the championship in the men's doubles in the New Jersey State tournament, which was brought to an end on the grounds of the Morristown Field Club at Morristown, N. J. The final score against Vanderbilt B. Ward and Dr. William Rosenbaum, the defeated pair, was 9–11, 8–6, 6–1. The first installment of the match was played late Monday afternoon, and was terminated by darkness, with Ward and Dr. Rosenbaum leading at 11–9 and 6–all in the second set. W. Ketcham won the final of the consolation singles. He defeated R. B. Kalsey by the score of 6–2, 7–5.

BURMAN TO START FIRST.

Drivers Draw for Positions in Milwaukee Automobile Races.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 17.—Drawing for positions in the Grand Prix, Vanderbilt Cup, Pabst Trophy, and Wisconsin Motor Challenge Trophy automobile races took place at the course this afternoon.

In the Grand Prix Bob Burman will start first. The remainder of the field will be sent away in the following order: Nelson, Lozier; Tetzlaff, Fiat; Hughes, Mercer; De Palma, Mercedes; Wishart, Mercedes; Bruce-Brown, Fiat; Mulford, Knox; Clark, Mercedes; Bergdoll, Benz; Bragg, Fiat; Horan, Benz.

In the Vanderbilt Cup race the drivers will start in this order: Pullen, Mercer; Mulford, Knox; Nelson, Lozier; Wishart, Mercedes; Anderson, Stulz; Clark, Mercedes; Tetzlaff, Fiat.

A coincidence in the drawing was that Bruce-Brown drew the same number, 87, in the Grand Prix as he did last July, when he won the first leg in the French Grand Prix.

DILLON AXWORTHY'S STAKE.

Rain Stops Racing at Detroit After Five Heats Are Contested.

DETROIT, Mich, Sept. 17.—Rain this afternoon interrupted grand circuit racing at the Michigan State Fair after five heats had been run off in the various classes. Only one event was decided—the two-year-old division of the Horseman Futurity, three heats of which were contested yesterday. Dillon Axworthy, beautifully driven by Serrill, captured the fourth and deciding heat to-day after a hard race from wire to wire.

Sid Anna and Robert Milroi each took a heat in the 2:12 trot; Joe Patchen II. was easily the best in the one heat of the 1:12 pace, and Brighton B., after racing neck and neck with Mahomet Watts in the three-year-old trotting division of the futurity, got the decision by a narrow margin.

Minneapolis Brings Stallions.

Lew Wallace Cochran, a horse breeder of Crawfordsville, Ind., returned yesterday on the Atlantic Transport liner Minneapolis with 140 Percheron, Shire, and Belgian stallions which he is taking to his stock farm in Indiana. In speaking of horse breeding in the United States Mr. Cochran said that "there is a scarcity of good horses at the present time, notwithstanding the automobiles and an impression in large cities that the day of the horse is past. There are some things," he added, "that a horse can do that an automobile never can be made to do, and the farmers of this country realize this and demand good horses for their work. Prices are better than they ever were, and the farms are calling for more all the time. The native American stock has done very well for a long time, but it needs rejuvenation by the admixture of European blood of the best-tested sort, and this we breeders are trying to supply. A good team of horses from the best Belgian or French blood now is worth mighty close to a thousand dollars, for the farmers want the best, and good horses are scarce and the demand is growing."

Blues Win Meadow Brook Polo.

MEADOW BROOK, N. Y., Sept. 17.—There was a cut-in practice game of polo this afternoon between the Whites and Blues, resulting in a victory for the latter by a score of 12 to 10. At the end of the second period L. Lambert, who was playing back for the Blues, left the game, to be rushsed to a steamer sailing for England late this afternoon, and his place was taken by Watson Weck on the Blues for four periods, when darkness ended the game. S. Cary, playing back for the Whites, was replaced by C. C. Rumsey. The first line-up, into which P. Stevenson and J. C. Condin cut in after the second period, was:

Whites—E. D. Morgan, Jr., R. Bacon, Jr., W. Farrell, S. Cary.
Blues—W. G. Parks, W. D. Straight, H. Phipps, L. Lambert.

YALE TAKES UP FORWARD PASSING

Perfecting This Play Engaged Much Attention—Signals for 'Varsity Men.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 17.—That the Yale eleven will make considerable use of the forward pass this year is indicated by the careful attention given to this play by the coaches at practice the last few days. Of the squad of eighty men, more than thirty were drilled for the greater part of the afternoon to-day on this play alone.

Head Coach Howe picked a 'Varsity eleven and put the men through a fast signal drill and practice at breaking through the scrub line. Dr. Sanford, the team physician for many years, said today that Yale has the most promising looking material in recent years.

Cornell showed up well at quarter back, and at present he leads all the candidates for the position left vacant by Howe's graduation.

MORE MEN FOR HARVARD.

Lawson, Lingard, and Callendar Come Out to Make Crimson Team.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 17.—Harvard's football squad was increased to sixty members this afternoon, the most important recruits being Douglas Lawson and Lingard, both experienced ends, and Callendar, who played quarter back last year with the second team. Lawson was a good end, but now weighs close to 180 pounds, and will be welcomed as a possible tackle. Lingard's chances for getting a chance to play end have increased as Howard, one of last year's substitutes, will not return to college.

There were two sessions on Soldiers Field to-day, that in the afternoon being worked on the charging machines, and the work at the tackling dummies was as hard as at midseason, which speaks well for the physical condition of the men.

That Harvard will have some good kickers this year was demonstrated by the work of Hardwick and Brickley, both of whom punted as well as did Felton, whose eligibility has not yet been settled. Brickley also did some good drop kicking, scoring several goals from the 40-yard line as well as difficult angles. Last year Brickley scored 65 points on the Harvard freshmen team, almost half of them by goals from the field.

This year's freshman squad began work to-day. There were only 35 men out, these having been selected by the football management. McKinlock of St. Paul's School, a Chicago boy who led his team to victory over Groton in 1911, was the most conspicuous candidate, Ned Mahan, the Andover star, not reporting, although he will join the squad to-morrow.

Indians Keen for Football Work.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Sept. 17.—The Carlisle Indian football squad worked an hour and a half this afternoon on preliminary signals for the four practice elevens, and a twenty-minute scrimmage between the third and fourth teams, upon which strenuous conflicts most of the veterans directed their observation at Coach Warner's orders. Halfback Bracklin carried the ball with great skill, and may make the first eleven if he continues to improve.

Capt. Thorpe who, with Assistant Coach Lone Star, kept their eyes on the various small squads, gave much encouragement to the new candidates. Observers who witnessed the Carlisle team's preparatory work for a number of years, say that they have never seen as fine a spirit coupled with intense eagerness to learn everything about football as is shown by this year's squad.

George Earth of backfield material was temporarily laid off for a slight leg injury this afternoon.

Cornell in Scrimmage Again.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Another hard scrimmage was engaged in by Cornell in practice this afternoon and the first team scored twice. Opposed to it was a scrappy scrub eleven, with four old 'Varsity players in the line-up. They were "Granny" Miller, last year's 'Varsity substitute centre, who was used at full back to-day; Whyte at centre, Munns at left tackle, and R. B. Whyte at right half back. Forward passes were tried. They were of the wide variety and resulted in several big gains, though O'Hearne, for the scrubs, intercepted one. Nash, the 'Varsity right end, carried the ball for a 25-yard gain close to the goal line, and after several short dashes into the line Hill put it over. Fritz, playing right half on the 'Varsity, made a number of pretty long runs, and Butler pulled off a couple of nice runs from the quarter back position. Underhill, full back of last year's eleven, reported for practice, leaving only O'Connor and E. Y. Rich still to be heard from.

Princeton in Signal Drill.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 17.—Signals were used for the first time by Princeton's football men to-day in preparation for the first scrimmage, which is listed for to-morrow, and the Tigers were quick to learn more than a dozen plays, many of which were shifts. The 'Varsity line showed two changes when Lee displaced Lowe at right tackle and Andrews took Walters's place at right end. Both players have had two years' scrub experience and are good punters.

Yost Takes Hold at Michigan.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 17.—With the arrival of Coach Yost the 1912 football season began to assume definite shape to-day at the University of Michigan. Yost expressed himself as far from satisfied with the outlook for a winning team.

"It is the worst in years," he said, after looking over the men who have promised to report for practice. "It is going to be a problem to place these men so that we can beat Pennsylvania, but we'll have to do it."

MR. MURPHY'S REASONS.

Mr. CHARLES F. MURPHY declares that he knows of no reason why Gov. DIX should not be renominated. It would be more interesting to get at the reasons why Mr. MURPHY believes that Mr. DIX should be renominated. Evidently, they must be Murphy reasons, reasons entirely personal to the Tammany chief.

Persons even moderately well informed as to political sentiment in the State know entirely sufficient and convincing reasons why Mr. DIX should not again become the Democratic candidate for Governor. One of these reasons is the practical certainty that he could not be elected. To a leader guided by considerations of his party's welfare that would suffice. Party chiefs not entirely given over to stupidity and obstinacy are accustomed to inquire diligently as to the strength of a candidate with the people. The inquiry as to Gov. DIX's strength has already proceeded far enough to show that he should not be nominated.

Mr. MURPHY knows this perfectly well. Therefore, when he still insists that there is no reason why the nomination should not go to Gov. DIX, he himself adds another most potent reason to those already existing for the selection of some other candidate. This year, and in the present state of public feeling, Mr. MURPHY's favor is not exactly a certificate of availability or of recommendation to confidence. To put it plainly, the inevitable inference would be that Mr. MURPHY wants a Governor with whom he can "get on," with whom he can "do business," and that he has found Mr. DIX to be such a Governor. It is entirely possible that when the convention meets Mr. MURPHY will change his mind. It is not conceivable that the party will yield to his dictation in accepting a candidate doomed to almost sure defeat.

THE STATE'S NEW HIGHWAYS.

In issuing a defense of its work against the charges made by our neighbor The World, the State Highway Commission would have done well, we think, to give more attention to the allegation that under the present Commission the cost of building the new highways averages over $20,000 a mile, and is in particular cases much higher, while under the Hughes Commission the average was $12,000 a mile, and the maximum not more than $20,000. That is the most serious charge made, the only one to which the voters of the State will pay much attention. The charge that an excessive number of foremen has been employed by the present Commission was based on a misapprehension and was effectively met by a statement put out by State Superintendent of Highways REEL. The selection of certain "expedited" routes for immediate construction, the diversion of work and expenditure from some of the so-called market roads, and the point made about the failure of the Commission to apportion the work and the appropriation equitably among the counties, all these are of small account. The Commission satisfactorily meets charges of that nature. The statement that the politicians have been able to get a good many of their favorites upon the pay rolls will not particularly interest the people. That is always the case in public works. It is easy to charge, it will be most difficult to prove, that Mr. MURPHY is interested in the contracts. But the taxpayers of the State do want to know whether they are getting a dollar's worth for every dollar expended in the construction of highways under the $50,000,000 appropriation.

That is the vital question. The people are to be asked to vote another appropriation of $50,000,000. Their vote will certainly be adverse if they have reason to believe that the first $50,000,000 has been ill spent, that a good many more miles of highway might have been built for the money under a businesslike administration. In dealing with contractors eternal vigilance is essential. If it shall appear that there has been a wide difference in the contract price for construction of roads in different parts of the State under similar conditions, or that awards have been made at excessive prices, those facts will affect the minds of the voters, and it will be difficult, if not impossible, to secure their approval of the new expenditure. The Commission, in justice to itself, and for the information of the people, ought to publish a detailed statement of the work done, the names of the contractors, the amount of work awarded to each, and, most particularly, the contract price in each case. The voters are entitled to this knowledge in order that they may make up their minds whether or not the expenditure of a further sum of $50,000,000 should be authorized for building highways.

PINK LEMONADE.

The death of HENRY E. ALLOTT will be mourned by boys of the older generation. For he was the circus man whose red-coated cinnamon candies, dropped in a tub of lemonade, thereafter made the pink beverage popular wherever the traveling animals and chariots, the steam calliope, the band, the horseback ladies, and funny clowns driving donkey wagons would draw up in front of the big tent after the parade. P. T. BARNUM could not have evolved the greatest show on earth without HENRY E. ALLOTT's pink lemonade.

The nomadic circus with its feats of horsemanship, leaping through hoops, while galloping, of male and female riders, the tan-bark, and the smell of the menagerie, recur with the memory of the sweetish cool tang of the bright-colored drink, sipped in full sight of the wonders of the real mermaid, the wild men of Borneo, the sword swallower, the india-rubber man, the fat lady, and the living skeleton depicted in front of the sideshow, where the "barker" extolled them. The one-ring circus is now a rare survival. Its old-fashioned equestrian feats have given way, in three-ring arenas and modern hippodromes, to more ambitious acrobatic performances, and to daring exhibitions requiring an immense organization and expensive and complicated machinery. The boys may no longer water the elephants and ponies, or warily crawl under the tent. Those pink and joyful days are past.

METHODS OF HOUSING REFORM.

The modern movement for housing reform may be said to have had its origin in the cholera season of 1832 in England. A lesson was needed as to the value of sanitary science, and that visitation of the disease supplied it. The movement then begun received added impetus in 1841 from the formation of the Metropolitan Association for Improving the Dwellings of the Industrial Classes, and this in turn was supplemented by the Shaftesbury acts of 1857 and later efforts in the same direction.

In 1864 the late Miss OCTAVIA HILL, who died in London last month at the age of 74, began what was a new development of the general idea of housing reform. Aided by JOHN RUSKIN, who loaned her $15,000 for the purpose, Miss HILL gradually acquired a number of unsanitary, filthy, and otherwise undesirable tenements and began putting them in a state of cleanliness and repair, charging moderate rent, but insisting on absolute punctuality in payment and co-operation on the part of tenants in keeping the tenements clean and wholesome. She demonstrated what could be done by a landlord who established right relations with tenants, and who co-operated with them in making dwellings suitable places in which to live. There was nothing charitable in Miss HILL's plans, but she succeeded not only in eventually repaying her loan from RUSKIN, but also in practically demonstrating that the evils of the old tenement system in London rested upon the ignorance and incompetency of landlords, or their greed and selfishness, quite as much as upon the tenants themselves. She demonstrated that tenants were influenced morally and otherwise by their domestic surroundings, and that in the humblest tenement it was possible for the occupants to live in cleanliness, decency and comfort.

London has done much on a large scale in recent years to abate the evils of the old-time slums, most of the worst of which in consequence have disappeared from the city. Large clearances of such quarters have been made, and the ground either transformed into parks or playgrounds or covered with modern sanitary dwellings. New York has followed similar plans and heroic methods in dealing with its worst congested sections. It has been aided in this work and the necessary expense has been greatly lightened by the fact that the city needed more parks and playgrounds and long approaches to its great bridges over the East River. But the time has now arrived when such operations in New York, as well as in London and other English cities and on the Continent, must be supplemented by preventive action as well. London and many other European cities are now planning ahead in order to prevent the formation of new congested districts similar to the old. By the law enacted in 1909 cities in England were enabled to plan new city sections along model lines, and so prevent suburban sections from growing up into slums for the next generation to demolish or otherwise deal with. In these new sections no more than twelve houses to the acre are permitted, and these must be of medium height, harmonious in design, and streets must follow the contour of the land. The streets also are made broad, the sewerage and lighting are carefully looked after, and boulevards and open spaces give distinction and minister to the health and beauty of urban life. The old haphazard plan of allowing a city to grow according to the designs of speculators and landlords intent on the largest possible financial returns has passed in England. It ought also to pass in New York. There are areas in Brooklyn, and perhaps in the Bronx, which are rapidly becoming congested, owing to the lack of proper city supervision. New York should, like London and other cities, be wise in time and wisely plan its future development.

"ROUNDERS" AND FINGER-PRINTS.

"Judge, it is the first time," is usually the plea of the "panhandler" caught begging in the streets. Nobody knows whether it is the first time or the twentieth; in various courts and under assumed names the offender may have repeatedly got off with a light or suspended sentence. Rowdyism in public conveyances is unchecked because the records of the hoodlums are not known. Drivers convicted of automobile speeding are notoriously "first offenders," who boast openly of the number of times they have been fined. The State Charities Aid Association has published statistics of "rounders"—drunkards and disorderly persons continually in and out of the police station, the Magistrates' Courts, the Workhouse, the Almshouse, the City Hospital, the Municipal Lodging House, and other institutions. One such person, it was shown, cost this city more than $1,300, another $2,500, another $2,800, by their habits of vagrancy and disorderly conduct.

The Committee on Criminal Courts of the Charity Organization Society advises that the principle of finger-printing, so that it may know whether the offender is before the court for the first time, or the second, or the twentieth, should be extended. Scores, hundreds, even thousands of persons spend their lives as "guests" of the municipality. Others are incarcerated periodically or at long intervals. It is of the utmost importance that the chronic offenders against the public peace and morality should be sharply differentiated. The finger-print system not only accomplishes this, but has proved itself quite as useful in showing cases of persons charged with misdemeanors and crime who have not hitherto been before the courts. It is the defense of the innocent, and a sure indication of those who have once been convicted of guilt.

In Manhattan and the Bronx there are eight Day Courts and two Night Courts where the system has been in daily use; in them persons who are new offenders must, in cases of drunkenness, vagrancy, or disorderly conduct, leave the record of convolutions of their finger tips. The total arraignments in the two boroughs in 1911 were 106,281; of these nearly one-half were upon the three charges specified. One-half of the cases arraigned in the Magistrates' Courts, and two-thirds of all in which these courts have a summary jurisdiction, fall into these classes. The annual slaughter of hapless individuals in the streets by reckless motor-car drivers prompts the Committee on Criminal Courts to suggest that finger-printing be extended to automobile speeders. The whole system, extended and perfected, will cost about $25,000 annually for salaries of experts and for photographic materials. From every point of view the money would be well invested.

THE GENTLEMAN BURGLAR MYTH.

M. BERTILLON, anthropometrist and inventor of the system of identification of criminals known by his name, is reported as saying: "The gentleman burglar is a myth. He does not exist."

The famous head of the Criminal Identification Department of Paris is an authority on crime and criminals. He is not only familiar with the ways of thieves and crooks and criminals of all classes, but he has reduced the methods of identifying them to a science. When he states, therefore, that "Raffles" and "Arsène Lupin" exist only in romance the statement is one that will cause many to doubt the impressions they have gained from reading such romances of crime or robbery as the adventures of Jack Sheppard or Robin Hood or GABORIAU's novels. M. BERTILLON goes further and says burglars and thieves of international fame are usually servants, hangers-on at the race tracks, or small clerks whose imitation of the manners of gentlemen are easy to detect. Possibly they are easy of detection to an experienced criminologist such as M. BERTILLON or to one knowing beforehand with whom he has to deal, but impressions gained in the Rogues' Gallery of Police Headquarters are essentially different from those formed of the gentleman burglar who pocketed the gouty merchant's candlesticks beneath his nose and walked off with them as told by some anonymous bard in the school readers of a generation ago. Among the many romances of Newgate a hundred years or more ago were many that had for their hero a burglar who successfully played the gentleman of that day in his calling. One of the manuscript books in the possession of Scotland Yard detectives a few years ago, and possibly at present, was drawn up by a Bachelor of Arts. It contained a carefully written and compiled guide to crime and the commission of criminal offenses ranging from pocket-picking and burglary to murder.

There have also been many instances of real burglars and thieves who have played the rôle of gentlemen so well that their identification as criminals was a shock to the community in which they lived and to people who supposed they knew them well. The Chicago professor, for instance, whose loot and whose identity as a burglar were discovered the other day is an instance in point. The fact of the duality in man, the existence of good and evil warring within, sometimes one dominating and sometimes the other, is as old as humanity. People generally have accepted what M. BERTILLON calls the gentleman burglar myth because it conforms to the facts in human nature.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Suicide, Not an Immolation. With Gen. NOGI's will to throw new light on his death, his end loses a good deal, if not all, of its distinctively Japanese character, and becomes at least plausibly explicable as due to just such motives as occasionally lead men all over the world to kill themselves.

Presumably the dispatches give us the essential parts of this document. If there had been in it anything stating, or even intimating, that the General died as might a daimio or samurai under the old régime, in the belief that he could and should follow his Emperor to the other world and there continue the service that he had rendered here, surely we would have been told of it. Instead we read what might have been written anywhere by an old man, weary and lonely, who had brooded long over the part, dreadful as well as heroic, which as the conqueror of Port Arthur he had played and the thousands of his countrymen who had gone to their deaths at his orders. For these sacrifices he could have had no compunctions, in the sense of thinking them wrong, but he could none the less have regretted them bitterly, and they may have been the cause of his obvious melancholia—that mysterious state that so often, in its more advanced forms, leads to self-destruction.

The fact that the General bequeathed his property to his wife shows that the tragedy was not planned in all its details as it occurred, and the fact that he did not kill himself in the manner prescribed in the ancient ritual for the ceremony of hara-kiri, confirms the theory that in his death no more than in his life was he a survival of Old Japan. What could have been more modern than the direction that his body should be used for scientific purposes? The man who could do that had few illusions as to the efficacy of graveside immolations.

Gen. NOGI was apparently in the familiar mental state of those who, after leading an active life, find themselves in retirement with nothing to do that interests them, and he had the added sorrow that his sons had perished in the war. To take this view of Gen. NOGI's death deprives it of a romantic and heroic element, but it also spares it from criticism as essentially absurd and due to a belated observance of outworn superstitions. The balance is in favor of Japanese civilization, as something more than merely superficial, and therefore the General's countrymen, if well advised, will accept it without resentment as relieving them from the need to defend and praise what in their hearts they knew would make the world, with reason, question the reality of Japan's emergence from the Middle Ages.

Straight Logic Refuted. With the logic of what GEORGE BERNARD SHAW says about letting the imprisoned suffragettes starve themselves to death if they choose, there is, of course, no fault to find. They were fairly tried and justly convicted of breaking the laws of their land, and, having been sent to prison for such terms as would have been imposed on other lawbreakers guilty of similar offenses, consistency requires that they should be kept behind the bars, even though they determine to make the most desperate of jail evasions.

But of course, though talking so logically, Mr. SHAW knows that he is talking nonsense. The problem of the British Government is not what the effect of continued imprisonment will be on these women, but what the effect on itself would be should they attain martyrdom in the eyes of their friends and sympathizers as a result of the Government's severity. That changes the whole situation, and Mr. SHAW's syllogism—as he doubtless intended—falls in ruins.

He manifests equal craft when he says that if these women get out of prison by the simple expedient of refusing to eat, all other prisoners will follow their example. Of course he knows better and deliberately ignores the fact that it is only prisoners of a certain sort, quite different from the ordinary criminal, that ever resort to this expedient. As a matter of fact, too, precautions are taken against the commission of suicide by ordinary criminals for whom nobody has any sympathy or interest except of a rather cold and academic sort. They would probably be "tube fed" if they neglected their rations too long.

The suffragette misdemeanants and felons may not be "politicals" in the full sense of that term, and yet they are to much the same extent as are the assassins, thieves, and rioters to whom even Russia usually grants the name. However unwisely, they are the advocates and exponents of a "cause," and not seekers for private and personal advantage. That does make a difference, always, and of necessity the British Government recognizes the difference by giving her liberty to every suffragette prisoner who convinces it that the alternative is her death. It has to do so in mere self-defense.

Hopefully Attacking the Hatpin. Paris has grappled with the hatpin problem with that directness and efficiency which characterize the French mind, and by municipal ordinance has forbidden any woman who wears these utensils with points unprotected to enter street cars or other public vehicles, as well as halls of assembly and places of amusement.

This is bold action—bolder than our Aldermen, though vehemently urged more than once to take it, have ventured to follow. There will be many difficulties, too, connected with its enforcement, for that will depend, in most of the instances mentioned, on the willingness of seekers for public patronage to offend a considerable and important part of those who have patronage to give.

It will be noticed that even Paris did not go the length of banning the unprotected hatpin altogether; it only said that such hatpins should not be worn in places where they are especially dangerous. "All right," the Parisian fair may say, "we will not enter such places, and we will see how long you like that!" And it wouldn't be liked long or at all.

If only hatpins could be made unfashionable, how soon would they disappear! Women used to get along without them, and thought ribbons tied under their chins were pretty. They may think so again any day, and would if the thing were proposed in just the right quarters by a skillful suggestionist. Won't MUENSTERBERG or FOREL or some other expert in that line undertake the task, perform it, and gain the world's gratitude?

FOR A BOOTH MEMORIAL.

General's Daughter Outlines Plan for a Teachers' College.

Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army in America has made public appeal for a memorial to the late Gen. Booth, founder of the organization. The appeal, which is in the form of an open letter, is as follows:

120 West Fourteenth Street, New York.

MEMORIAL TO GEN. BOOTH, FOUNDER OF THE SALVATION ARMY.

The great project that has burdened my mind and heart through the past two years has been the securing in this country of a suitable and adequate property for a central training college for increasing our facilities for the training of officers in the ranks of the Salvation Army in its many and varied branches.

It is now pressed upon me that no more fitting memorial in the United States could be lifted to the life of the Salvation Army founder than the acquirement of such an institution.

It was among the strongest and greatest ambitions of the latter years of my father's life that a more complete training college should be established in New York, where men and women desiring to devote their lives to the interests of suffering humanity in all its phases can be more efficiently educated to fill the different positions of our field.

The students for this institution would come from all classes of society, and would be instructed, as well as by lecture and class, by the world's best teacher—practical experience—through coming into daily conflict with the sorrows and sins of the unfortunate and by daily practice of the Army's successful methods and teaching in relieving them.

I cannot but feel, from the messages of appreciation of my father and his life's work that have poured in from every part of this great Nation, that America, equal with any country, has loved and valued him, and will quickly and generously support a memorial to his name that will help to make the work he established still more effectual in its manifold activities among the most needy classes.

As customary with Salvation Army properties, the college would be of a plain, military order, avoiding unnecessary expense in ornamentation, but would be up to date in all the latest conveniences.

My brother, Gen. Bramwell Booth, has sent the following cable on the subject for insertion in the press of America:

> LONDON, England.—I am importuned everywhere to suggest a scheme for expressing the almost universal admiration felt for the General's work. In connection with this I agree to your proposal for the United States of a memorial training college and central headquarters, with a spacious hall, and an industrial institution for the special purpose of training officers for every branch of army service. This would accomplish one of the greatest of my father's ambitions for America.
>
> BRAMWELL BOOTH, General.

It is at this juncture too early to issue a formal statement regarding the project; the details have yet to be worked out, but it is estimated that the sum of $250,000 at least will be required, and I am happy to say that already we have in hand subscriptions to the amount of $22,000 toward the project. As the plans become matured they will be given in full to the public, and I am very hopeful that the response to the appeal will be worthy of the famed generosity of our country. Communications may be sent to me at the above address.

GRUMBLING GUARDSMEN.

Convert Even a Picnic with Pretty Girls Into a Hardship.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"National Guardsman" in to-day's TIMES asks "Can some one, however, inform the public the motive for ordering four regiments of the National Guard to Piping Rock, L. I., next Saturday for a brigade review by Gov. Dix, the review to be held on the grounds of some race track association with admission charged?"

I think I can. In a word, a pleasant Summer half holiday has been arranged by the commanding officers of the Manhattan troops as part recompense for the arduous work of last month in the Connecticut manoeuvres. Our brigade has been invited to a beautiful country club—not a race track association—for Saturday afternoon and evening. There will be a splendid concert by the four bands of the outfit—the Seventh, Twelfth, Sixty-ninth, and Seventy-first—at no cost to the commands at all. There will be pretty girls galore, plenty of refreshments for everybody, a fine review and evening parade, and special trains to take us home after the day's fun.

Yet your correspondent affects that this is a hardship. We have other men like him in the National Guard, but not many. These same people complain that there is no water to drink because in the morning they have forgotten to fill their canteens at the faucet at the head of the company street. They emit loud cries because the commissary only serves them with bacon, hard tack, beans, and coffee. They call a hike of a half-dozen miles a "forced march," and when it rains they roar because they ever enlisted.

If "National Guardsman" grumbles when he is asked to spend a pleasant half holiday amid beautiful surroundings, what would he do if a few real bullets were flying around and there wasn't any chicken salad and ice cream in the commissariat?

The Old Aqueduct Walk.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A correspondent in to-day's TIMES wishes to know of some pleasant walks in the vicinity of New York. As a New Yorker, born and bred, who has done a great deal of walking in and about New York, I can think of no prettier or more interesting walk than that along the old aqueduct. Your correspondent can take the Subway to Van Cortlandt Park, and from there take the trolley car to Getty Square, Yonkers; or he can take the New York Central, Putnam Division, to Getty Square. At Getty Square he can make inquiries as to the beginning of the old aqueduct path, (it is only a few blocks from Getty Square.) Let him not be baffled if he comes to a gate or two in his path, but let him pass through or climb over. He can continue his way along the old aqueduct as far as Tarrytown if he so chooses. There are few more delightful walks than this. If he would like a shorter walk, he can take some of the paths in Van Cortlandt Park, which are very pretty.

Suggests Public Winter Concerts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why not continue the recent musical soirees during the Fall and Winter seasons? If the idea of entertaining and educating our men and women by recourse to good music is correct—and obviously it is popularly shared—then this idea holds true even though the recitals be given during the Winter solstice.

The objection that there is lack of room may be overcome by using the evening recreation centres and public schools. By giving these concerts on Friday or Saturday evening there will be no conflict with the educational work of the schools or the industrial occupations of those likely to attend.

I am certain this would act as a good substitute for the many oft improper and coarse dances given in the city. As a deterrent to those who attend with no other apparent object than to cause annoyance, a small fee might be charged, which also might go to compensate already overburdened school janitors for their additional work.

FIT CANDIDATES.

Would Not Eugenic Tests Reveal Their True Qualifications?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the whirl of new departures, new policies, wider liberties, and stricter controls—all aboard for the millennium!—amid the promises of directed and supervised and prophylactic social and political evolution, one simple measure for the safeguarding of the interests of Nation and people seems to me to be worth pointing out. It is so obvious and feasible a measure, so entirely in line with modern scientific thought, that it is a puzzle that it has not been proposed before. I mean an examination for fitness of all candidates for elective office after the manner of the eugenic examinations for marriage.

Such an examination for administrative fitness should be threefold—mental, moral, and physical—as I purpose to show, if you will allow me the space. The scheme is so simple that its outlines will suffice to prove its value to our public welfare in an infinitude of details.

The mental test should begin with a grueling examination in logic, the candidate's ability to reason straight from given premises, especially in the fields of lawmaking and political economy. History, particularly its socio-economic side, should stand next in importance, with a digression into the field of hero worship as a deception of the past. Finance should not be forgotten, and the aspirant's conception of the relation of protection to prosperity closely inquired into. Eccentricities of spelling not to count against him in the written part of the examination. On the other hand, his knowledge and consciousness of the meaning of words, particularly of epithets, should be closely studied in the oral tests.

The increasingly close relation between intellect and morals in these days of scientific psychological progress need not be pointed out. So the mental test would almost imperceptibly merge with the moral one. Here attention should be given, first of all, to veracity, sincerity, with capacity for self-deception next. Deliberate pragmatic treatment of the truth, willful lapses of memory—these are on the borderland of mind and morals. Character would have to be determined by fairness toward opponents and urbanity under attack. This would be a valuable prophylactic in city as well as in National nominations.

As for the physical test, I suggest it chiefly on account of the handicapping that might be introduced. Endurance and lung capacity are mighty allies of the mental and moral equipment, right or wrong. The demagogue usually can out-shout and out-travel the serious statesman. Would it not be well, therefore, for the Nation's good to handicap the human bellows in his expenditure of wind, so that the serious thinker may be put on an equality with him in this regard?

As for the Board of Examiners—there's the rub. Men capable of serving on it we have in plenty, but what measures can be taken to enforce adherence to its pronouncements and rulings upon disqualified candidates?

THE EXTRAVAGANT POOR.

Lazarus, Not Dives, Behaves Badly with His Spare Coin.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read the remarks of "Junius" on the value to society of large expenditures for pleasures by the "poor rich," and I also read a letter to-day on the subject. Now, replying to both, I think the human race, rich, poor, middling, are all incurable in their present habits on the money question. If the rich spend a small fortune on a single fancy dress ball they can at least afford it, and it is lawful to do what one will with his own—though at times inexpedient, as all will admit.

But it is Lazarus, not Dives, who behaves badly with his spare coin. The poorer the neighborhood, the more likely are we to find four saloons at a street intersection, five-cent moving picture shows at close intervals, stores for the sale of poisonous candies and utterly worthless gimcracks for the children's pennies; we find shopkeepers and milkmen delivering milk and eatables to tenants so poor that one would never suppose they could want such accommodation. There is no lack of catch-penny—yes, and catch-nickel and catch-dime—devices in the poorest slums, and the envy aroused by a real grand splurge at Newport is no greater and no more real and harmful than the results of the identical relative extravagance among the poor. If Dives could splurge only by building model tenements, then Lazarus should be deprived of his saloons and five-cent theatres; and when both grow sensible and spend only for necessities, the world, already nearly unbearable, would become so in reality. Vive la bagatelle.

St. John's Cathedral Attendance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Several newspapers have recently circulated a statement as to church attendance, which, so far, at least, as our cathedral is concerned, is so misleading and inaccurate as to require correction, and we know no better medium than your paper for this purpose. In what follows we speak of what we know.

At the 11 A. M. service at the cathedral on Sunday, Sept. 1, preceding Labor Day, although there was a thunderstorm, the attendance was more than 1,200. All through the Summer, even on the hottest days, the average attendance in fair weather was about the same, and, even in bad weather, the attendance did not fall below 800 on the hottest days.

Three-Day Holidays.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We are somewhat interested in the letters from correspondents who believe that all holidays should occur on Monday.

It is quite evident that all these people are engaged in Wall Street or some business which is not at all essential to the public. Personally, I find that it is almost impossible for me to have a Monday holiday, and if all holidays should occur on Monday, it would be pretty tough luck. Before advocating any such plan due consideration should be given to the thousands engaged in business in which a three-day holiday is absolutely impossible. I do not, however, think there is any immediate danger of such a plan being adopted.

Boston's Progressiveness.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We have had the system of numbered street cars here in Boston for many seasons, and the chances are that an observant foreigner saw it here and introduced it into Europe.

Another thing which may be found here at all times is a cool subway—half a dozen of them, in fact. Boston was years ahead of New York in subway construction. And it digs them without tearing up the streets or impeding traffic.

I have lived in the hope of some day beguiling a New York friend to stay over night. I could show him things in this genuinely progressive city which would make him a local Marco Polo when he got home.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Owing doubtless to a typographical error in your columns of this morning the title of Mrs. Fiske's new play by Edward Sheldon is given as "The Right Road," instead of "The High Road." As Miss Kate Jordan's one-act play of the former title has been successfully played in vaudeville in the West for the past two years, and is soon to be seen in the East, will you, in justice to her, set the matter right?

A TYPE OF DRESS THAT IS AMERICAN

Not So Easily Achievable, While Paris Has Ideas, Mr. Haire Believes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In promising to provide for American women a type of dress distinctively American, Mr. Bok has touched the heart of a very big subject, and not much definite progress toward the ultimate divorce of the creation of American fashions from French influences can be looked for until those who are in back of the movement on this side can surround themselves with an organization sufficiently strong to cope with the foreign competition.

Mr. Bok will make some headway in establishing his styles in the smaller towns, where, as Mr. McCreedy points out in his letter to THE TIMES, "the little pink-cheeked country lass looks pretty in the simple little frocks that Mr. Bok has designed and she has made," but it is a long step from these little towns to the larger cities of the country, and unless the American creations of Mr. Bok's designers receive from the social leaders in these larger centres some unmistakable mark of approval, it is not to be expected that they will become widely the vogue.

Paris Develops Suggestions.

Styles can only originate with real artists, and certainly there is no centre in the world which is the home of so many and so successful artistic makers of dress as is Paris. That now and then its styles become extravagant and even impossible is not to be wondered at. To design fashions is perhaps the most difficult of all creative work. Already, through the paintings and statuary of the different periods, the styles of all past ages have been studied, and all the classical and mediaeval draperies, as well as the peasant dress of all countries, have in turn contributed toward the formation of styles and dress for women. Naturally now little remains but to go over the same ground again and again, relying upon an original idea, an exaggeration, a modification or some new thought to impart an element of newness, novelty, or originality to the new season's styles.

Furthermore, it is not the part of the Paris designers as much to furnish styles as to create and develop fashion ideas and suggestions. The American manufacturers do not by any means slavishly copy Paris fashions and designs, as Mr. Bok intimates, but rather look to Paris for such suggestions which they themselves may modify and amplify to meet the needs of the American trade.

The foreign buyers from American and Canadian houses, when they visit Paris, do not go there for the purpose of placing orders for stock, but more particularly to buy up one or two models that may suggest some new trend of thought which finally finds fruition, not in the duplication of these styles, but in the production of a line of models, colored possibly by one, two, or more of the distinctive features of the original French styles, but presenting on the whole an appearance of originality and enterprise entirely creditable to the American manufacturer.

American Styles are Improving.

This talk regarding the advisability of cutting entirely loose from Paris as a source of inspiration is generally heard on this side to a greater or less degree at the beginning of each season. Not much stock is placed in it, however, by the representative American costume, dress, and waist manufacturers, and the prevailing opinion is that the sooner these visionaries get away from the idea that they can do without Paris the quicker will they witness the progress and better development of their own work.

In some fields, however, marked progress has been made toward the development of typical American fashions. In the women's neckwear field this is particularly true, as Mr. Paul J. Kempf of Kempf Frères, one of Paris's most successful blouse and neckwear firms, admitted to me some time ago, while on a visit to America. Mr. Kempf coincided with the stand which we had already taken, that many of the most successful styles in women's neckwear have their origin in America. It is now generally conceded that fashions in women's neckwear are largely governed by the character of the American demand, and of late seasons the makers in Paris have invariably waited for some word from this side before going ahead with their new styles, acknowledging that their greatest inspiration is received from our own manufacturers and buyers.

What the American neckwear manufacturers have been able to do toward the establishment of a more or less independent standard of their own will no doubt be achieved in time by the manufacturers in other fields. But that there is any immediate danger that America or any other centre will supersede or even in a slight degree weaken permanently the sway which Paris holds in the realm of the women's fashions is not likely. As you pointed out editorially, "it was a good idea to make deliberately an attempt to induce American women to adopt fashions in dress of their very own, fashions not too fluctuating or extreme, and never immodest or bizarre," but there will be thousands of American women who will always be ready to adapt to their own uses Paris ideas that please them, and herein lies the crux of the situation—not the duplication, but the intelligent modification and adaptation to the needs of American demands of fashion ideas and suggestions, Parisian or otherwise, suitable for the American trade.

THE CITY OF REFUGE.

When your funds are quite depleted
And you feel the need of cash,
If you set about to get it
In a manner somewhat rash,
Do not plan a quick departure
For the smiling shores of France.
If you stray as far as Flatbush
You are taking quite a chance.
Buy a ticket for the Subway,
Join the busy, sweeping throng,
And continue unmolested
To enjoy your freedom long.

When you argue with your neighbor
And you do not like his creed,
If you flash a bit of cold steel
And he's fool enough to bleed,
Do not cross the deep blue ocean,
For a refuge in the East,
In the guise of Hindu fakir,
Or of pious Shinto priest;
To escape all things unpleasant
Take a walk around the block,
And the papers all will tell you
How your neighbor stood the shock.

When you meet a former crony
Whom you want to pay a score,
If you're quicker on the trigger
And you leave him rather sore,
Do not shake our pleasant city
For a rustic place of rest:
You will find the hospitality
Of Gotham quite the best.
Go and eat a hearty dinner,
Take your girl to see a play;
You will live in freedom longer
If you linger near Broadway.

Time—relentless time—is the pursuing villain in "Milestones" the exquisitely charming and poignantly appealing play by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblauch about which we have been hearing so much, and which was first seen in this country at the Liberty Theatre last night.

Other times, other customs might be its motto, and yet, for all that, all times are alike in this—that age brings disillusionment, that the heart of youth beats quicker than the heart of age, that it is the young men who do the dreaming and out of their dreams is progress. Combat the statement by citing the names of men of advanced years who have accomplished, are accomplishing great things every day—the answer is merely that these men have stayed young in spite of their years; their spirits are quicker than pursuing time. It is only such who can look through the vista of approaching age, and stand unafraid.

The pathos of "Milestones" comes from the fact that most of its people really do grow old; its resident fragrant sweetness from the fact that one, the gentle Gertrude, cheated of the joy of love in youth, does not forget. For the others age brings forgetfulness of earlier hope and faith, of the hearts that pined, and of the griefs that came through just the sort of obstacles which they as elders now put in the path of youth.

In 1860 John Rhead, junior partner in the long-established firm of iron founders, Sibley, Rhead & Sibley, is the brains of the concern. His uncle and his cousin, Sam Sibley, are wedded to the old traditions, and scorn his new-fashioned views. Iron is just coming in for shipping purposes, and John is all for joining hands with a firm of shipbuilders, seeing a fortune ahead of him. He is for iron; his partners are for wood. Both sides are equally determined, and finally John severs his partnership and proceeds on his own road. He is engaged to his cousin, Rose. Her angered father refuses his consent when the business rupture occurs. Nevertheless, she marries the man of her choice, and, does not have cause to regret it. Gertrude, his strong, clear-headed, devoted sister, is so much incensed at the action of the Sibleys that she breaks off her engagement with Sam. She has cause to regret it all her life.

By 1885 John Rhead's predictions have come true. The good old oak his partners swore by is nowhere; iron is everywhere. He has won all along the line. The uncle is dead, and his cousin, Sam Sibley, has been bought out for £20,000. The firm is now just John Rhead, the prescient, himself. Quite wealthy, he can afford £10,000 in aid of the party funds, and he is to have a baronetcy. Rose and he have no son, but they intend to marry their pretty Emily to middle-aged Lord Monkhurst, whom she has always regarded as an uncle. Emily has other views. In her father's employ is a young man named Arthur Preece, whose abilities have caused him to rise high and quickly in the firm; and when he comes to his master's house and talks with splendid enthusiasm of an invention of his own which will revolutionize the carrying trade, she is carried away by his virility and goaheadness and falls into his arms, much as her mother had done with her father, and for the same reasons, twenty-five years before.

"Steel replace iron!" exclaims John Rhead. "Nonsense—nothing but a fad!" The pioneer of 1860 is the "old fogey" of 1885. He absolutely refuses to let his daughter marry the presumptuous inventor. She must marry Lord Monkhurst; and marry him she does.

And now we come to 1912. Sir John Rhead is a very old man. The business is too much for him, and he is about to retire and turn it into a limited company. For some time past he has been glad to have the advice of Arthur Preece, now a leader of the Labor Party in the Commons, for there have been troubles with the men. His daughter, Emily, is now a widow of forty-five or so. Her son, the new Lord Monkhurst, is the average, rather tired young man of fashion, with his racing stud and all the rest of it. There's not much wrong with him, as his mother explains, "except that he's selfish and a fool." Then there is the daughter, the Hon. Muriel. Of course every one wants her to marry into their own set. Not at all. She, like her mother and grandmother, is fond of energy and pluck, and she is firmly resolved to marry her cousin Richard, son of slow-going old Sam Sibley and his vulgar wife, who had been his typewriter. This young man is an engineer, and the young pair intend to go to Canada with the £30,000 old John Rhead has promised Richard to start him in business there. This time the widowed mother, revealing all the tyranny of tears, makes the daughter abandon her projects, or is about to do so, when Arthur Preece, who has remained a bachelor, most opportunely comes on the scene, and, repeating the kiss he had given so long ago, cuts two knots with one stroke by freeing mother and daughter at the same time. Lady Monkhurst will be his wife, and Muriel and Richard will go a-farming as they had planned.

From act to act passions and prejudices remain the same. Nothing varies much but the dresses and the furniture, the outside things. Crinoline dress and the damask upholstery of 1860 give way to the bustle gown and rep chairs of 1885. In the second act we hear much of the prejudice against Ouida's novels for the young woman of the period. William Morris is lecturing in a stable to youths whose ideas are advanced. In 1912 the furniture is new and smart, and electric light has replaced gas for illuminating purposes. Experience has not taught age its lesson, and the confidence of youth once more clashes with the conviction of middle age and more. It is only at the last that age really wins its victory in the tender solicitude of youth. Then John Rhead, too tired to fight longer, conscious finally of the futility of pronouncing his feeble "I forbid" against the powerful "I will" of youth, sinks in his chair by the fireside to take a little rest with his partner of fifty years.

"Forgive me, John," whispers the little wife into John Rhead's ear, "for having dared to differ with my husband."

"You'll be the death of me if you do it again," he answers.

And then from the other room comes the sweet sound of an old song, the same that Gertrude has sung in the first act. And the granddaughter, no longer rebellious, happy in her new found love possession, steals in to put a rose into her old grandfather's hand and wish him and the grandmother happiness on their golden wedding night.

Not often does a scene on the stage have the moving power of this. Not often is the tribute of tears more generous or more sincere. And, as might have been expected, the enthusiasm was enormous.

The performance of the play by a company engaged and rehearsed in London was on the whole highly admirable and pleasing. Those of us who know the London stage can readily conceive that in the hands of one or two of the artists who distinguished the original London cast something more was brought to some of the scenes. But the acting on the whole is good enough to reflect the quality of the play, which, in itself, is so sweet and wholesome that it is sure to be an enduring success with the general public.

Mr. Faber's virtuosity has not been so well disclosed in his previous rôles in this city. We have known him only as a handsome, virile, and very able leading man. Here he provides both variety and truth in characterization. His playing of John Rhead is, in fact, a notable accomplishment.

Miss Auriol Lee and Miss Gillian Scaife present very charmingly the contrasting phases of youth and age in "Gertrude" and "Rose." Mr. Warburton's "Samuel Sibley" is capital, and Mr. Onslow's "Ned Pym," though a little thick in speech, is well characterized throughout.

One of the very best performances in the piece is given by Frederick Lloyd as Arthur Preece, and the English "ne'er-do-well" is splendidly done by Douglas Imbert. Miss Gladys Mason as Emily is better in youth than age, and Miss Margaret Macdona and Mr. Frank Arundel are properly spirited as the modern lovers. Miss Edith Barwell's "Nancy" is an especially clever figure.

Inventor of Pink lemonade Dead.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Henry E. Allott, known all through the Middle West as 'Bunk' Allen, member of the old Chicago gambling syndicate, saloonkeeper, theatrical promoter, circus man, and inventor of pink lemonade, died here today. At 15 he ran away with a circus and obtained the lemonade concession. One day while mixing a tub full of the orthodox yellow kind he dropped some red cinnamon candies in by mistake. The resulting rose-tinted mixture sold so surprisingly well that he continued to dispense his chance discovery.

BIG BERLIN PUBLISHER TO STUDY OUR PAPERS

Dr. Franz Ullstein, Who Owns Five Newspapers, Marvels at American Press Methods.

IS AGAINST SENSATIONALISM

German Press Freer Than in Bismarck's Day—Hopes to Get American News Direct.

Dr. Franz Ullstein, the largest newspaper owner in Germany and publisher of the Ullstein-Bücher, arrived yesterday on the Cincinnati of the Hamburg-American line to attend the Congress of Hygiene in Washington, and also to make an extensive study of American newspapers and newspaper methods. At the Plaza last night Dr. Ullstein commented freely on newspaper conditions here and abroad.

There are five newspapers in the Ullstein syndicate, all of which are published in Berlin. The largest is the Berliner Morgenpost, which has a daily circulation or more than 400,000 copies. The others include a noon edition called the Berliner Zeitung am Mittag, an evening paper, a daily illustrated journal, and a weekly illustrated paper.

Dr. Franz Ullstein.

Of all his newspapers Dr. Ullstein admitted yesterday that the Berliner Zeitung am Mittag was the most talked about paper in Germany. Its popularity, he indicated, was due largely to the fact that it was started as an innovation, being patterned more than any other paper in Germany after the American style of newspapers.

It was this newspaper which conducted the Paris-New York globe-girdling automobile race in 1900, in conjunction with the Paris Matin and THE NEW YORK TIMES. It came into international prominence again in March, 1911, when it was forced to withdraw its twenty-five-thousand-dollar prize offer for the winner of the German section of the projected Paris-Berlin-Brussels-London aeroplane race because of the anti-German feeling stirred up by French newspapers, which asserted that the twenty-five-thousand-dollar prize was really a part of the "secret fund" of the German War Department, and was offered as an inducement to French aviators, in the hope that their methods might be disclosed to the imperial army. The Zeitung am Mittag, at the instance of Dr. Ullstein, then devoted the prize money to a strictly German aeroplane race.

"German editors are beginning to realize," said Dr. Ullstein, "that a newspaper's popularity and influence are established by the reading public, and not by the editor's or publisher's policy.

"The greatest strength and popularity of the American newspapers, I should say, lies in the recognition of this fact. In Germany we are just waking up to its importance. The change which we must effect consists in separating altogether the editorial and the news columns of our newspapers. No matter what our political policies may be, we must not allow our news stories to be influenced by those policies. It is well and good, and necessary, too, to take sides in a political controversy, but there is no reason in the world why the news of any political event should not appear exactly the same in all newspapers. Already a great change is noticeable in Germany, but there is still room for improvement.

"We cannot hope to build up such large newspapers as you support here in New York as long as we do not derive commensurate profits from our investments. Your apparatus for geting international and local news and printing it is astounding, and the prices you pay exceed our limits. I hope the time is not far distant when we can get all our American news directly from New York instead of having it relayed through London. I intend to begin negotiations with the telegraph companies for such an arrangement.

"To be sure we have not the freedom of the press which you enjoy, but compared with the days of Bismarck there is a decided change for the better.

"You ask me what I regard the greatest weakness of the American press. Well, its greatest weakness lies in its tendency to delve too deeply into personal affairs. You call it sensationalism, I believe. I am glad to know, however, that this sensationalism is not universal even in America. In Germany it is rare. Once in a while it crops out, but it is quickly subdued by the conservative newspaper syndicates, backed, of course, by public opinion."

Dr. Ullstein said that he brought with him the compliments of many German editors on the general tone and construction of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

"I read THE TIMES regularly," he said, "and I marvel particularly at the Sunday TIMES and its many features. The pictorial supplement has particularly interested me, and I don't understand how it can be furnished for so little money. In Germany we could not produce such quality for 5 cents."

The system of distribution of the morning papers, Dr. Ullstein explained, was entirely different in Berlin. On the Morgenpost, he said, he employed 3,000 women, who carried the papers under their arms and delivered them directly to the subscribers' homes. The noon editions were sold on newsstands, and the afternoon editions were circulated solely by mail. The weekly editions were sold by book sellers and were rated with magazines.

Even if American newspaper methods are superior to the German, there is at least one department in the German publishing business that Dr. Ullstein frankly said he considered superior to the American. That was the book publishing department, in which he as an editor had a great amount of experience.

"Most of the novels I publish," he said, "sell at 25 cents a volume. A great many old stories, of course, are included, but this price is within the reach of hundreds of thousands, and thus the old tales are put in the hands of all. Naturally this has an effect on the general education of Germany's population.

"Here in America you sell the new novels, the best sellers, as you say, for $1.50 a volume. In Germany I can sell them for 75 cents. When I began the publishing of novels at a cheaper rate I had to contend for some time with the novelists, who thought that their royalties would suffer a slump. Quite the opposite has resulted, however. We sell enough at 75 cents to make up the difference in cost, and we reap larger profits. Now the novelists are more than pleased."

Dr. Ullstein will leave to-day for an extended tour of the Eastern cities. On Oct. 10 he hopes to return to this city to begin a study of New York newspaper methods.

MRS. HAZARD ASSAILS PROGRESSIVE PARTY

To Give Roosevelt a Third Term, She Says, We Are Asked to Subscribe to Revolution.

A DICTATOR FOR BOSSES

She Asks if Women Are Not Being "Manipulated by the Most Experienced Politician of the Age."

Fear of the new Progressive Party with Roosevelt at the head if it should come into power has led a well-known social worker of New York to enter into a private political educational campaign on her own account, and within a few days she will send out to her friends and social workers 2,000 copies of a pamphlet now being printed which will give a synopsis of her views.

This is Mrs. Barclay Hazard, Vice President of the Woman's Municipal League, founded by the late Mrs. Josephine Shaw Lowell; member of the Executive Committee of Fourteen and in one line of effort closely associated with the work of the Florence Crittenton Mission.

"I have been grieved," says Mrs. Hazard, commenting on her pamphlet, "that such women as Jane Addams, Lillian Wald, Mary Dreier, and Frances Keller should have been led by their self-devotion to take up with this new party. No great work can be accomplished without enthusiasm, but emotionalism is not enthusiasm; it leads to hysteria, which is always destructive. Because of my ancestors who have been in this country since the middle of the seventeenth century and fought and bled and died in building up the Government I cannot see an effort made to disrupt it without taking some step to prevent it. I differ in many of my opinions from other social workers, but they know that I am a practical worker. When they want help they come to me, and I think they will consider the statement that I am making."

This is the statement, 2,000 copies of which Mrs. Hazard will herself send out personally:

Is it not necessary that those of us who are working to help our less fortunate brothers and sisters to help themselves should carefully consider whether in giving adherence to the programme of the Progressive Party we are really forwarding our cause or are being cleverly manipulated by one of the most experienced politicians of the age? To help give Theodore Roosevelt a third term as President we are asked to subscribe to a revolution. The intent, undoubtedly, is that the revolution shall be bloodless—most revolutions start in this way. Bloodless it may be, fatal it must be to all our fundamental principles of government. Our ancestors knew history, and wiser than we learned its lesson, that direct rule by a people has always led to the overthrow of free government. They were true progressives, founding their progress on the experience of the ages. To save our hard won liberty they safeguarded it by the carefully thought out plan of representation under which we have prospered for one hundred and twenty-three years. Now we are asked to overthrow our whole system in exchange for what?

I. THE OVERTHROW OF BOSSES.—This seems to mean the substitution of one dictator for many directors.

II. THE RECALL OF JUDGES.—One of our greatest grievances in 1776 was the Crown judiciary and one of our most anxiously worked out reforms was the independence of the judiciary. It is probable that much of the present criticism of that branch of our Government arises from the fact that we were ill-advised enough to make elective offices of some of our judgeships. It is now proposed to correct this mistake by making a Judge dependent on the popular whim of the moment, not only for his election to, but for his tenure in office.

III. THE RECALL OF DECISIONS is even a longer step toward despotism. Anarchy is against the law of Nature, and when there is no fixed law, no final court of appeal and anarchy supervenes, it, in its turn, must give way to "the man on horseback," and who knows this better or counts on it more confidently than Theodore Roosevelt.

IV. OLD AGE PENSIONS AND COMPULSORY INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE.—These promises appeal strongly to the sympathetic worker, but those of us who have lived through a period of State-given aid are very slow in accepting them as panaceas. We have seen waste and graft, favoritism and neglect, and scores of public officials fattening on the misfortunes of the poor. When we secured the repeal of the law giving "outdoor poor relief," we rejoiced at the wiping out of a scandal. How can we wish for legislation which will open an even wider door? But, we are told, in this we are only copying England. Is it smooth sailing there? They are finding protest and trouble on every hand. Let them work it out first. England has a monarchy established for nine hundred years. She can take liberties with her Government which we cannot afford. We are only an experiment as a Government, a great experiment, we hope and pray a successful one, but our term as an independent Nation is not yet as long as was our experience as a colony, and is it not wisdom to try out our great experiment fairly on our original lines before we try to take short cuts to what has always proved a fool's paradise?

V. The Progressive Party promises a reduction in the high cost of living. So did Jack Cade. So have all agitators since history began. They all promise and the end is always the same, the discontent they stir up, the uncertainty they beget frightens capital, closes the workshops, reduces demand, and the poor are the first to suffer. As long as more people crowd to the cities and industrial centres than there are producers to provide them with food, so long the price of food will continue to rise. How much of this gravitation of population is the fault of our system of education is a question we may well ponder.

To do the best work for humanity, enthusiasm is absolutely essential. True enthusiasm is constructive and is the sustaining force in the long, persistent struggle toward better things. Let us not mistake emotionalism for enthusiasm. Pathologically emotionalism is hysteria and is essentially destructive. True human progress can never be aided by waving banners, singing camp meeting hymns, or returning to the White House the greatest opportunist of the age.

In sending out her appeal, Mrs. Hazard says she is not working for any party. Though she has been by education and environment a Republican, she does not know on which side she would cast her vote if called upon to do so, except that it would be against the Progressive Party.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Ready Reference Telephone Registers Denied Entry as Books.

The New York Telephone Company failed to obtain a reduction in the duty levied on indexed ready reference registers of subscribers at a hearing before the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday. The registers had been assessed at 35 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraph 420, Tariff act of 1909, as manufactures in chief value of paper, while the company sought to bring them in as books under Paragraph 416. Thomas Meadows & Co. were the brokers in the case.

Judge Fischer in his decision found that the registers, made of paper and pasteboard, hinged and mounted to fold together in a steplike arrangement of flaps, more closely met the terms block, pad, or tablet, than book, and therefore sustained the Collector.

GOOD DRESS GOODS BUYING.

But Mills Are Oversold and Fall Deliveries Are Slow.

The present feature of the dress goods situation in this market appears to be the inability of jobbers to secure satisfactory delivery of Fall merchandise already on order. Deliveries have been particularly bad of late, from all accounts, and immediate shipment of certain fabrics of this class are practically impossible to get. This is largely attributed to the oversold condition of many of the mills and the failure to obtain satisfactory shipments by boat or rail.

There is some good buying being done in the jobbing end of the market by the nearby trade, and the predominance of the demand received by one of the largest operators in the market is for whipcords. Broadcloth in black and navy blue is getting considerably more attention now than earlier in the season. The road men of the jobbers are now preparing for their Spring trips, and there is a feeling prevalent that advance business for the coming season will be the best in a long time, despite uncertain tariff conditions.

Operators in the primary market have been receiving considerable call for rush shipments from wholesalers in various parts of the country. One well-known selling agent said yesterday that never in his long experience had there been so many telegraph orders received by his house, nor had there ever been so many requests for delivery by express. The advance business done in Spring lines in this end of the market has been the best in years, but, pending the results obtained by jobbing salesmen on their trips, it is out of the question to anticipate the amount of duplicate business to be done. So far there has been an excellent call from the jobbing trade for the majority of staple lines, with a generally good demand for wide wales, diagonals, vigoreaux, and other semi-staple fabrics.

SPRING UNDERWEAR SELLING.

Fair Business Coming In Already from Men on the Road.

Despite the short time representatives of the various manufacturers of women's underwear have been on the road with Spring lines, a fair volume of business has been turned in. It is still too early, however, to make an accurate forecast of the probable needs of retailers of these lines and estimate the amount of business to be done in them.

There was a belief in this market yesterday that the prevailing mode in skirts would be productive of the largest business in combinations ever done. Silk petticoats are in good demand, and the acceptance of the talked-of fuller skirt by American women later in the season is expected to be a factor in restoring this end of the trade to a generally firmer basis.

Fall business has been generally good this year, and from all accounts has seemed particularly large in comparison with that done a year ago.

EMBROIDERY ORDERS LARGE.

Narrow Shadow Effects Most in Demand in the Lighter Laces.

Advance business for Spring turned in during the week by embroidery salesmen now out in their respective territories has been of generally good proportions. In one quarter of the market, an excellent call was reported for 36 inch all-overs and the narrower ranges of flouncings.

Narrow shadow effects appear to have the predominance in the call for lighter laces that has become so pronounced of late. The demand for clunys is beginning to drop off a little after a prolonged period of activity. The narrower ranges of ratine laces are expected to be good in view of the reports of the heavy sale of eponge for Spring. Buyers were said yesterday to be somewhat uncertain regarding the lines that would meet the heaviest demand in the coming season, and were, consequently inclined to hold off the bulk of their purchases until the field narrows down a little.

Neckwear continues to move freely, with the Robespierre collar getting the lion's share of the business. Dutch collars embodying shadow effects are also good. Single and double point and deep sailor effects in real Irish are the leaders in this line. As predicted some months ago, the demand seems to be well divided between the two extremes in sizes.

In the handkerchief field lace-edged Armenian effects appear to have the greatest call. One cornered embroidered effects are also good, but the demand for embroidered side effects has shown an unmistakeable slowing up of late. Of the better grades of this merchandise, those with venise lace edgings are experiencing the best sale.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

The new cutaway collar introduced this season bids fair to make business for the tie silk manufacturers. It leaves good space for the tie to show and already there has been a noticeable picking up in the demand of retailers in New York and surrounding territory for cut silk cravats.

Chantilly laces are looked upon with considerable favor in certain quarters of this market. From all accounts, they will be found well up among the best sellers when the coming season opens in earnest.

A heavier demand than usual for novelty soft hats is being experienced by the local trade this year. The continuance of warm weather in recent years between the straw and stiff hat seasons is held largely accountable for the increase.

In anticipation of an excellent business in silk shirts during the coming Spring and Summer manufacturers of these shirtings are showing some handsome lines to the shirtmakers. From present indications this end of the silk trade will have a generally prosperous season.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

The year 1911 fully realized expectations regarding intensified building activity in Russia. In nearly all districts a large number of new buildings were erected and old ones enlarged to meet the increased requirements of municipalities and for industrial and transport concerns. A lack of labor and material was felt, especially cement and bricks, which were continually rising in price. The adoption of more fireproof buildings in villages greatly contributed to this.

Several things combined to affect trade adversely in Sicily in 1911, especially in the Palermo district. In spite of every precaution by the Italian authorities a new outbreak of cholera in the Spring of 1911 could not be averted. Although the most energetic measures were adopted, the disease was prevalent in Palermo and neighborhood during the greater part of the year, causing a much larger loss of life than in 1910. These conditions, combined with the appearance of smallpox during the latter part of the year and with the war with Turkey, could not fail to have a more or less serious effect on certain branches of trade.

EXPORTS UP LAST WEEK.

Shipments from Port Valued at $16,643,824—Totals to England Led.

Exports, exclusive of specie, forwarded from this port in the week ended Sept. 14 were, according to figures issued yesterday by the New York Custom House, valued at $16,643,824, against $15,667,790 in the previous week, and $16,823,768 in the corresponding week in 1911. The list was headed by shipments to England, valued at $2,562,871. Shipments to the British possessions, valued at $2,137,073, followed.

Wheat exports for the week aggregated 923,480 bushels, while beef shipments amounted to 530 barrels and 553 tierces. Other exports of important commodities follow:

Corn, 4,768 bushels; oats, 421,362 bushels; flour, 16,200 barrels, 73,459 sacks; cornmeal, 5,646 barrels; feed, 62,200 pounds; bran, 22,800 pounds; alcohol, 21,150 gallons; whisky, 4,161 gallons; oilmeal, 160,000 pounds; oil cake, 9,024,000 pounds; pork, 1,629 barrels; bacon, 2,779,350 pounds; ham, 23,000 pounds; lard, 4,053,750; butter, 9,100 pounds; cheese, 27,120 pounds; cottonseed oil, 1,439,800 pounds; lubricating oils, 2,819,218 gallons; turpentine, 23,280 gallons; refined petroleum, 9,219,346 gallons; naphtha, 287,716 gallons; gasoline, 749,860 gallons and residuum, 2,281,281 gallons.

WOMEN'S WEAR TRADE QUIET.

Few Buyers and Manufacturers Booking Little New Business.

This has been a rather quiet week for manufacturers of women's wear so far as the booking of new business is concerned. Few buyers are now in this market, and the energies of the trade in general has been spent almost entirely in the last few days in the filling of orders already on the books.

The warm weather has so far retarded the placing of duplicate business to no little extent, but despite the continued heat reports from the cloak and suit end of the trade are indicative of a normal repeat business for this time of the year. A feature of this business is the call received from the far West for the better grades of merchandise, a feature particularly pleasing to operators in this market because of the competition on the cheaper grades from the trade in that section of the country. Velvet suits are beginning to open up well, from all accounts, and there has been quite a call for broadcloth suits in the latest orders received. Chiffon velvets in the taupe shades have shared this increased call, but the inability of manufacturers to obtain suitable shipments of these fabrics from the other side is retarding the sale of this number somewhat. A similar inability to get satisfactory deliveries of domestic dress fabrics is cutting a figure of no little importance at the moment.

HOW BRITAIN GROWS RUBBER.

Industry of the Straits Settlements to be Shown Here.

How rubber is grown in the Straits Settlements under British rule without a stain of blood in its gathering will be shown in a great exhibit at the Rubber Exposition which opens at the Grand Central Palace next Monday. The British Empire is behind the exhibit, which is in charge of the Imperial Commissioner Leonard Wray, who represents the government of the British Colony of the Straits Settlements and the four Protected Native Malay States.

Commissioner Wray is now engaged at the Grand Central Palace in arranging the exhibit, showing the growth, gathering and treatment of rubber in the hot, misty plantations north of Singapore. Every detail of the rubber trade will be shown. The beautiful hevea braziliensis, which produces Para rubber, will shade the exhibit. Malays rubber gatherers in their picturesque native costume will give color and will live during the exposition in native huts brought from their settlements.

HIGH PREMIUMS FOR COAL.

Warm Weather Has Not Relieved Pressure on Producers.

Reviewing conditions in the New York market, the current issue of The Coal Trade Journal will say to-day:

"While the warm weather that has prevailed since the first of the month has not eased the pressure on the anthracite producing interests, it has held off for the time being the flood of orders with which retail offices will be swamped at the first real touch of Autumnal chilliness. This is fortunate for the retail trade, for even under the most favorable conditions the time in which to prepare for the inevitable fall rush is all too short. As it is, premiums on individual coal have advanced further during the past week and sales of the two larger domestic sizes are reported at a full dollar a ton above cicular.

"The upward progress of the soft coal trade continues without interruption. There is, possibly, less free coal in the market than has been the case for a number of years past, leaving out of consideration the abnormal period preceding the April strike. That the price schedule does not indicate a runaway market such as occurred last Spring is due to the fact that demand in the open market is relatively light. Consumers are well contracted up and are bending their energies to getting forward tonnage under contract rather than bidding up prices on such free coal as is available."

SAYS CROP REPORTS MISLEAD

Government Alleged to Have Swollen Barley Yield by 60,000,000 Bushels.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 17.—Charges that the reports of the Department of Agriculture on the season's crops were fictitious and misleading were made to-day by Dr. C. Prinz of Wisconsin, in addressing the National Convention of Master Brewers. He singled out barley as having been greatly overestimated.

"The barley crop is poor, and will not exceed 100,000,000 bushels," Dr. Prinz said. "Yet the Government report says it will exceed 160,000,000 bushels. There never was and probably never will be so large a yield."

NEW LINE TO THE GULF.

First Ship Leaves Baltimore for Galveston in a Few Days.

Announcement was made yesterday that the first steamship of the recently organized Gluf Steamship Company would leave Baltimore about Sept. 20 for Galveston. L. J. Spence, Director of the Southern Pacific Company, said yesterday that the Gulf Steamship Company had been organized to meet future demands for service between North Atlantic and Gulf ports which could not be met by the ships of the Southern Pacific Company.

"The Gulf Steamship Company," he said, "will be in a position to provide services between any North Atlantic port, and Galveston, Port Arthur, and New Orleans, or any other Gulf port wherever the volume of business may be sufficient to warrant either occasional or regular sailings.

Bid for Hotel Metropole.

Charles Shongood, United States auctioneer, had an auction sale yesterday at the Hotel Metropole, 147 West Forty-third Street of the right, title and interest of Irving L. Ernst, receiver in bankruptcy, of the estate of George F. Considine, former proprietor of the hotel, in the furniture, furnishings, chattels, wines, provisions, liquor tax certificate, and the leasehold. The sale was under the direction of Yankauer & Davidson, attorneys for the receiver, who said that the sale was subject to mortgages of about $130,000. The highest bidder was Louis Leavitt, $2,000 for the entire lots over the mortgages. Mr. Davidson said that the sale would be subject to the approval of the court.

TALKS ON JAPAN'S TRADE.

U. S. Consul General Says Mikado's Death Will Not Affect Business There.

Thomas Sammons Consul General from this country to Yokohama, Japan, delivered a lecture on the business relations between Japan and the United States to the members of the National Manufacturers' Association at the association's lecture room, at 30 Church Street, yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Sammons said that this country was Japan's best customer in the buying of curios and Japanese ware. At the present time, he said, the sales from this country to Japan were increasing rapidly, the last year showing an increase of sales amounting to about $14,000,000.

The United States, he said, sold principally heavy machinery, steel products, leather, and phosphate to Japan, although there was a large field for sales of other articles which may be developed within the next two years.

Mr. Sammons answered many questions, and in answer to one declared that the Mikado's death would not materially affect the business in Japan in the next year.

COMMODITY MARKETS.

Grains Steady—Cotton Loses Early Gains—Other Staples Decline.

Wheat was not active and about steady. Strength of the foreign markets was again offset by the heavy movement. Corn was steady. No frost damage of consequence was asserted. Oats showed no special tendency. Provisions were weak. Cottonseed oil was rather easier with the lower crude market. Cotton reacts following early firmness. Private conditions figures did not actuate much buying. Hedge pressure was heavy. Coffee weakened under freer Brazilian offerings.

WHEAT.

New factors varied in tenor with not enough importance attached to any of the numerous items to materially disturb the trade. As a result fluctuations were confined to narrow limits and there was a series of irregular price movements within a fraction of the previous night's finals. No essential change is noted in sentiment, which averages quite bearish, although selling seems to be less determined, undoubtedly due to the recent readjustment of quotations and a belief that the technical position is quite firm.

Cables again imparted steadiness to the domestic markets. There were additional reports from the United Kingdom, France, and Germany of the wheat crop in those countries, including considerable inferior quality stuff, suggesting that there will be a continuance of the demand for our high grade wheat. At the moment, however, export business is light, with no indication of freight rates developing an easier tendency.

The enormous wheat movement continues an offsetting feature, with receipts yesterday very heavy at the Northwest, and for two days at all interior points amount to more than 5,500,000 bushels, against 4,775,000 last week and 2,634,000 bushels last year. Shipments for this period were 2,911,000 bushels, against 2,182,000 bushels and 1,248,000 bushels respectively, showing that home distribution is still very active, but seemingly not sufficient now to prevent important accumulations.

Several of the principal cash centres claimed that the demand was less active yesterday and premiums at the Northwest were lowered slightly, but the pressure on the future market was well cared for. This conveyed the impression that speculative interests were covering, shorts having previously sold on the certainty of increasing stocks sooner or later.

Bradstreet's world's visible showed an increase of 7,659,000 bushels, and amounts to 114,000,000 bushels, against 144,000,000 bushels last year, when there was an increase of 4,000,000 bushels for the week. European stocks are about 6,000,000 bushels under last year and American stocks approximately 24,000,000 bushels less. Here, too, is active distribution suggested. There was a cable at hand yesterday from a prominent Antwerp authority estimating that the European requirements would be 20 per cent. above those of last season, but the effect of this was nullified by the fact that the United States, Canada, and Russia all have substantial surpluses to dispose of. Weather conditions are generally favorable in the American and Spring wheat belt, with good rains recently west of the river in the Winter wheat belt for Fall plowing operations.

Cash No. 2 red was quoted at $1.03, free on board, afloat, for export; No. 2 hard $1.00¾, No. 1 Northern 98½c, No. 1 Northern Manitoba $1.02.

OTHER GRAINS.

CORN.—On the whole the market gave a good account of itself. Selling early was due to the fact that but little damage occurred from the frost reported in sections of South Dakota, Nebraska, and Iowa, and while there were again forecasts of low temperatures in the Northwest, the apprehension was unimportant. The technical position of the market seems to be quite firm, and this partially accounted for the rally. Old corn reports are conflicting. Cash prices, however, were steadier. The market was helped by the report from Crop Expert Lyle that the outturn in Nebraska will amount to only 175,000,000 to 200,000,000, against the Government indication of 210,000,000 bushels. Last year there was a small crop of 156,000,000 bushels. There are very few complaints from the belt as a whole. Export corn, December to March, is quoted at 58¾c, free on board, afloat.

OATS.—Price changes were not very significant, and caused mainly by movement of other grain. There was some selling, based, however, on claims of a less urgent foreign and domestic cash inquiry. Interior receipts for two days total 2,621,000 bushels, about the same as last week, and compare with 1,194,000 bushels last year. Shipments of 1,500,000 bushels are also equal to those of last week, and compared with 894,000 bushels a year ago. Cash standard quoted at 38c; No. 2 white, 39c; No. 3 white, 37¼c; No. 4 white, 36c, nominal.

PROVISIONS.

There was a pronounced decline in values during the day. Some of the packing interests have been credited with selling. Hog receipts were moderate and prices lower. The mid-monthly statement of stocks showed moderate decreases in product. Late the market rallied on short covering.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Some of the pit observers characterized the market yesterday as being a refiner's affair. Leading interests were credited with buying while other large concerns sold freely, the pressure thought to be against purchases of cheaper crude. Values were lowered at the South, and Southeastern crude was quoted at 4.67 to 4.74. There was a fair demand in the aggregate for the distant months, which kept those deliveries quite steady, but near positions were weak, and September's premium was reduced to about 8 points, against 20 points recently. A slight improvement was noted in the consuming trade from both foreign and domestic centres. The betterment was believed to have been brought about by the decline in values. In recognition of this and the firm technical position, those on the selling side were admonished, but sentiment still seemed bearish in the main. The break in lard was a factor, although it is realized that with the substitute selling at around 8c per pound, some readjustment can be experienced without material effect on cottonseed oil quotations.

COTTON.

The prevalence of generally favorable weather conditions at this time, partially reflected in augmented hedge pressure from the South, tended to offset other factors during yesterday's session. Average advances of from 10 to 20 points during the fore part of the day were supplanted by small net losses. The faroff deliveries displayed relative firmness, and there were predictions that with the small indications of an urgent spot demand carrying charges would tend to widen.

Houses with Southern connections were the principal sellers on the advance. The impression was that farmers were inclined to release at least part of their crop, and several of the spot markets, particularly at Western centres, were easier. Incidently, the basis as compared with the local future market was said to be only a shade above parity. At New York spot cotton was unchanged, with middling uplands 11.75c. At points in Arkansas spots are about 11¼c. In South Carolina at about 11⅜@11½c; Alabama, 11¼@11⅜c; Tennessee about 11⅝c, and in Texas about 11⅜c. Of course, the grading has to be taken into consideration.

Instrumental in the early advances were the higher cables from Liverpool than had been expected. The foreign market was influenced by slightly improved spot inquiry, and also by the high freight rates. The Giles report was also a factor, this showing a condition of 70.7, against 76.7 a month ago. Later, an estimate from E. F. Hutton & Co. appeared, which made the conditon of the crop 69.5, against 74.6 two weeks ago. The National Ginners' report of recent date was 67.4. It is to be noted that as the Giles report as of Aug. 25 was 76.8, that the deterioration has occurred during these last two weeks. With the more favorable weather, however, these condition figures were not everywhere construed as impressively bullish.

The Government report last year on the plant to Sept. 25, was 71.1, indicating deterioration of about 2 points for the month. The October report for 1910 was 65.9, and in the small crop year of 1909, was 58.5. In 1908 there was a condition of 69.7. The ten-year average for Sept. 25 last year was 66.5. There was an estimate from the Inter-State Banking and Trust Company of New Orleans for a crop of 14,790,000 bales, exclusive of linters. Their estimate at about this time last year was 14,218,000 bales. Cordill wired that Texas has a good to large crop practically assurred.

The weekly weather report did not stimulate buying. Dry weather in parts of the Carolinas, also over much of the Central West and Western regions, were complained of. Since these observations, however, there have been frequent showers in parts of Oklahoma and in sections of the Central West. Yesterday's map showed beneficial showers in Oklahoma, some rain in Southern Texas, this not heavy, so, therefore, not detrimental. The forecast was for generally fair weather and seasonable temperatures.

COFFEE

Coffee opened tamely but soon developed activity under aggressive bear operations and closed at a net decline of 17 to 20 points on sales of 135,000 bags. First quotations were 1 to 8 points lower with disappointing cables from Europe and further weakness in the cost and freight market, which declined ⅛ to ¼c. Selling began in the March position and finally extended to the other months. The Brazilian weather report showed clear conditions in all five districts following recent rain. Rio was 50 reis lower and Santos declined 100 reis. Havre closed 1¼ to 2f. net lower, while Hamburg declined ¾ to 1 pfennig.

PLAN FOR McCRUM-HOWELL.

Stockholders and Creditors Alike Hard Hit on Reorganization.

Plans for the reorganization of the McCrum-Howell Company, which has been in the hands of receivers since last Spring, have been agreed upon by the two committees of creditors and will be submitted to stockholders probably to-day. Although the details have not been officially announced, it is said on authority that in order to participate in the reorganization present stockholders will have to pay what amounts to an assessment of $16 a share on the present preferred stock and $8 a share on the common.

The present capital of $7,000,000 will be reduced to $1,575,000 preferred and $3,150,000 common. The assets of the company are appraised at $3,000,000 as a going concern, but it has been estimated that they would not bring enough at a forced sale to pay the secured creditors 25 cents on the dollar. The creditors, like the stockholders, suffer heavily in the reorganization. They are to receive payment entirely in the securities of the new company in the proportion, it is understood, of 25 per cent. in new preferred stock and the balance in new common, their claims being satisfied at par. The money owed by the company to noteholders, including banks, is approximately $2,500,000. This would mean that about $625,000 of the new preferred stock, and $1,875,000 of the new common would be required to satisfy creditors, leaving $950,000 of the new preferred stock to be subscribed to by stockholders or sold. Present stockholders are to be permitted to subscribe for the new preferred stock at 96. The issue has been underwritten by a banking house, which will take all of the preferred not called for by stockholders. The present preferred stockholders have the right to buy at $96 one share of new preferred for each six shares of their holdings. This makes the payment eqivalent to $16 for each share of the present preferred stock. Common stockholders are to be allowed to subscribe at 96 for one new share of preferred stock for each twelve shares of the common stock now held by them. Both common and preferred stockholders bget a bonus of one share of new common stock for each share of preferred.

F. W. Moore, Treasurer of the International Heater Company, is reported to have been engaged for the Presidency of the company.

WESTINGHOUSE DIVIDEND UP.

Stock Breaks, Though Raised to 4 Per Cent. Basis.

In accordance with their promise to stockholders to increase the dividend on the common stock should business continue at the satisfactory rate, prevailing when dividends were resumed last Spring, the Directors of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company put the shares on a 4 per cent. basis. Last Spring dividends were resumed by the declaration of a 1 per cent. dividend to cover the first half of the year. It was generally expected that the stock would be put on a 4 per cent. basis as was done yesterday, but sanguine stockholders thought that the dividend declared this time would be 3 per cent. for the second half of the year, making 4 per cent. for 1912. To this extent the dividend increase was a disappointment, for the Directors merely declared a 1 per cent. dividend, saying that it was for the quarter and that it put the common stock on a 4 per cent. annual basis.

The Street's general disappointment in the failure to make the dividend 4 per cent. for 1912 was indicated in the slump of the company's stock in the market. It broke to 84, a drop of 4¼ points from Monday's close. Before the panic of 1907, when the company went into the hands of receivers, dividends had been paid on the common stock at the rate of 10 per cent. annually for three years. Before that disbursements had ranged from 6⅛ to 7¼ per cent. annually. Between October, 1907, and April, 1912, no dividends were paid on the common stock.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

On the advance in prices business on the Consolidated Stock Exchange enlarged very heavily. The sales for the five and a half hours of trading totaled 67,890 shares, which was more than double the total on Monday. There was evidence of an oversold condition in respect to a number of the prominent stocks, and the bears beat a rapid retreat.

Prices on the 9:30 o'clock opening call in most instances, reflected gains compared with closing quotations on Monday. Reading sold on the call at 166¼ and 166½, the latter being its final call price and representing an overnight advance of ½ of a point. The New York Stock Exchange opening price half an hour later was at the latter figures.

In the event that more than one surety company is offered as surety on said bonds, co-insurance only will be accepted.

Award, if made, will be made to the person or persons whose proposal shall be lowest in cost to the State for doing the work, and which shall comply with all provisions required to render it formal. FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Become Active and Strong—Sharp Advances in Leading Issues.

Business broadened considerably on the Stock Exchange yesterday to the accompaniment of an advance which carried the leading railroad stocks forward by an average of a full point with lesser improvement in the industrials. This statement of the case hardly presents fully, however, the change which the day brought in the market position, for in the leading issues the net gains varied from one to over three points. Such advances as 2⅛ in United States Steel and 3⅜ in Reading bespeak a decided change from the recent listlessness of the market. Underlying the movement of the market is the undoubted fact that much prosperity is inevitable in a year of such bountiful yields as those which the farms of the country have produced this year. At the same time the initiative in the advances which lifted the market from its indifferent movement of recent days seems to have been taken by a few of the larger stock market operators who found the moment propitious for a movement of the kind which they brought about yesterday. The existance of a short interest facilitated the advance but the buying was all the more effective in influencing prices by reason of the emphasis which a number of leaders in corporation affairs have within the last few days laid upon the excellence of the business situation and outlook. Trading was more active than on any day since the middle of August, when the high prices of the year were reached. The average at the close of the market yesterday of fifty leading issues evenly divided between railroads and industrials was 1.19 points under the year's highest figures touched on August 14.

It was natural enough that the attention of the Stock Exchange, in view of the energy with which the forward movement of the day was conducted, should be diverted from any thought of the money market, but the conditions which have lately made it plain that business will for weeks to come make large demands on the money market are not changed by yesterday's events on the Stock Exchange. The fact that the surplus reserve of institutions at this centre are at a low figure should be borne in mind if a correct estimate is to be formed of the extent to which the present money market can without much inconvenience finance activity on the Stock Exchange. However desirable a forward movement in security values it is even more important that the movement of the crops and the conduct of general business be provided for without any unnecessary competition for funds. Money will, of course, be attracted to this market in direct proportion to the extent to which more favorable terms are offered here than elsewhere but in the final analysis no advantage would be gained through a situation which would increase the cost of the money which must be employed to bring to market the bountiful crops which we are raising and to finance the current needs of business.

Our exports of agricultural products in August, the figures of which were published yesterday, showed much improvement over July. They were smaller than those of August last year but were a fair average for this month of the year. The figures for September will cover the beginning of the export of this year's surplus production of the farms, which will be much larger than last year's surplus, which was cut down by the deficient grain crops. This, of course, is one source from which our money market will be helped this season, but any immediate view of the monetary outlook must take count of the fact that we have as usual borrowed in Europe against the credits which will be created by our Fall exports. This has not been done to as large extent as in some years of the past but to a sufficient extent, nevertheless, to absorb the proceeds of our farm exports for some time to come.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Republic Preferred Dividend.

John A. Topping, President of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, was quoted yesterday as authority for the statement that the majority of the Republic's board had informally decided that in their opinion it would be wiser to defer action on the proposed resumption of dividends on the preferred stock until a later date. If business does not suffer a serious setback, the matter may be favorably passed upon at the November meeting. The policy of the company calls for a further strengthening of the cash surplus to provide against any future general disturbance to business.

Westinghouse Slumps.

There was a peculiar misunderstanding over the Westinghouse dividend announcement yesterday. It was six months ago that the previous dividend on the common was declared, and at that time 1 per cent. was voted. It had been expected that the board would declare 3 per cent. at yesterday's meeting, with an announcement calling attention to the fact that this made 4 per cent. for the year. Stated in this way, the public would not be led to believe that payment of a semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent. put the issue on a 6 per cent. basis. The board voted a payment of 1 per cent., and without waiting to learn anything further one of the ticker services announced that this put the stock on a 2 per cent. basis. Subsequently it was announced that the 1 per cent. was for the quarter, and that a 4 per cent. rate had been established. On the premature publication of the news the stock broke to 84, 4¼ points below Monday's close. It rallied to 85, but declined again, and closed at 83¾, a net loss of 4½ points.

Unusual Activity.

The disappointment felt by those who had looked for a 3 per cent. dividend on their Westinghouse resulted in a day of unusual activity for that issue, as the holders tried to get out with part of their profits. Nearly 27,000 shares of Westinghouse were unloaded on the market, making the electric company among the four most active stocks. It was explained by one of the Directors that the board had been of two minds as to the wisdom of paying 3 per cent. at this time, and the more conservative group prevailed. The company is said to be earning better than 13 per cent. on its common stock, but some of the Directors felt that they should wait until it had made further recovery from the troubles which resulted in the receivership five years ago. The common stock received 10 per cent. a year up to the panic of 1907, but since then has received only the single payment of 1 per cent., made last April. It is not unusual to see a decline in an issue following an increase in its dividend, but a slump like that seen in Westinghouse yesterday is a rare occurrence.

Good Stock Business.

Yesterday's session on the Stock Exchange was encouraging to the brokerage houses, most of which had enjoyed few big commissions lately. Total sales amounted to 590,000 shares, and this on a day of advancing prices. Wall Street had not seen so much activity since Aug. 14, and on that day sales were only 12,000 greater. Most brokers had come to believe that no amount of good news could disturb the lethargy with which what was once "the buying public" has regarded stocks this Summer.

⁂

Moffat Road Reorganization.

The agreement under which Newman Erb and associates acquired the Denver, Northwestern & Pacific from the noteholders has been signed, and only the formal foreclosure proceedings are necessary to complete the transaction. It was learned yesterday that among the syndicate associated with Mr. Erb were Fisher, Dunn & Co. of London, F. H. Prince and Co. of Boston, and Dr. F. S. Pearson. It is understood that syndicate members have taken most of $1,132,000 of new 5 per cent. bonds bought by Mr. Erb in consideration of getting stock control, and that the noteholders will take bonds at 85 in payment of the $3,500,000 still due them. The syndicate members paid that figure for their bonds. Mr. Erb is expected to become President of the road with its discharge from the receivership.

Moving the Peach Crop.

The peach season is short, and the fruit must be handled with dispatch to prevent damage claims, but some of the railroads find this class of traffic very profitable. The Southern Railway moved 5,334 cars of peaches from the Georgia district this year, an increase of 500 cars over 1911. The total movement of peaches for all lines reaching this territory was 7,139 carloads. Nearly all of the fruit comes to the Eastern markets. Of 4,993 cars actually originating within the State of Georgia this year 4,665 were handled in solid trainloads from Atlanta to Washington, only 319 cars going to Western points.

Wabash Still Running Behind.

The report of the Wabash Railroad for the past fiscal year will show a deficit after all charges of $2,864,000. The receivers' figures for fixed charges include interest on the defaulted first refunding and extension mortgage 4 per cent. bonds. The improvements now under way and to be paid for out of the proceeds of receivers' certificates are expected to make a considerable reduction in the current period's charges to rentals and hire of equipment, the latter item having been abnormally high because of the company's lack of equipment. Earnings are now running well ahead of last year's figures, and the management expects to be able to trim operating expenses at many points, so that a more creditable report is looked for at the close of this year.

METAL MARKET REPORTS.

At the Metal Exchange yesterday tin was weak and unsettled, receding 1½c. Copper was a shade lower in the asking price. Lead ruled steady, 100,000 pounds of October delivery sold at 5.00.

The closing bid and asked prices follow:

Stand. Copper—	Tuesday. Bid.	Asked.	Monday. Bid.	Asked.
Spot	17.25	17.50	17.25	17.75
September	17.25	17.50	17.25	17.75
October	17.25	17.50	17.25	17.50

Spelter	7.50	8.00	7.40	7.75
Tin	48.00	48.47½	49.50	49.75

The final table of prices obtained yesterday on the Metal Exchange in London for spot and future deliveries of copper and pig tin. These closing figures make comparison thus with Monday's last:

	Tuesday. £	s.	d.	Monday. £	s.	d.

The market ended weak. Spanish pig lead was unchanged, at £22 15s and spelter at £27. Cleveland warrants were up 9d, at 67s 10½d.

STOCKS OUT OF TOWN.

Sears-Roebuck Shares Score a Five-Point Advance on Chicago Exchange.

While the gains were less pronounced, most of the stocks traded in at other market centres showed strength in sympathy with the prices on the Stock Exchange, according to reports to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Pennsylvania Water and Power shares advanced 2 points on moderate trading at Baltimore. Houston Oil preferred recovered a point, and Consolidated Power preferred moved up 1 point. Trading was light.

The Boston list, with one or two exceptions, was quiet and practically unchanged. Wolverine was active and regained more of what it has lost recently, advancing to 81. There was some trading in North Butte, United States Smelting, Chino, Ray Consolidated, Old Colony Mining, and Steel common, but the movements of prices were for the most part in fractions. Fruit rights were in demand at 5⅜ to 5½.

American Shipbuilding and Sears-Roebuck were the features on the Chicago Stock Exchange, where prices generally were higher. The buying of Sears-Roebuck shares advanced the price nearly 5 points, the stock touching 211⅝, while American Shipbuilding common was lifted from 56 to 59⅝ through the bidding in of small lots by the interests that have been quietly picking up such stock as was offered since it sold at 45 a few weeks ago. People's Gas was in demand, advancing 1½ points.

Operators for the rise had things very much their own way in Philadelphia. Wide advances were established, not only in the arbitrage group, but also in several purely local issues, and most of these were maintained to the close. Short covering, of course, played a considerable part in the rise, but the two great facts that the crops are assured and that business is on the mend are having their inevitable effect upon public sentiment. To be sure, some recently strong specialties, such as Lehigh Valley Transit and Keystone Telephone shares, showed the effect of profit taking.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

Engagement of Gold for New York Has a Depressing Effect on the London Market.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Sept. 18.—The Times says in its City article to-day:

"Money was in some demand yesterday morning, calls for over £1,000,000 falling due, of which £900,000 was on New Zealand 3½ per cent. two-year debentures. The available supply was of course amply sufficient for all the requirements of the market. The rates for day-to-day advances and short fixtures were unaltered.

"On the whole, however, money again appeared somewhat less superabundant than it had been up to Monday, owing, perhaps, to the recent big gold exports having reduced bankers' balances a little.

"The discount market was quiet, with comparatively few bills offering and no disposition to bid for them.

"The market was somewhat puzzled by the announcement made in New York that £150,000 gold had been engaged in London for export to the United States. It was thought at first that the gold must be obained from one of two or three clearing banks which are understood to keep stocks of the metal, because nothing was known on Monday in the bullion market of any sales of South African bars to purchasers for American account. It appears, however, that out of a large portion of these bars believed and announced to be secured for 'the Continent' the above sum was really for the other side of the Atlantic.

"It is difficult to understand what is gained by attempts to conceal operations of this kind, which, from their nature, cannot be kept secret more than a few hours.

"Business was quiet in most departments of the Stock Exchange, and as a rule the tone was rather dull most of the day on realizations. Sales, however, were not considerable except in Peruvian Corporation securities, which were sold freely to secure profits. The final prices were generally above the worst, there being a slight but distinct rally late in the afternoon.

"Canadian Pacific shares were firm, especially after the house shut.

"The American market was inclined to harden at the finish.

"Consols gave way slightly. Home railway stocks were lower. Grand Trunk of Canada, most foreign railway issues, and rubber shares left off with small declines."

PARIS, Sept. 17.—The Bourse opened firm to-day. Realizing followed, and the market reacted and closed heavy.

Three per cent. rentes 91 francs 55 centimes for the account.

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—Prices were steady on the Boerse to-day.

Canadian Pacific was firm and higher on favorable crop prospects.

50 WORDS ABOUT ODD LOTS

No. 41.

WHEN 90% of the speculators lost money, men traded on 2 point margins in bucket-shops, or carried the 100 share lots they could not afford.

Conditions have radically changed with the elimination of the bucket-shops, and the development of Odd Lot facilities and such innovations as the Partial Payment Plan.

Send for Circular 13—"The Partial Payment Plan."

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company
AKRON, OHIO
Seven Per Cent. Cumulative Preferred Stock

Authorized and Issued.......... $5,000,000

Par value $100. Dividends payable quarterly, Jan. 1, April 1, July 1, and Oct. 1. Preferred as to dividends, and in the event of dissolution as to assets, over Common Stock. Redeemable in whole or in part after Jan. 1, 1915, at 120 and dividend.

Of the $5,000,000 Preferred Stock, $1,000,000 was issued to retire a like amount of Preferred Stock formerly outstanding, and the remaining $4,000,000 to provide additional working capital to meet the growing demands of the business. The Company has an authorized issue of $10,000,000 Common Stock, of which $5,000,000 is outstanding. The Company has no mortgage or funded indebtedness.

The salient features of this Preferred Stock are fully set forth in a letter from F. A. Seiberling, Esq., President of the Company, from which he summarizes as follows:

1. The Company is one of the largest manufacturers of pneumatic tires for automobiles, motorcycles, bicycles and aeroplane wheels, and has been unusually successful, not only in increasing its output, but also in maintaining a good percentage of profit on gross sales. Practically all of the pneumatic tires are the well-known "No-Rim-Cut Tires," for which there is a large and steadily increasing demand.
2. Total Net Assets (after liberal allowance for depreciation), $10,032,643.67, equivalent to 200.6% on the entire issue of Preferred Stock.
3. Net Quick Assets, $6,922,378.23, equivalent to 138.4% on the entire issue of Preferred Stock.
4. Reserves for crude rubber, depreciation, doubtful accounts and legal suspense, aggregating $1,000,302.19, to be regarded as extremely liberal.
5. Patents, trade marks and designs are carried on the books of the Company at the purely nominal sum of $1.00; whereas the royalties earned on patents alone for the fiscal year ended October 31, 1911, amounted to $55,909.27, and for the seven months ended May 31, 1912, to $32,739.38. Good will, which represents the expenditure of large sums of money and years of practical experience, has not been capitalized.
6. The Company covenants that Net Quick Assets equal to at least 125% of the total amount of Preferred Stock outstanding shall be at all times maintained, and if as the result of any annual audit or other audit an impairment of Net Quick Assets below this requirement is disclosed, no dividends shall be paid on the Common Stock until such impairment is remedied.
7. After January 1, 1915, the Company will retire $250,000 Preferred Stock on or before October 31, 1915, and not less than $250,000 Preferred Stock each year ending October 31 thereafter, until the whole issue has been retired. Preferred Stock may be purchased for account of the Sinking Fund in the open market at or below 120 and dividend, and if not so obtainable is to be called and redeemed at 120 and dividend, stock so purchased or called to be cancelled.
8. For the period from September 1, 1908, to May 31, 1912, average annual net profit available for dividends on the $5,000,000 Preferred Stock, $1,113,990.04, equivalent to more than three times the annual requirement. Net profits for seven months ended May 31, 1912, $1,087,632.47.
9. Gross sales for fiscal year ended October 31, 1911, $13,262,265.63, compared with $12,477,037.56 for seven months ended May 31, 1912, and I am confident from the present outlook that gross earnings for fiscal year ending October 31, 1912, will aggregate $25,000,000, while net profits available for dividends on the $5,000,000 Preferred Stock should approximate $2,500,000, equivalent to more than seven times the annual requirement.
10. Plant and equipment modern, well designed and maintained on a high standard of efficiency, with facilities ample to provide for the future growth of the business.

The books and accounts have been audited by Messrs. Barrow, Wade, Guthrie & Co., Certified Public Accountants, and the plant and equipment examined by Messrs. Day & Zimmerman, Engineers, Philadelphia. The legal proceedings have been approved by Messrs. Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, Counsellors at Law, Cleveland, Ohio.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Dimond Holdings in Penn. R. R. Block Reported Sold—Big Bronx Deals—$1,000,000 for Two Auto Buildings in Queens — Brooklyn and Long Island Sales.

The leading feature in the realty market yesterday was the reported sale of the Dimond holdings in the big block bounded by Sixth and Seventh Avenues, Thirty-second and Thirty-third Streets. The Gimbel store occupies the Sixth Avenue section of the block, covering half of its area, and the Seventh Avenue frontage is owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad, being opposite the station. Thomas Dimond controls the twenty-five foot lot at 128 West Thirty-third Street, and also 137 to 149 West Thirty-second Street, 150 feet front. Old buildings cover the plot, part of which have been used for the Dimond architecturel iron works.

Mr. Dimond a short time ago took title to 134 and 136 West Thirty-second Street, a plot 28 by 98.9, being opposite his earlier holdings on the north side of the street, but this parcel is not, it is said, included in the sale.

Rumor had it that the Pennsylvania road was the buyer, thus giving that company the westerly half of the block, 200 on the avenue by 400 feet deep, but this was denied. Mr. Dimond was out of town, and the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Realty Company, who are Mr. Dimond's realty agents, were non-communicative on the subject. The easterly line of the Dimond property abuts on the Gimbel store.

Operators Buy Harlem Flat.

The five-story flat, with stores, at 2,097 Eighth Avenue, being the northwest corner of 113th Street, has been sold by James E. Barry & Co. for the Placid Realty Company, John Katzman, President, to Ennis & Sinnott. The plot is 25.11 by 100 feet.

Bronx.

A builder has bought from Charles Newkirch a plot of ten lots on the northeast corner of Third Avenue and East 168th Street, having a frontage of 250 feet on Third Avenue and 100 feet on East 168th Street. The buyer will immediately improve the property by the erection of twenty stores. Kurz & Uren were the brokers in the transaction.

Clarkson P. Ryttenberg has sold for Mrs. S. J. W. Bent to L. Napoleon Levy a plot on the north side of 182d Street, 100 by 100, being 41 feet west of Southern Boulevard, opposite the entrance to Bronx Park. This, together with the corner owned by Mr. Levy, gives him a frontage on Southern Boulevard of 112 feet, and 141 feet on 182d Street. Mr. Levy has also bought a plot 50 by 100 on the north side of 182d Street, 191 feet west of Southern Boulevard, which will be improved with a five-story apartment.

Brooklyn.

The three-story brownstone dwelling at 750 Carroll Street, in the Park Slope section, has been sold by E. T. Newman, as broker, for H. Cranston to a client for occupancy.

The Burland Company has purchased from Isaac Levingson a plot 22.10 by 126 on the south side of Sterling Place, 227 feet west of Howard Street. The owners will erect a four-story tenement.

Long Island.

The Rickert-Finlay Realty Company has sold to M. H. Hellman, Manhattan, for his own occupancy, the nine-room stucco house on the west side of Eighteenth Street, 80 feet south of Depot Place, Broadway, Flushing.

The Seidel Realty Company has sold for a builder to Paul Lettkau a three-story brick tenement on Sixth Avenue, just south of Flushing Avenue, in Long Island City.

Leases.

The Cross & Brown Company have leased the store at 865 Broadway for William H. Peck to F. C. Gevin.

Pease & Elliman have leased space at 44 West Thirty-ninth Street to John W. Clawson and McBurney Underwood, and in the Aeolian Building, 25 to 29 West Forty-second Street, to H. V. Horton, L. R. Stoddard, and William P. Chase.

Van Vliet & Place have leased the store and building at 407 West Street for James Piper; the house, 50 Barrow Street, to John McDonald, and the house, 362 West Twelfth Street, to William Baird.

Gibbs & Kirby report that they have rented all of the sixty apartments in the new twelve-story Clearfield apartment house, on the southeast corner of Riverside Drive and 103d Street.

The Gaffney Real Estate Company has leased at 637 Fifth Avenue an apartment to Morris H. Rothschild.

Pease & Elliman, in conjunction with E. S. & S. F. Voss, have rented for Dr. J. H. Claiborne his house in Woodmere, L. I., to Frank B. Porter, Jr.

$1,000,000 for Auto Plants in Queens.

Two buildings for automobile uses, one to cost $600,000 and the other $400,000 exclusive of the value of the land, were started yesterday in Long Island City. The $600,000 building is to be erected by the General Vehicle Company on Borden and Starr Avenues and will form a unit of an extensive plant. It will be six stories high.

On a site covering 93,000 square feet the Goodyear Rubber Tire Company began work on a building to cost $400,000, which will have a frontage of 200 feet on Jackson Avenue and extend down Hunnywell Street, 100 feet. It will be six stories high and will be the distributing point for the Goodyear products for the Eastern States district.

Hotel for Christian Workers.

Plans were filed yesterday for a seven-story private hotel for the New York City Mission and Tract Society, of which Adolphus F. Schauffler is President. It will be located on the northwest corner of Gramercy Park West and Twentieth Street, having a frontage of 52.6 feet and a depth of 110 feet. The façade will be brick with limestone and granite trimmings. It will be known as the Christian Workers' Home. There will be a pergola on the roof. The building will be equipped with one passenger and one freight elevator, and according to the estimate of the architect, Lansing C. Holden, will cost $100,000.

Realty Notes.

Title was taken yesterday by the New York & Chicago Construction Company to the plot, 50 by 100, at 133 and 135 West Twenty-fifth Street, and the new owners will immediately begin work on a twelve-story loft on the site. The plot was recently purchased from the Hayward estate through the Duross Company. Plans for the new structure to cost $275,000 were filed yesterday. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has made a loan of $200,000.

The North Side Board of Trade will be represented at the hearing before the Public Service Commission to-morrow to protest against the application of the Third Avenue Railroad Company to acquire the balance of stock of the New York City Interborough Railroad Company. It is feared that if the application is granted the three-cent transfer fare to and from the Subway and elevated systems will be abolished.

IT'S FOLLY NOT TO HAVE A BUNGALOW HOME

Figure it any way you choose, a bungalow at Red Bank Estates can't help but be a saving to you.

If you live in it but three months in the year you will still have practiced an economy.

And here's why.

You will easily pay at least $250 for Summer accommodations out of town.

$250 represents your yearly payments on a beautiful California bungalow at Red Bank Estates.

You can choose your own plans—have the bungalow built according to your own taste—and at actual cost of construction.

Moreover, financing of building operations will be undertaken by the Company.

All required of you is the most moderate monthly payments. $250 a year covers everything.

Red Bank Estates

Now, you can readily see why it is folly not to have a home here where seashore and country are so ideally combined, instead of a temporary living place.

Most people propose making Red Bank Estates their year-round home. And why shouldn't they?

The combined service of the New Jersey Central and Pennsylvania Railroads affords commuters trains every ten to fifteen minutes.

And every city convenience is here to be enjoyed with all that makes country living worth while.

Present prices and terms are so low as to make of this property a real opportunity for the home-seeker.

EDUCATION NOTES.

A special meeting of the Board of Education will be held this afternoon. The most important matter to be considered is the annual budget estimate. A large number of items that were not taken up at last Wednesday's meeting are also on the schedule for to-day.

The American Civic Alliance of 165 Broadway has sent a memorial to the Board of Education requesting that public school buildings be made available for "Neighborhood Meetings" between citizens and their representatives of Federal, State, and municipal districts, thereby providing facilities for meeting their constituents, to report on policies and specific measures of interest to citizens generally, and to voters in particular. The memorial suggests that these meetings be convened under the auspices of civic associations, which shall be responsible for the good order and proper conduct of their proceedings.

"If it be said," the memorial reads, "that this is not strictly educational work we beg to demur that it is in fact one of the most practical forms of educational work, because of the fact that for the adult citizen discussion and contact with public officers or with fellow-citizens in an orderly meeting is one of the most educative of processes known to republics, and on this ground we appeal to you to give this proposed experiment a trial in the hope that it may vindicate itself, as a part of wisdom for you as well as for us."

Melvin C. Opperman of 540 South Sixth Avenue, Mount Vernon, a teacher in Public School 37, 145th Street, west of Willis Avenue, the Bronx, has brought suit to compel City Supt. Maxwell to place his name on the eligible list for Principal's license. It is alleged that some time ago Mr. Opperman took the examination for Principal's license held by the Board of Examiners, but did not succeed in obtaining a high enough rating to have his name go on the eligible list. He, however, passed successfully the examination held by State Commissioner Draper.

Mr. Opperman's contention is that as he holds a State education certificate issued at Albany he has a general license to teach. The matter has been placed in the hands of Corporation Counsel Watson, who will defend City Supt. Maxwell at the hearing. It is a case of much interest to the public school teachers of the State, because if Mr. Opperman should be successful it would open the road for all holders of State licenses to descend upon this city from every part of the State and demand that their names be placed on eligible lists. This would be decidedly unfair to the New York teachers, who not only have to pass an examination successfully, but are even then only granted a temporary license, which has to be renewed at the end of the first and of the second year, after satisfactory service, before Dr. Maxwell grants a permanent license.

FRANZ MENSCHIK IN WITH DEATH PROOFS

To Aid Szabo Murder Prosecution as Well as Ousting of Gibson as Executor.

CASH MUST BE PRODUCED

Hearing Won't Be Postponed if Estate Isn't Intact, Says Surrogate—Murder Hearing to Go Over.

Franz Menschik, the Viennese postal clerk, brother of Mrs. Rosina Szabo, who met death on Greenwood Lake on July 16 while boating with Burton W. Gibson, the lawyer now charged with her murder, arrived yesterday on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II. He went at once from the steamship pier in Hoboken to the Austro-Hungarian Consulate at 24 State Street. There he recognized a picture of Mrs. Szabo as that of his sister. He also told something of the history of his family and the coming to America of his sister to join here and marry Bila Szabo, the former Austrian cavalry officer.

"I am 26 years old," he said, "and so I was young when my sister left home to come to America and marry Szabo. I can remember her as a very pretty girl and a great favorite with her five brothers and her three sisters.

"My father was Franz Menschik, the keeper of an inn at Perau, Mähren. There were nine children, and of my four sisters Rosina was the third, the eldest being Marie. Except for Rosina we are all living now. I do not remember ever having seen Szabo. He was not a count, but he was well connected, and his title was ritter, which means a knight.

Mother Spoke Often of Her.

"My mother died on Feb. 2, 1910. She often spoke of her daughter in America, especially in the last years of her life. Myself and my sisters and brothers often spoke of Rosina, and speculated on how she and her husband were getting along over here."

Menschik told how the letter written by George Teichmann of 330 West Fifty-fifth Street, the friend of his sister's, was received in May. This leter was written at Mrs. Szabo's request, after she had received word of the family through an inquiry to the Chief of Police at Vienna. Mrs. Szabo was at that time planning to return to her native land to live out the remainder of her life on the $10,000 she had saved. Her brother says that nothing was said of Gibson or of a will. The last word they had from her was a postal card written on July 5, two weeks before she met death.

Surrogate Fowler agreed yesterday to postpone the hearing of the petition to remove Gibson as executor of Mrs. Szabo's will, until a date later than Sept. 24, provided the accused lawyer would tell him the whereabouts of the $7,100 of the estate withdrawn from banks and now unaccounted for.

Charles Goldzier represented Gibson, but, it was explained, not as his counsel, for the lawyer believed that his hearing at Goshen, N. Y., would result in his freedom, and that he would be able to appear in court to defend his own case. T. T. Wells represented the Austro-Hungarian Consul General, and with him was Arpad A. Kremer, counsel for the consulate.

Argument for Postponement.

Mr. Goldzier in arguing for the postponement, pointed out that the great drawback was the absence of Gibson, who, he said, was confident of being freed at Goshen. He said that Gibson had not even a lawyer in the murder case, and that no action should be taken in the will case until he has a lawyer.

Mr. Wells opposed an adjournment. He told of the disapearance of $7,100 of the estate, and said that the injunction served on Gibson preventing a disposition of the estate affects only such part of it as has been discovered.

"I do not see that the request for an adjournment is so unusual," said the Surrogate. "Here is a man in jail accused of murder, and he expects to be free on Sept. 24 and be able to appear to oppose the petition. I doubt very much that this man could give a bond. He is surely innocent until he is proved guilty."

The Surrogate did not know then that the Goshen hearing had been postponed.

The reason the Surrogate agreed upon a preliminary confidential accounting is, it is said, because it is feared by Gibson that the information disclosed might be of use to the prosecution in the fight he is making to clear himself of the charge of murder.

After several hours of conference with Acting Consul General Kirchknopf, Mr. Kremer, and Franz Menschik, Dr. Fischerauer, the Vice Consul, left on a late afternoon train for Middletown, N. Y., there to confer with District Attorney Rogers. Mr. Rogers requested Dr. Fisherauer to visit him, and it is believed that they will go over the documents which are the result of the first investigation into the death of Mrs. Szabo and the conduct of her affairs.

Gibson has placed District Attorney Rogers in a peculiar position. Judge Royce, before whom he was arraigned, told Gibson that as he had no lawyer he would be provided with process servers.

Gibson has now provided the District Attorney with a long list of persons he wants subpoenaed. Some of these are described indefinitely as the man with dark hair and blue eyes, wearing a straw hat and light trousers, who was at such and such a place. To serve such subpoenas would take the time of the entire county staff and result in great expense.

GIBSON HEARING GOES OVER.

Examination Postponed Till Sept. 30—Rogers Not Engaged for Defense.

Special to The New York Times.

GOSHEN, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Mrs. Burton W. Gibson alighted from the Erie train that arrived at Goshen at 10:03 o'clock this morning, and walked to the Court House, where she was admitted to see her husband, accused of the murder of Mrs. Szabo. Mrs. Gibson was chatting with her husband in his cell, when a large automobile stopped in front of the Court House. The car contained Special County Judge Royce and District Attorney Rogers both of Middletown. The party went to the county courtroom, and Gibson was arraigned. Mrs. Gibson accompanied her husband to the courtroom. She was the only woman present at the hearing. Mrs. Gibson was calm and composed during the hearing. Addressing Gibson, Judge Royce said:

"Mr. Gibson, you have a right to counsel at every stage of the proceedings."

"I waived the right," Gibson replied, "to counsel for the time being."

"I've an engagement for Sept. 24, 25, and 26," Judge Royce said, "and I thought this hearing might be adjourned until some future date."

District Attorney Rogers, who sat at the right of Gibson, then rose and made application to have the hearing adjourned until Sept. 28. Gibson, who was standing, said he did not like to interfere with any engagement of the court, but he thought as the examination would probably take three or four days, it ought to start on a Monday. The District Attorney then asked that the examination be postponed until Monday, Sept. 30. Gibson replied that it was satisfactory to him, and it was so ordered.

District Attorney Rogers was asked by the newspaper men if it were true, as published in some of the New York papers this morning, that Gibson had prepared a list of nearly sixty witnesses for the examination. Mr. Rogers said that he did not think this was so, but would not be quoted. Mr. Rogers also pronounced as false the report that he had been engaged to take Gibson's case at the conclusion of his term of office on Jan. 1.

WAITERS MAY STRIKE AGAIN.

Leaders Taking In Money and Talk of What They Can Do.

On the second floor of a roomy brownstone house at 109 West Thirty-eighth Street there stands a 10,000-pound safe and a score of men who act as guardians during the daytime and who wait on hotel and restaurant tables at night declare that the safe "holds thousands of dollars." It is the safe of the International Hotel Workers' Union, which recently carried into effect a semi-successful strike against the hotels of the city, and this safe now holds, according to its guardians, the power to levy another waiters' strike, such as the world has never seen.

"Isn't it money that makes the mare go?" declared J. Elster, chief organizer and business representative of the waiters' union. "You bet," he said, pointing to the large safe, "and it is money which makes a strike go, too. And we've got the money."

When asked to enlarge on this intimation that another waiters' strike, better timed and financed than the last one, was about to be inflicted on the hotel managers of the city, Mr. Elster eschewed directness and spoke in circles. He would neither deny nor affirm the rumor that the intended strike would take the city like a whirlwind on the coming election night. He simply kept his finger pointed to the main article of furniture in his office chamber, the large safe, and then said:

"Money talks, so what's the use of me talking."

C. N. Wade, representing Frederick Reed, President of the Hotel Association of the city, said that the hotel men were not worried. He said that so far as he could learn the hotel workers were all satisfied and had no grievances which would make them support any kind of a general strike.

NO HITCH IN SUBWAY PLANS.

Report That Interborough Was Holding Back Doubly Denied.

A report was published yesterday that a hitch had occurred in the negotiations between the Interborough and the Public Service Commission with regard to the operating contract for the new subways. The Interborough, it was said, would insist, before executing the contract, on all the routes named in it being fully legalized, and as that was likely to be a lengthy process in two instances the final operation of the subways would be postponed.

The routes mentioned were the Park Place-William Street line through the financial district to Brooklyn, and the Seventh Avenue extension from Times Square to the Battery. It is true that neither of these lines has yet been fully adopted, but nothing was known last night at the offices of the commission of any refusal of the Interborough to go on with the arrangements before the legal steps necessary for their adoption had been taken.

The William Street route has met with opposition from the property owners and meetings have been held at the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company to organize the owners of adjacent property before a subway line could be constructed. The extension of the Seventh Avenue line is not yet authorized, because it depends on the extension of the avenue itself, and the city has not yet completed arrangements for opening the street. If the William Street owners continue to fight the new subway the Public Service Commission will be forced to go to the Appellate Division for the appointment of a condemnation commission, but it is not believed that in any case the adoption of these two routes will be delayed.

Harmsworth Cup Off for London.

The Harmsworth Motor Cup was taken to London to-day on the Lusitania by A. J. Stone of the Royal Motor Yacht Club. He called at the Automobile Club in a taxicab at 11 o'clock last night, and drove to the Cunard pier, where it was handed over to the care of Purser Lancaster for safe keeping on the voyage.

STOLEN ANTIQUES OFFERED TO DONOR

Percy J. Higgs Recognized Silver as His Wedding Gift to Alfred C. Bossom, Architect.

THIEF GOT $150 LOAN ON IT

And Pawnbroker's Effort to Dispose of the Set Disclosed That Owner's Town House Had Been Robbed.

Vice President Higgs of the A. J. Crawford Company, telephoned on Saturday from the company's antique store at 253 Fifth Avenue, to Alfred C. Bossom, the architect of 365 Fifth Avenue. Very delicately he asked Mr. Bossom if he had ever disposed of the rare set of knives and forks with the Crown Derby handles which Mr. Higgs had given to him at the time of his marriage.

"Disposed of it!" repeated Mr. Bossom in astonishment. "I should think not. We prize it too much for that. It is safely under lock and key at home, now."

"Well," said Mr. Higgs, "I just thought I'd ask. That set is here in the store now. It has just been offered to us for sale.

"Oh, yes, I know well enough that it is the same set, for there isn't another like it in the world," he went on in answer to his friend's wondering expostulation. "That set with the Crown Derby handles was fashioned in 1790 for the household of the Earl of Essex, and I would know it if I saw it on sale in Bombay."

Mr. Bossom asked for a few moments' time to investigate, and taking a cab he hurried to his Winter home at 569 Park Avenue, which had been closed for the Summer months while the Bossoms went to their place in White Plains. It did not take long for him to learn that the house had been entered by burglars, and that the prized set of knives and forks was missing.

Then he got the story from Mr. Higgs. He learned that a man from Miller's Louis XIV. Antique Shop next door had brought in the set, after it had been taken into their store, from a Mr. Krauss's pawnshop in Seventh Avenue. The Krauss representative had been informed at Miller's that they were not buying anything, and the man with the ware to dispose of was shown on to the Crawford shop next door.

At the Miller shop yesterday it was learned that the men in charge had not considered purchasing the set and had passed on the man who had it in his possession to the dealers next door just as a courtesy and not because they had any interest in it at all.

At Krauss's it was learned that some weeks ago a young man of good address and excellent appearance had brought the set in with the explanation that he was leaving for England and that in the break-up of his establishment he wished to dispose of the set of knives and forks for which he foresaw no further use. Mr. Krauss, while not expert in judging antiques, saw there was exceptional value in the set, and gave the young man $150 on it. It was not redeemed, and then he sent it to appreciative Fifth Avenue to have it valued.

Mr. Bossom was out of town last evening, and it could not be learned how much beyond the set had been taken from his Park Avenue home.

TWO IN FOSDICK'S PLACE.

Mahoney and Rice Named for Commissioners of Accounts.

Jeremiah T. Mahoney, who was a member of the Board of Education, and Harry M. Rice, were yesterday appointed Commissioners of Accounts by Mayor Gaynor, to succeed Raymond B. Fosdick, who resigned on Aug. 31. Since Mr. Fosdick's resignation Mr. Rice has been acting Commissioner. The law provides for a double-headed commission, although Fosdick was permitted to run the commission alone. Rice's appointment was recommended by Fosdick. The Mayor in announcing the appointments made public this letter to Mr. Mahoney:

Mayor's Office, Sept. 17, 1912.

Dear Mr. Mahoney—Your experience as Chief of the Division of Law and Adjustment of Claims in the Controller's office particularly fits you for the office of Commissioner of Accounts. You also rendered most excellent service in winding up the old Aqueduct Commission when I appointed you one of the Commissioners. I am therefore appointing you Commissioner of Accounts. You have not sought the office. It comes to you.

Sincerely yours, W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

The Mayor also sent this letter to Mr. Rice:

Mayor's Office, Sept. 17, 1912.

Dear Mr. Rice—You have rendered such good services in your present office of Commissioner of Accounts that I now take great pleasure in promoting you to be a Commissioner of Accounts. You are entitled to the promotion. Sincerely yours,

W. J. GAYNOR, Mayor.

The Mayor appointed Henry J. Bigham, a lawyer of 64 Wall Street, as a member of the Board of Education to succeed Mr. Mahoney. He is a member of the firm of Harrington, Bigham & Engler, admiralty lawyers. He is a nephew of Lord Mersey, former President of the Probate and Admiralty Court of England.

PENNELL SAW BEAUTY OF PANAMA CANAL

Artist Caught More Than an Impression of the Bigness of the Undertaking.

TIMES TO HAVE HIS PICTURES

Ten Special Reproductions with Sunday's Issue—Have Great Historic Value, Says His Publisher.

In the Pictorial Review of next SUNDAY'S TIMES there will be ten direct reproductions printed on specially glazed paper of the Panama lithographs drawn by Joseph Pennell, the etcher, illustrator, and author. Commenting on the Panama lithographs of Pennell, Fitz Roy Carrington, member of the firm of Frederick Keppel & Co., for many years publishers of Pennell's work, had this to say:

"Joseph Pennell in his Panama lithographs has preserved for all who come after us a record of the greatest work of modern times—a triumph of American engineering, recorded in a series of masterpieces.

"Many had seen and written of the 'Big Ditch,' but it remained for Mr. Pennell to see it through new eyes, see in it not only size, but beauty—a new beauty which, until he recorded it, had remained hidden.

"These lithographs, drawn on the spot, and on lithograph transfer paper, preserve in a manner possible to no other medium all the joyousness of work, the spontaneity of first impression.

"He has been accused of seeing his subjects through a haze of temperament.

"'I hope I do,' he writes. 'I have no desire to pose as an artless artist or a pitiful photographer.'

"The compliment on the Panama lithographs which he values most is that the engineers have assured him that his drawings 'would work.'

"The already filling lake will obliterate in a few months much of that which Mr. Pennell has seen and drawn, and these lithographs will then be the sole adequate record of subjects which never can be seen again. Historically they are of prime importance; pictorially they are the latest of a long series of artistic triumphs—and they, like the canal itself, are the work of an American."

The late Frederick Keppel wrote a number of appreciative criticisms of the work of Pennell, as well as several sketches of the artist himself. As an illustrator Pennell was regarded by Mr. Keppel as unsurpassed for appropriateness as contrasted with irrelevancy. Each of his pictures threw for Mr. Keppel a truer light on the text. Furthermore, with his knowledge of the processes of reproduction, Pennell always has made his drawings to the end that they might print well in any magazine or book.

A complete collection of his Panama lithographs will be on exhibition from Sept. 19 to Oct. 12 in the art gallery of Frederick Keppel & Co., 4 East Thirty-ninth Street.

Leeds's Power Boat Is Safe.

BOSTON Mass., Sept. 17.—Warner M. Leeds's power boat Duchess, which has been reported missing, is safe in Winter quarters at Colters Yard, Dorchester. She arrived here on Friday, and Capt. Isaac B. Pierce, her commander, had no knowledge that anxiety was felt for her safety. About $30,000 worth of silverware and furniture was taken ashore at Bar Harbor before she left.

HILL PLEADS FOR RAILROADS.

Must Be Treated Fairer So They Can Provide Better Facilities.

The country's need of increased railway facilities, which, he says, we cannot expect to get without fairer treatment of the railroads, is emphasized by James J. Hill in a letter received yesterday by the Stock Exchange house of J. S. Bache & Co. In their weekly summary of the business situation the firm had made an appeal for more liberal treatment of the railroads and justifying higher rates. J. J. Hill's letter read:

Sept. 12, 1912.

Messrs. J. S. Bach & Co., 42 Broadway, New York City:

Dear Sirs: I have received and read with interest the copy of The Bache Review forwarded by you. The economic ideas and information contained in it are valuable, and of a kind that very much need constant presentation to the public.

This country needs more railroad facilities. The railroads need not only more tracks and cars, but more and larger terminals. Whenever business is good there is an actual freight blockade in New York City, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, St. Louis—in fact in every one of the large centres of the country. However well equipped otherwise, the railways cannot render the service that the country requires until enlarged terminals are created.

The capital for these improvements can be obtained only when the railroads are fairly and justly treated. It will probably require some industrial distress, as well as a campaign of education to secure a recognition of these facts and an acceptance of the sound principles set forth in your publication. Meantime you are doing good work in securing for them as wide a circulation as possible. Yours truly,

JAMES J. HILL.

J. J. Hill is in St. Paul, where he celebrated his seventy-fourth birthday on Monday.
